NEGRO SHOT AND COMRADE CAUGHT IN STORE HOLDUP

Police Called by Passerby Interrupt Robbers at Blue Valley Creamery, 2722 Pine Street.

ONE SURRENDERS OTHER OPENS FIRE

Wounded Man Received at Hospital Six Minutes After First Alarm Is Given.

A butter salesman glanced in a dusty window of the Blue Valley Creamery Co. office, 2722 Pine street, yesterday morning on his way to work. Results were that two Negro robbers failed in a holdup, one being shot and seriously wounded and the other captured; 11 office employes, including eight women, got the thrill of a lifetime and five police officers earned the praise of their superiors.

The salesman, L. E. Jerman, parked his automobile at the curb and climbed out. As he closed the door of his machine, he glanced at the broad office window and saw, not eight industrious young women at their desks, but eight frightened young women standing with hands raised in a corner.

"I knew immediately it was a holdup," Jerman related afterwards, "and I ran for all I was worth to the nearest telephone at the Mack Truck Co. in the next block. I burst in and yelled to the operator to call the police. Then I waited at the corner for them to come."

Quick Work by Police.

The message, "They're holding up the Blue Valley Creamery" was telephoned to Police Headquarters downtown at 9:35. Patrolman Harry Marsau, headquarters dispatcher, relayed the alarm to Capt. Albert Wetzel at Laclede Avenue Station, two and one-half blocks from the creamery. Wetzel with three detectives and a uniformed policeman, in a police car, raced to the scene.

When the policemen entered the office with drawn revolvers, the robbers were about to leave. One robber, near the entrance, was pocketing his pistol and turning from the office, and the other, midway in the room and pistol in hand, was striding toward the door. The women employes were huddled in one corner and three men were standing helpless in another.

The robber near the door promptly raised his hands and his weapon was taken from him. The other stopped in his tracks and aimed his pistol, pressing the trigger twice. One bullet whistled past Capt. Wetzel, Patrolman Anthony Junkel and Detective Jesse Miller, who were in the lead, and they answered with eight shots. The Negro fell, three bullets having entered his body, the others tearing splinters from the office desks and walls.

One In Hospital, One In Cell.

At 9:41, six minutes after the alarm was received, Orion Moore, 23 years old, an automobile mechanic, of 4171 West Belle place, was received at City Hospital No. 2, five blocks from the creamery, with two bullets in the abdomen and a wound in the head, and his companion, Clyde A. Wheeler, 20, a waiter, was a prisoner at Laclede Station.

Miss Mildred Williamson, telephone operator and information clerk, was the first to see the robbers when they entered the office. Pushing through a low gate Moore shouted to the office workers: "We're not going to hurt anybody. Stick 'em up and turn around."

Wheeler stood beside Miss Williamson with the entire office in view while Moore ordered Phillip Luedde, office manager; Fred Joseph, bookkeeper, and Joseph Whitmore, a buyer, into one corner and the women into another. When money was demanded, Luedde led the robber to his private office at the corner of the room and handed over $331 in cash.

Cramming the money into a coat pocket, Moore warned the group not to telephone for the police for five minutes. He started toward his companion and the police burst in. Capt. Wetzel reported that none of the employes was within range when the shots were fired, but the police men told a reporter that it seemed as if the bullets were coming straight at them.

Wheeler Confesses.

Wheeler, in a confession, told police the robbery was Moore's idea. They met last summer at a barber school in Iowa City, Ia., he said, and resumed the acquaintance

Pedestrians Ignore Jaywalking Ordinance

Traffic Policemen, for Most Part, Are Too Busy to Try to Enforce It at Crowded Corners.

Faced with the double difficulty of directing automobile traffic and enforcing the new anti-jay walking ordinance which went into effect Friday as a 90-day experiment, traffic policemen on busy downtown intersections appeared yesterday to be about ready to change over to something easier. The business of educating pedestrians to cross at crossings and wait for the policeman's signal seemed definitely assured of a high place among futile occupations.

During the midday rush at the more congested corners there was hardly any evidence of a jay-walking ordinance. A few persons waited, but most of them didn't. The crowds swarmed across with signals for or against them, all depending on what breaks occurred in the stream of automobiles at the moment. They scarcely looked at the policeman and he scarcely looked at them. Sometimes it seemed he was looking the other way—intentionally. If, as occurred in isolated instances, he did feel it was necessary to reprimand somebody, he usually did it with a grin and then looked sheepish.

At Seventh and Olive streets two policemen were on duty during the noon hour. One stood in the intersection directing automobile traffic. The other, stationed on the northeast corner, attempted good-naturedly to restrain the crowds with his arms, meanwhile putting up with a good deal of banter. But even with a policeman devoting full attention to one of the four crossings, the pedestrians pushed into the street from both sides until a traffic lane only one car wide was left clear.

The relief policemen appeared in some cases to take their new educational tasks more seriously than did the regulars. One at Eleventh and Olive was observed several times to halt pedestrians after they had passed the middle of the street and order them back, making three crossings necessary instead of one. Twice within 10 minutes, persons thus halted were seen to escape only by a narrow margin from being struck by approaching automobiles. Picking their way across with attention fastened on traffic, they had stopped stock still in the path of machines when the policeman blew his whistle and shouted "Hey!"

Capt. J. Y. Goodin of the police traffic bureau said traffic policemen have been instructed to warn pedestrians of the new ordinance, but to make no arrests until further orders. Capt. Goodin declared it would be a slow and tedious process because the policeman is busy most of the time with the automobile traffic.

"In order to enforce the ordinance rigidly," he declared, "it would be necessary to have five policemen at each intersection. This cannot be done because we haven't the men."

MAN KILLED BY AUTO WHICH DOES NOT STOP

Everett Edwards Dragged 30 Feet by Machine at Taylor and Easton.

Everett Edwards, 69 years old, of 4660A Evans avenue, was killed by a speeding automobile at Taylor and Easton avenues early today. The machine, a red Chevrolet, dragged him 30 feet and did not stop.

Edwards was crossing from the north to the south side of Easton avenue, about fifteen feet west of Taylor, when the car bore down upon him. The force of the impact hurled him into the air above the machine's hood. Some portion of his clothing was caught, possibly by a sidelight or door handle, and the car carried him thirty feet before his body was thrown to the street.

NEW YORK STOCKS REGAIN ABOUT ONE-THIRD OF LOSS

Sharp Slump Following Raising of Rediscount Rate Succeeded by Rally.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—Stock prices on the New York Stock Exchange and other leading security markets showed considerable recuperative power today, after the sharp decline following the increase in the New York Federal Reserve Bank's rediscount rate to 6 from 5 per cent.

Leading stocks generally regained about one-third of yesterday's losses.

That the traders remained somewhat stunned was indicated by the comparatively light volume of trading today. The total sales of 1,478,450 shares were among the smallest Saturday turnovers of the year.

Most leading stocks rallied $2 to $10, while an extreme gain of $20.25 was recorded by Auburn Auto, which lost $19.75 yesterday.

ESCAPE PLOT FAILS AT MISSOURI PRISON

Pistol Found in Convict's Possession — Three in Solitary Cells.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Aug. 10.—Missouri Penitentiary officials today announced they had discovered and frustrated a plot for a concerted effort to escape by several convicts. An automatic pistol was found in the possession of Charles Bunch, 29 years old, a Bates County convict serving a 25-year sentence for robbery, Warden Rudolph said.

Bunch and two other convicts whose names were withheld were placed in solitary confinement pending further investigation.

Rudolph said the information that a pistol was in Bunch's possession was received from Victor Perryman, Negro, serving 13 years from Platte County for burglary and larceny.

Guards made a search late yesterday and found the pistol hidden about a bench at which Bunch was working in one of the factories.

Bunch and Perryman told conflicting stories, the Warden said. Bunch said the pistol had been given him by Perryman two or three days ago. Perryman said it had been given him last Sunday by Bunch to keep temporarily, with the information it was to be used in an attempt at escape, and that he had kept it in his cell several days and then returned it to Bunch. Perryman said he had refused to join in the plans for an escape.

Bunch denied ever having had the pistol before Perryman gave it to him.

Warden Rudolph said he had learned several convicts were planning to make an attempt to escape by scaling the wall near one of the guard towers on the east side of the prison. The pistol was to be used to shoot the tower guards, he said.

BRAZILIAN NAVAL FLYER DROWNS IN PENSACOLA BAY

Trapped in Cabin of Training Ship When It Crashes; Body Not Recovered.

By the Associated Press.

PENSACOLA, Fla., Aug. 10.—Lieut. H. C. Cardeiro-Sarius, Brazilian Navy flyer, was drowned today when his plane plunged into Pensacola Bay, near Fort Barrancas while on a training flight.

Leaving the naval air station here on a practice cruise, the plane was seen to go out of control and plunge into the water. The ship was recovered tonight bu the body was not found.

Naval officials said they thought the aviator was seriously injured when his airplane crashed and was drowned before he could extricate himself.

Although a qualified aviator in the Brazilian Navy, Lieut. Cardiero-Sarius was granted dispensation through the Navy Department to come here to take the training course offered at the naval station. He arrived last July 4 and had almost completed the course.

FIRE INSURANCE FIRMS URGED TO RESIST THE STATE

Chicago Rating Body Recommends Opposition to Attempt to Collect Refunds Prior to Feb. 1, '28

GOVERNOR SAYS FIGHT WILL GO ON

Companies Offer to Repay Overcharges for Last Year and Half, Propose to Keep $8,000,000.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Aug. 10.—Resistance by the stock fire insurance companies of any action by the State of Missouri to compel repayment of excess premiums they collected prior to Feb. 1, 1928, which the companies claim is the effective date of a 10 per cent rate reduction ordered by the State in 1922, has been recommended by the Subscribers' Actuarial Committee of Chicago, with which all of the companies are affiliated, it was learned today.

Opportunity for such resistance undoubtedly will arise as Gov. Caulfield, in commenting on the recommendation this afternoon, said "the State most certainly will continue its efforts to collect the excess premiums collected by the companies from 1922 to Feb. 1, 1928."

Governor Holds Conference.

The Governor conferred in his office late today with Insurance Superintendent Thompson, his deputy, Joseph F. Holland, and the Insurance Department's special counsel, John T. Barker and Floyd Jacobs. No further plan of action was announced, and it was stated that the time was given to an interchange of information and suggestions.

Having lost on virtually every point in the nearly seven years of litigation over the State Insurance Department's reduction order of Nov. 15, 1922, the companies, as has been told, yesterday notified the department they would put the reduction into effect immediately, and would make it retroactive to Feb. 19, 1928.

Through that move the companies are offering the Missouri policyholders refunds of something less than $4,000,000 of the $12,000,000 to $15,000,000 in overcharges exacted from the policyholders since Nov. 15, 1922, and propose to keep the remaining $8,000,000 or more.

A circular letter recommending a course of action has been sent to the companies, under date of Aug. 8, by the Subscribers' Actuarial Committee, 222 West Adams street, Chicago. A copy was sent to the State Insurance Department. Insurance Superintendent Thompson said he understood the committee was a central rating organization with which all of the companies involved were affiliated.

"We Advise Resistance."

"The present indications are that the State of Missouri will pursue their claims asserted under the rate order for the period prior to Feb. 1, 1928, and if they persist in that action we advise resistance," the committee's letter stated. "We have not given up hope that the State may yet abandon the course which we regard as unfair. If compelled to carry the matter through the courts, the committee recommends that these claims be resisted by every lawful means."

The 191 companies are in two classes, as to the legal question of refunds. One group of 114 companies signed a stipulation with the insurance department as to the manner in which the original contest of the reduction, in the State courts, should be conducted. It included agreements that the reduction, if finally sustained, should apply alike to all classes of fire, lightning, hail and wind storm insurance, and that refunds of excess premiums collected would be made by the companies. The State contends these 114 companies must make refunds for the full period from Nov. 15, 1922.

Make-Up of Other Group.

The other group includes 41 companies which were parties to the original litigation, but did not sign the stipulation, and 36 other companies which entered business in the State after the suits started and were not parties to the litigation.

The Federal District Court in which a second series of suits by the companies is pending, has held these 77 companies are subject to refunds only as far back as Feb. 1, 1928, which is the date the Insurance Department issued an order specifying the reduction should

ARRESTED FOR TRAINING DOG TO STEAL GOLF BALLS

Man Held in New York Orders Pet to Bite Detective and She Does.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—Police today were hunting for "Mashie," a bulldog said to be the most accomplished golf ball thief that ever trotted across the Van Cortlandt Park links.

"Mashie" was missing because, after biting a detective on the order of her master, police say—she apparently got a hunch something was wrong, and scampered away.

The master, Frank Conroy, of no address, was arraigned in Morrisania court today and held in $500 bail on a charge of having taught "Mashie" to steal golf balls and carry them to him in the bushes, so that he could sell them back to the players and thereby collect enough to buy their daily rations of beans and bones.

SURPRISE BIRTHDAY PARTY FOR HOOVER AT FISHING CAMP

Arranged by His Wife and Mrs. Lindbergh; He Is 55 Years Old.

By the Associated Press.

MADISON, Va., Aug. 10.—President Hoover was given a surprise birthday party tonight by members of his family and the small group of friends and Government officials who are spending the week-end with him at his fishing camp in the Virginia Mountains.

Just what took place at the party or just what were the presents given the 55-year-old chief executive is something that, for the time being at least, is a secret known only to those in the little camp.

It was learned, however, that the party was arranged by Mrs. Hoover and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh, wife of the flyer, and that they personally directed the plans. The only description of the presents was that they were of an inexpensive nature and similar to presents given at surprise birthday parties such as are held for the average person.

Earlier in the day the President joined with other members of the party, including Secretary of Agriculture Hyde and Col. Lindbergh, in the construction of rock dams in the swift headwaters of the Rapidan River. These are being built to provide pools in which trout may gather as this species of fish enjoys basking in a sunny pool.

PARKING SPACE FOR 16 CARS PROVIDED AT UNION STATION

30-Minute Limit Set for Ground South of Market and East of Twentieth.

A parking space for 16 cars, for the convenience of persons taking friends to or meeting trains, has been established at Union Station. Cars may stay there only 30 minutes.

The new parking ground is a 1200-quare foot area on the south side of Market street east of Twentieth street. With two driveways, it is accessible to automobiles from Twentieth, Nineteenth or Market streets.

As persons driving to the station usually remain only a short time, the Terminal Association expects that it will be possible to park a large number of cars on the lot each day. The space will be open only to private vehicles.

POWERS DECIDE TO MEET ISSUE ON REPARATIONS

Chief Delegates Will Confer With Snowden Today in Hope of Breaking Hague Deadlock.

BRITISH DELEGATE MAKES APOLOGY

Withdraws Words Used to Cheron in Discussion—Insists on England's Claims for More Money.

By the Associated Press.

THE HAGUE, Aug. 10.—Heads of the delegations of the six leading Powers at The Hague conference for putting into effect the Young plan decided late tonight to meet at 11 a. m. tomorrow for a frank, plain talk to decide whether it was worth while continuing their work.

Delegates of France, Italy, Germany, Belgium and Japan will discuss plainly with Philip Snowden, British Chancellor of the Exchequer, whether there is any hope of breaking the deadlock into which British demands for a larger share of German payments has brought the conference.

A meeting of the financial committee, of which Snowden is a member, is scheduled for Monday morning, but after a meeting in the apartments of Premier Briand of France this afternoon the Powers in favor of accepting the Young plan integrally, apparently thought it was better to adopt the forthright methods of discussion which Snowden has used since the conference opened on Tuesday.

Premier Briand of France, Premier Jaspar of Belgium, Senator Mosconi of Italy, and Adatchi of Japan met at Briand's apartment and went over the whole situation to see what could be done and what course should be taken in case the British delegation remains obdurate.

Crisis Postponed.

A crisis involving the possible collapse of the conference was averted temporarily today by the action of the Financial Committee in taking a recess until Monday without taking up Snowden's proposal.

The day began with a speech by W. Graham, president of the British Board of Trade, setting forth how the British economic situation was lively affected by deliveries in kind and how it was keeping a great many English workingmen idle.

The Financial Committee heard the plea of the president of the Board of Trade that payments of reparations in kind be reduced to the lowest possible limit.

Henri Cheron, French Finance Minister, following Graham, declared that an effort would be made to satisfy British interests on that point.

The fact that Chancellor Snowden's resolution for revision of the Young plan meanwhile had been allowed to remain on the table without mention apparently produced better feeling which lasted only until Snowden rose to reply to Cheron in blunt and energetic language.

Snowden Demands Action.

Snowden told the committee that it must not forget his resolution for revision of the Young plan on which he would demand action without much further ado and said he was not going to spend his life at the Hague.

"It is time we came to grips on this whole question," he declared.

Then turning to Cheron he questioned the figures which the French Minister had produced to show that France was making as great a sacrifice as Great Britain. He contended that the day's discussion was to have been devoted to the question of reparations in kind and that Cheron's remarks regarding the amounts of reparations and the comparative sacrifices of Great Britain and France were out of order.

He said that former Premier Peincare in 1923 had made a promise to Winston Churchill, then Chancellor of the Exchequer, that the spa percentages for the repartition

TWO DAYS ACROSS ATLANTIC WILL SOON BE NORMAL TIME, DR. ECKENER DECLARES

By DR. HUGO ECKENER, Commander of the Graf Zeppelin.

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Aug. 10.

AIRSHIP navigation over long stretches is always meteorological navigation. We made record time in this flight, not because we took the shortest way over the great circle, but because we took advantage of strong southwest winds which we caught on the opposite rim of a depression coming from Newfoundland.

Certainly the meteorological situation was favorable and we established a record which will probably stand for several years.

Our record time on this trip, however splendid, will become normal time of west to east airship flight in the not very distant future—that is two days from coast to coast. Thus peace will be all but conquered and in a similar manner, moral and intellectual worlds will be brought closer together.

As a German I am happy that we contributed something to closer relations between Germany and America.

ZEPPELIN'S MOTORS IN PERFECT CONDITION

Airship Could Start for Tokio Tuesday, but Will Probably Not Go Till Thursday.

By the Associated Press.

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Aug. 10.—Taking a new record for a trans-Atlantic dirigible crossing into her hangar with her, the air liner Graf Zeppelin reached home this afternoon, 55 hours and 24 minutes after leaving Lakehurst, N. J., on the first stage of a proposed flight around the world.

A small army of mechanics and helpers immediately began to groom the Zeppelin for the next stage to Tokio.

Dr. Hugo Eckener celebrated his sixty-first birthday by bringing down the Zeppelin at 1:03 p. m. (6:03 a. m. St. Louis time), after a journey of 4200 miles, according to the log. The Zeppelin made an average speed of 75 miles an hour for the entire trip, faster by 13 hours and 22 minutes than the time she made in the crossing in 1928.

Unusually Quick Landing.

The air liner described a graceful curve over the city and, less than half an hour after she had been first sighted, came to the ground in one of the cleanest landings Dr. Eckener has ever achieved.

Within two hours after the Graf Zeppelin landed, nothing at the Zeppelin plant gave evidence of an unusual occurrence. Machinists busied themselves with the motors, only to find they were in perfect condition. According to Director Maybach, "not a single one needed to be replaced or overhauled. They stood the strain excellently and merely need oiling and cleaning."

Examination of the hull revealed no tears, so that from this technical point the takeoff for Tokio could be made by Tuesday night. However, Dr. Lennarts, the Zeppelin's Blau gas expert, does not consider the takeoff likely before Wednesday or Thursday morning.

Lamb Chops for the "Ad" Men.

While the Zeppelin works resumed normal working condition quickly there were three places abnormally busy. The first of these was the postoffice where all the clerks are on overtime duty sorting the mail from the 13 bags destined for Friedrichshafen. Ten bags remain in the hangar unopened being destined for Tokio and beyond.

Another busy place is the local office of the Hamburg-American Tourist Agency. "All goods, including the puppy and the alligator, arrived in perfect conditions," said Manager Gerhart. "The delegates to the International Advertising Convention in Berlin will have their American lamb chops tomorrow morning. These were examined by health officers and then approved for shipment on the Graf Zeppelin."

The third busy place was the Kurgarten Hotel, where the dirigible's passengers swamped already crowded quarters and where farewell parties were given during the Speed of 75 Miles an Hour Maintained Despite Fog —Observers Praise Eckener's Skill.

FRIEDRICHSHAVEN, Aug. 10.—The Graf Zeppelin this afternoon ended the first leg of its round-world flight at this little German town, landing at 1:02 p. m. (6:02 a. m. St. Louis time), setting a new record for the Atlantic crossing for this type of ship. From Lakehurst the trip took 55 hours and 32 minutes.

Three records, in fact, were set up by the amazing performance of the Graf. They were:

From the Statue of Liberty to the Lizard light, farthest southwest point of England, in 43 hours and 42 minutes.

From the Statue of Liberty to Eiffel Tower in 46 hours and 52 minutes.

From the Statue of Liberty to Friedrichshafen in 54 hours and 30 minutes.

Rosendahl Praises Fest.

Commander Rosendahl, after the flight was ended and we had moored at the home hangar, said:

"It was a truly wonderful performance. The navigation was good in the low visibility which covered half of the voyage. The motors ticked like a clock. Except for the routine shutdown for a few minutes, changing one spark plug and replacing a broken valve spring, I can say there was not the slightest difficulty.

"The culinary and steward's department gave us excellent food and fine service—an improvement that only those who were on the first trans-Atlantic flight can properly appreciate."

Lieut. Jack C. Richardson, another of the United States Navy men aboard, remarked, with an enthusiastic smile: "It was the most marvelous flight I have ever made. This was said as we saw beautiful Paris gliding below us like a moving canvas in colors. He resumed: "Dr. Eckener has deserved this triumph. He worked many years for just such an achievement and we are happy with him on his birthday."

Secure In Fog.

Another Graf Zeppelin fan is Marion C. Cooper of the Federal Aviation Co., a graduate of Annapolis and an airplane pilot of many years. He said: "What impressed me most during the entire flight was the unconcern of the men on the bridge in the many hours of fog and clouds. It did not seem to bother them in the slightest, not even last night in the darkness.

"Fog is the greatest terror of airplane pilots, and even our best air mail men dread it, because one cannot tell what angle one is flying on. Fuel, too, is worrisome. No airplane can offer the degree of security in fogs that the Graf Zeppelin has."

William B. Leeds called it "an Arabian Nights' dream," adding "If I had as much money as Henry Ford, I would have a Graf Zeppelin built for myself."

C. P. Burgess, our navy department's expert aeronautical engineer, considered it a "too perfect flight to be taken as a sample." The Graf Zeppelin's performance really surprised him.

Chicagoan Proud of Record.

Nelson Morris of Chicago, nephew of Ira Nelson Morris, former American minister to Stockholm, is proud of his own record of Paris to Friedrichshafen to New York to Chicago to New York to Friedrichshafen in nine days and a few hours, with 12 hours spent in both New York and Chicago. He said:

"I am confident that no one will

KELKER DRAFTING PLAN FOR P. S. CO.'S THIRD TRY FOR NEW FRANCHISE

Proposed "Contract" Ordinance to Be Based on "Service-at-Cost" Measure Which Mayor Denounced as Promoters' Scheme to Make Huge Profit.

ADMITS THERE WOULD BE NO HOME RULE

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Aug. 10.—R. F. Kelker Jr., Chicago consulting engineer, who is serving as engineer for the St. Louis Transportation Survey Commission, is engaged in laying the groundwork for a new franchise for the St. Louis Public Service Co., operating the street car system in St. Louis.

At the same time he is analyzing the "service at cost" franchise which Mayor Miller repudiated two years ago, saying "We would not be justified in furthering any plan which had for its purpose . . . consummation of a financial deal . . . for an immediate and substantial profit on the part of the promoters."

Mr. Kelker recognizes that under the franchise he is drafting the city will not have "home rule" over street car service and fares, but he says he is not going to urge this franchise upon the city but merely give the Survey Commission the technical information it desires about it.

It will be recalled that last winter Mr. Kelker suggested the "terminable permits" bill which Gov. Caulfield later vetoed.

Assembling Franchise Data.

At the meeting of the Survey Commission July 11, the first one following Gov. Caulfield's veto, Chairman E. J. Russell called on Mr. Kelker for a "report as to method of procedure inasmuch as we have had occasion to modify it since the last meeting."

In his report Mr. Kelker recommended "that a statement of principles for a contract ordinance conforming to the powers the city has under its charter and to the statutes of the State, together with an analysis of the so-called 'service-at-cost' ordinance of 1925, be prepared for the consideration of the Commission."

On motion made by Comptroller Nolte and seconded by Mayor Miller, the commission instructed Mr. Kelker to proceed to draft the basic principles of a contract ordinance.

In an interview with Mr. Kelker in his office here, a Post-Dispatch reporter asked him what he was doing in connection with the instructions given him by the Transportation Survey Commission.

He said he was making a study and analysis of the so-called "service at cost" franchise and at the same time, formulating the principles which in his opinion should be incorporated in a new franchise ordinance if one is proposed.

He said when this work is completed he will make a report to the Transportation Survey Commission and then it will be up to the commission to decide whether it wishes to recommend a new franchise. He said he would not undertake to influence the commission's policy in that respect.

He was asked if he had read Mayor Miller's letter withdrawing the administration's support of the service at cost franchise and he said he had not but had heard of it and would like to read it. He was given a copy of it.

No Home Rule.

Mr. Kelker was asked if he believed the city could include in a franchise ordinance any conditions that would give it control over rates and service; that is if the city could have "home rule" under the ordinance he is considering.

"The answer to that," he said, "is in your city charter and your State public utility act. The charter gives the city the power to fix rates and regulate service, but under the State law those powers have been taken over by the State Public Service Commission."

In response to another question he agreed that under existing laws and court decisions virtually the only power the city possesses over the company in granting it a franchise, besides fixing the compensation to be paid by the company for use of the streets, is the right to fix the length of life of the franchise.

If the "contract ordinance" franchise Mr. Kelker is working on is presented to the Board of Aldermen of St. Louis it will be the third attempt to obtain a new franchise for the Public Service Co., although its present franchises have several years to run.

The first attempt was the propagation of the "service at cost" franchise by Mayor Miller three years ago. After a year of discussion in which the Post-Dispatch showed how J. K. Newman and other promoters of the reorganized street car company were planning to make millions through the sale of new securities if they could get a new franchise, Mayor Miller repudiated the "service at cost" plan and it was dropped.

The second attempt was made through the Legislature when the city administration and the Transportation Survey Commission were induced to sponsor the "terminable permits" bill. That failed, after the Post-Dispatch had conducted a vigorous campaign against it, only because Gov. Caulfield vetoed the bill that both houses of the Legislature had passed.

The type of franchise sought in the present move bears the familiar title applied to that recently granted Newman's street car company in Kansas City—"contract ordinance." Although in the Kansas City case the street car company "contracted" with the city to keep the fare at eight cents it is now before the State Public Service Commission seeking a 10-cent cash fare and the city charges the company has gone back on its contract.

Transportation Survey Commission Marking Time.

The work of the city's Transportation Survey Commission is at a standstill awaiting reports from its engineer, R. F. Kelker Jr. of Chicago, on matters referred to him at the last meeting July 11. No meeting has been held since and none is scheduled.

At that time Mr. Kelker recommended that the commission's subcommittee on street car rerouting proceed with public hearings on the extensive rerouting plans he had recommended in his May report.

Erastus Wells, chairman of the subcommittee, objected to going ahead with the rerouting hearings. It was agreed, then, that such hearings be deferred until a report was received on the franchise proposal.

E. J. Russell, chairman of the Transportation Survey Commission, in an interview with a Post-Dispatch reporter last Wednesday, said that under no circumstances would the commission recommend a new street car franchise until the commission had finished its survey and filed its complete report with the Mayor.

The commission was created a year ago by the Board of Aldermen and its life fixed at two years. It will have to complete its work, therefore, within a year unless its life is extended by the board.

"When this commission makes a report to Mayor Miller," Mr. Russell said, "it will present a complete transportation plan for St. Louis, but until then it will not recommend or sponsor any new street car franchise."

In explanation of the instructions given Mr. Kelker to draft the skeleton form of a new franchise, Russell said the matter was one that would require a great deal of study and the commission wished him to get his suggestions before it so that it could consider them while proceeding with its other studies.

Russell said it was uncertain when the next meeting of the commission would be held but he hoped it would be possible to call a meeting soon.

"GRANT NO FRANCHISES," SENATOR COUZENS ADVISES ST. LOUIS; "ISSUE PERMITS"

Former Mayor of Detroit Who Gave That City Home Rule Over Utilities, Discusses the Street Car Situation Here.

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—"Grant no more franchises," is the earnest advice of James Couzens, Republican Senator from Michigan, to the people of St. Louis, on the question of dealing with public utilities.

Couzens' successful fight to rescue the people of Detroit from the oppressive and extortionate practices of the street railway company, remains one of the most brilliant chapters in the history of municipal progress in this country. It began with his appointment as Street Railway Commissioner, soon after he sold his interest in the Ford Motor Co. for $33,000,000, and determined to devote the remainder of his career to public service. It culminated during his two terms as Mayor, when the city bought the street railways on Couzens' own terms. On the basis of this extraordinary record he was sent to the United States Senate, where he has become one of the most influential figures in the national Government.

It was because of his singular knowledge of the subject that the Post-Dispatch correspondent laid before him the transportation problem of St. Louis, and asked that he give the people of St. Louis the benefit of his advice and experience.

"The situation in Detroit, when I became Commissioner of Street Railways in 1917," Senator Couzens explained, "was similar to that which exists in many other large cities. Originally the city was served by a number of independent lines, most of which operated under franchises which fixed the rate of fare. Eventually all these lines were acquired by the Detroit United Railways Co., and consolidated in a single system. Since the original franchises were expiring at successive intervals, the company was anxious to obtain a blanket franchise covering the entire system.

"There was continuous trouble between the city and the company. The company was continually seeking to increase fares, in spite of the original franchise provisions. Service was unsatisfactory. Detroit was growing at a tremendous rate, and the company refused to make needed extensions and improvements, always using the excuse that it could not obtain capital because it had no general franchise."

Couzens took the lead in the fight to protect the public from the company's demands. Public sentiment already was hostile to the company, and Couzens mobilized it effectively. So formidable did this opposition become that the company assumed a conciliatory attitude, and offered to accept a franchise fixing a fare of eight tickets for a quarter. The public, however, was warned that the company, after receiving the franchise, might seek through court action an increase in the fare. Moreover, there was a growing sentiment in favor of municipal ownership. Consequently when the franchise proposition was submitted to a popular referendum, it was defeated.

Couzens was elected Mayor in 1917 on the strength of this record. Vested with authority to formulate and carry out a definite policy toward the street railways, he proceeded to the task with characteristic vigor.

"We decided then," the Senator related, "that the only satisfactory way to deal with the company was on the basis of revocable permits. By this means the city could establish home rule, retaining control over rates and service. Moreover, it had the added advantage of not binding the city for a long term of years, thus leaving the way open to municipal ownership when the time became ripe for it. Accordingly, as the original individual franchises expired, the city issued permits allowing the company to continue operation of the respective lines. The City Council had power to revoke these permits at any time.

"Of course, the company was dissatisfied. It declined to make extensions and improvements ordered by the city, on the ground that it was impossible to obtain capital to finance a company whose tenure of the streets rested on such a precarious right as that conferred by mere permits.

"I said: 'Is that so! Well, gentlemen, we will fix that.' So we passed an ordinance through the City Council by which the city guaranteed to reimburse the company for all expenditures made by the city's order and under the city's supervision, in the event the company's permit were revoked. On the strength of this guarantee the banks were ready to advance all the capital that was needed, and there was no more talk about the impossibility of financing improvements. How could there be?—the city's credit was good.

"We supervised and kept an accounting of all money spent by the company thenceforth—necessarily, because the city had to look forward to the possibility of reimbursing the company at some future date. Incidentally, city supervision also eliminated all opportunities for the inside grafting that we know sometimes occurs on such contracts.

"Eventually the city did acquire the lines, and it did reimburse the company for its capital expenditures, so there is no room for argument about whether it can be done. It was done in Detroit, and it worked out exactly as we had planned.

"Now," continued the smiling, confident Senator, "you ask me what I would do if I were confronted by a situation like that which exists in St. Louis. If I were Mayor of St. Louis I would call in the heads of the street car company, and I would say:

"'Gentlemen, we have no desire to destroy your property rights, but neither does the city intend to let you mulct the people of St. Louis. The city is ready to grant you a continuing license to operate, subject to revocation by the city. In return for the privilege of using our streets, we will require you to give adequate service, and we will compel you to spend all the money necessary for extensions and improvements. We promise to let you operate on a fare that is fair to you and satisfactory to us, and if at any time we decide to revoke your permit for the purpose of taking over your lines or for any other purpose, the city will reimburse you for the money spent on extensions and improvements ordered and supervised by the city, on the basis of actual cost to you, less depreciation and obsolescence.'

"That is what I would do," said Senator Couzens, "and it is all that any honest public utility should ask. The company would not experience the slightest difficulty in financing all needed expenditures. How could it?—the city's credit is good."

"As a matter of fact," he went on, "the franchise is an obsolete thing. The permit is virtually a license to operate during good behavior, with a guarantee of reimbursement in the event of revocation. The advantage to the company of such an arrangement is so obvious that it is absurd to argue it. I cannot understand why a practical and honest utility operator would be demanding a franchise in this day and age. It sounds like a promoter's scheme to me."

The reporter explained to Senator Couzens the reorganization of the St. Louis street car company by J. K. Newman, and the scheme for making a huge profit out of a new long-term franchise.

"I thought it must be some game like that," was the dry rejoinder. "Of course the professional promoter doesn't like the permit system. His game is to organize a public utility company, skim off several million dollars of the cream and beat it out of town, leaving the car riders to pay the bill. The permit plan, which protects the public and merely allows the company to earn a fair return on an honest investment, has no attractions for the promoter. But a practical operator, who is on the level with his business and with the public, prefers a permit which insures a fair return and a guarantee against the loss of his investment. He would be a fool if he didn't."

36 UNREGISTERED MEDICAL DOCTORS IN KANSAS CITY

State Health Commissioner to Extend Inquiry to St. Louis and to Seek Prosecution of Offenders.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Aug. 10.—The State Board of Health has instituted an inquiry into the credentials of 36 persons reported to be practicing medicine in Kansas City without Missouri licenses, Dr. James Stewart, secretary of the board, announced today.

A similar inquiry will be made in St. Louis, Dr. Stewart says, to determine whether any persons are practicing there without licenses. Attorney-General Shartel will be requested to aid in the inquiry and begin prosecutions of persons practicing without Missouri licenses.

The list of 36 persons alleged to be practicing in Kansas City without Missouri licenses was compiled by the Jackson County Medical Association and submitted to the Board of Health, whose medical license records did not show that they had been licensed in Missouri. Several of them are known to be graduates of medical schools which are not recognized as reputable under the Missouri law, Dr. Stewart says, and several others hold licenses from other states, but have failed to take examinations for Missouri licenses or lack the medical credentials to qualify for an examination.

This is a part of the campaign recently begun by the Health Board against unlicensed doctors, quacks and all persons posing as doctors.

Forty-two osteopaths in good standing in their local society at Kansas City had been listed under the medical doctors' classification in the telephone directory, Stewart said. He added that they say a mistake was made by the telephone company and that the company has been notified to correct it. For that reason, Stewart said, their names would be withheld.

Among the 36 names is that of Dr. Ray B. Horton of Kansas City and Purdy, Mo., debarred physician and central figure in the medical diploma mill scandal of several years ago, who was arrested in Kansas City last Saturday on a charge of attempting to extort $1000 from Dr. C. A. Beard.

POSTHUMOUS TRIBUTE PAID TO BERGER BY EUGENE V. DEBS

Red Silk With Inscription Covers Casket of Man Who Instructed Former Socialist Leader.

By the Associated Press.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Aug. 10.—From the ranks of the dead there came today a last tribute to Victor L. Berger, dead Socialist leader.

A piece of red silk, symbolic of the regard Eugene V. Debs bore for the man who first taught him the principles of Socialism and fostered his progress as a party figure, was draped today over Berger's casket as his body was taken to Forest Hill Cemetery.

On it in gold letters appears: "I say "thou shalt be covered as Debs was."

It was the last wish of Debs, often the presidential candidate of his party, that the silk used on the casket at his funeral should be saved for Berger's funeral. Fulfilling that wish, his brother of Terre Haute, Ind., sent it to city officials and with it a tribute to the dead party leader.

Story of Zeppelin's Record Flight

take that record away from me soon." He made the flight both ways.

One who enjoys all the thrills and sensations, but is not surprised at anything the Graf does, is Lady Drummond Hay, who now has the distinction of being the only woman who has flown the Atlantic in both directions.

I left the bridge at 2 o'clock this morning and found her there still, soon after 5 o'clock, when we were flying over Paris.

Mayor Walker's Message.

William Weber and Nathan Wexler of New York, who carry a letter from Mayor "Jimmy" Walker to Chief Burgomaster Boess of Berlin, are eager to get back to Manhattan just to tell their friends of their wonderful experience. In their letter, Mayor Walker sends felicitations to the Mayor of Berlin, paying a compliment to the Zeppelin commander in these words: "Dr. Eckener has again successfully essayed the role of emissary of good will between the people of your nation and mine."

Director Leisler Kiep of the Hamburg-American line, said: "It was a remarkably successful, fast and pleasant aerial voyage. True conditions were not unfavorable, but neither were they abnormally favorable.

"The Hamburg-American line has placed its organization at the disposal of Dr. Eckener—the oldest German shipping company co-operating with the newest German means of transocean transportation, because it stands for progress and because it believes every shortening of the distance between America and Europe benefits humanity."

Across Ocean in Two Days.

From America to Europe in less than two days, at a speed two and a half times greater than that of the Bremen or the Mauretania—that is a record for the aviation wizards of the future to shoot at. More than 700 miles was the Friday run through fogs and low clouds.

In spite of the fact that the wireless occupied more than three hours in the fog to get the bearings for the ship's position, we hurtled through the air at an average speed of 86 miles an hour.

Perhaps the keenest thrill of the journey came when at 11:30 last night when we streaked past the Lizard light. I have never seen the Graf's bridge so excited. As Commander Eckener opened the door of the lounge and announced the running time to Land's End at the record figure, there was an outburst of applause and shouts.

Half an hour later as the clock struck midnight, Lady Drummond Hay, deputized by the passengers, stopped the Commodore as he was coming through the lounge and handed him the written felicitations of the company aboard on his sixty-first birthday. It was signed by all the passengers.

Then there was a clinking of glasses, shouts of "Hoch" and singing of "He's a jolly good fellow."

Commander Eckener responded in a few words of thanks for the good wishes expressed and told them of the pleasure that was his to have them participate in this historic voyage.

This touching little scene came at the end of a great day in which the German greyhound of the air had dashed through masses of low clouds and fogs at a tremendous speed. As far as we were able to check it in the low visibility, we were ranging between 97 and 108 miles an hour for hours.

112 Miles an Hour.

The high spot in our speed was reached late in the afternoon. I was standing by Navigator Wittemann, who with his watch in hand suddenly exclaimed: "Why, that is 112 miles an hour."

At 6:30 o'clock last evening, Greenwich time, it was estimated on uncertain bearings that the Graf was 420 nautical miles from Fastnet. The clouds and fogs then extended down to the water. Commander Eckener was trying to keep under the ceiling and once went within 500 feet of the Atlantic for some time and remained at an altitude of 650 feet until darkness enveloped us, forcing us to go higher.

For me the trip has been the greatest of thrills. But it is strange that the pleasure and thrills of this race against time was so slow in communicating itself to the general run of passengers. Some of them evinced not the slightest interest, but were more intent on playing the latest jazz records on the gramophone. Their blood did not seem to be stirred by the possibility of a new passenger airship record from America to Europe, or its significance to trans-Atlantic aerial traffic.

A Thrill at Sea.

As an illustration of the way the officers of the Graf Zeppelin were keyed up, let me tell of our passing the British freight steamship Rexmore. The vessel suddenly appeared ahead of us, the seas dashing madly over her bow. I ran to my cabin for my binoculars, but before I could return we had shot past and the boat was far astern.

But Dr. Eckener had sent word to Lady Drummond Hay, [illegible] the only woman aboard to join him on the bridge. Capts. Flemming and Von Schuller were lured from their beds and appeared in front. There is a hush, and then the boom of open satisfaction when the steerer gives us our position.

And when we learned that we were 100 miles further along than we had figured, there was wild enthusiasm.

The whole scene was really wonderful.

The landing took really no time at all, once we had covered the distance between England and Friedrichshafen. We were over the hangar at 12:41 p. m. and in less than an hour were inside, with the motors stopped, all the passengers debarked and the freight unloaded.

Larney and Morris Schlossky left for Berlin late this afternoon. Nelson Morris started to Paris to see his wife between stops of the round-the-world flight, and William B. Leeds also arranged to go to Paris. Commander Charles E. Rosendahl of the United States Navy will spend Sunday in Berlin.

Tentative Passenger List.

Although the final list for the Tokio flight has not yet been definitely fixed the following passengers have been accepted: Lady Grace Drummond Hay, London; Commander Nashiro Fujita, Japanese naval officer; commander Charles E. Rosendahl and Lieut. J. C. Richardson of the United States Navy; Sir Hubert Wilkins, Australian explorer; Joachim Rickard, Boston and Madrid; Nelson Morris, Chicago; William B. Leeds, New York; Kurt H. von Wiegand, Robert Hartmann, Gustav Kauder, Hilda von Eschwege-Lichberg, Yoshimaro Enti, Kichinai Kitano and Hugo Gessenheimer, newspaper correspondents; Dr. Heronimo Mora, Madrid, physician.

CHECK DISCLOSES MORE CHEATING IN RYCKOFF'S WORK

$186,000 Overcharge Indicated in Further Analysis of Survey of Street Lighting.

Most of Them Underground and Can't Be Measured Accurately—46 Pct. of Contract Checked.

Further analysis of measurements of the bond issue street lighting system installed by A. M. Ryckoff, Chicago contractor, who told a Post-Dispatch reporter in his Chicago office last January he had made "short cuts" in the installation to recover money paid to the "St. Louis city hall crowd," indicates the overcharge to the city will reach $186,000, provided the percentages already accounted for do not greatly vary in the work remaining to be measured.

An extended analysis embracing four items of street resurfacing work and bores under streets, in addition to sidewalk brick and concrete repaving, discussed in detail in last Thursday's Post-Dispatch, shows the contractor's "short cuts" covered at least six of the 31 items in the contract, most of which are underground and cannot be accurately measured.

46 Per Cent Measured.

As was told Thursday in the Post-Dispatch, there has been measured 46 per cent of the total work, or 124 miles, all of district B, in which 25 per cent of the concrete and 40 per cent of the brick sidewalk resurfacing the contractor was paid for has been found.

Further analysis of the surveyor's finding to date accounts for only 12 to 25 per cent of four other items in the contractor's bill. This would leave 75 to 88 per cent of these four units, together with 75 per cent of the concrete and 60 per cent of the brick sidewalk resurfacing to be found in 54 per cent, or little more than half the work remaining to be measured, to justify Ryckoff's bill to the city.

As is known, Ryckoff was jointly indicted with former Director of Public Utilities John C. Pritchard and the latter's chief electrical engineer, George B. Heath, on a charge of obtaining money by false pretenses in overcharging the city $175,000 for work on this contract. Pritchard and Heath resigned their city hall jobs and the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, composed of Mayor Miller, Comptroller Nolte and President Neun of the Board of Aldermen, ordered a survey of Ryckoff's work for evidence to be used in his prosecutor and a civil action to recover any overcharges.

Work on District C Starts.

Pitzman's company of engineers and surveyors was employed to make the survey and after finishing District B last week started in District C. District B, in which there are 124 miles of the work, is bounded by Chouteau avenue, Arsenal street, Compton avenue and the river. District C, which has 112 miles, is bounded by Cass avenue, Angelica street, Grand boulevard and the river. There are 34 miles of the work in District D, bounded by Chouteau avenue, Cass avenue, Jefferson avenue and Grand boulevard.

The survey was started April 8 and will continue for several months until completed at a probable cost to the city of $15,000. It was ordered following a survey made for the Post-Dispatch last March by surveyors directed by R. W. Buchmueller, an engineer, from whose report it was concluded that Ryckoff had overcharged the city at least $175,000.

Overcharge on Brick Work.

The city was charged 65 cents per square foot for brick street resurfacing. Pitzman found in the 46 per cent of the work he has measured 23,146 square feet, or 14.7 per cent of 157,661 square feet paid for. If this percentage remains constant in the work yet to be measured, a total of 50,300 square feet will be found, leaving 107,361 square feet short, which, at the unit price of 65 cents per square foot, would amount to an overcharge of $69,784.65.

For macadam street resurfacing, 8 cents per square foot was charged. Pitzman has found 28,-934 square feet, which is 25.5 per cent of 110,527 square feet paid for. Should this percentage remain constant, 61,400 square feet will be found, leaving 49,127 square feet unaccounted for, or an overcharge to the city of $3827.

A charge of 20 cents per square foot was made for 17,660 square feet of asphalt resurfacing. Pitzman has found 2027 square feet, or 11.5 per cent of the total paid for. Should this percentage remain constant a total of 4400 square feet will be found, leaving a shortage of 13,260 square feet, or an overcharge at 20 cents per square foot of $2975.

Sub-Surface Bores.

To run the cables across some streets (holes were bored under intersections so as not to interrupt traffic by surface cutting. Pitzman's crews were paid for 1,[illegible] feet. Pitzman's contract calls for 20 per cent of the total work to be paid for. Should this percentage continue, a total of 4,[illegible] feet would be found, leaving a shortage of 23,[illegible] feet, or an overcharge of $[illegible].

The total overcharge indicated to date on brick and concrete replacement, measured on the same basis as the work already done, would be $[illegible]. There will be [illegible] the contract, but only six of the 31 items in the contract, most of which are underground, can be accurately measured with the work. Cable [illegible] It will be recalled that Nolte challenged Ryckoff's cable and [illegible] into a compromise which nearly [illegible] the city.

Five other items, including stone, granite and telford paving, measured by Pitzman, total 3,[illegible] square feet, or 1,[illegible] "extras," according to the contract, obtained at the city's office, and not on a square basis. Ryckoff's bill for these items is $135,000.

On only one item, [illegible] measured differently in quantity. The contract calls for street replacement at 65 cents per square foot. Pitzman found 23,146 square feet, or 14.7 per cent of 157,661 square feet which was paid for. If this percentage remains constant in the work yet to be measured, a total of 50,300 square feet will be found, leaving 107,361 square feet short, which, at the unit price of 65 cents per square foot, would amount to an overcharge of $69,784.65.

And when we learned that we were 100 miles further along than we had figured, there was wild en- thusiasm.

Commander Rosendahl and Capt. Wilkins joined in congratulating Eckener on his splendid navigation.

The whole scene was really won- derful.

The landing took really no trou- ble at all, once we had covered the distance between England and Friedrichshafen. We were over the hangar at 12:41 p. m. and in less than an hour were inside, with the motors stopped, all the passen- gers debarked and the freight un- loaded.

CHECK DISCLOSES MORE CHEATING IN RYCKOFF'S WORK

$186,000 Overcharge Indicated in Further Analysis of Survey of Street Lighting.

Most of Them Underground and Can't Be Measured Accurately—46 Pct. of Contract Checked.

Further analysis of measurements of the bond issue street lighting system installed by A. M. Ryckoff, Chicago contractor, who told a Post-Dispatch reporter in his Chi- cago office last January he had made "short cuts" in the installa- tion to recover money paid to the "St. Louis city hall crowd," indi- cates the overcharge to the city will reach $186,000, provided the percentages already accounted for do not greatly vary in the work re- maining to be measured.

An extended analysis embracing four items of street resurfacing work and bores under streets, in addition to sidewalk brick and con- crete repaving, discussed in detail in last Thursday's Post-Dispatch, shows the contractor's "short cuts" covered at least six of the 31 items in the contract, most of which are underground and cannot be accur- ately measured.

46 Per Cent Measured.

As was told Thursday in the Post-Dispatch, there has been measured 46 per cent of the total work, or 124 miles, all of district B in which 25 per cent of the con- crete and 40 per cent of the brick sidewalk resurfacing the contractor was paid for has been found.

Further analysis of the survey- or's finding to date accounts for only 12 to 25 per cent of four other items in the contractor's bill. This would leave 75 to 88 per cent of these four units, together with 75 per cent of the concrete and 60 per cent of the brick sidewalk resur- facing to be found in 54 per cent, or little more than half the work remaining to be measured, to jus- tify Ryckoff's bill to the city.

As is known, Ryckoff was jointly indicted with former Director of Public Utilities John C. Pritchard and the latter's chief electrical en- gineer, George B. Heath, on a charge of obtaining money by false pretenses in overcharging the city $175,000 for work on this contract. Pritchard and Heath resigned their city hall jobs and the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, com- posed of Mayor Miller, Comptroller Nolte and President Neun of the Board of Aldermen, ordered a sur- vey of Ryckoff's work for evidence to be used in his prosecutor and a civil action to recover any over- charges.

Work on District C Starts.

Pitzman's company of engineers and surveyors was employed to make the survey and after finish- ing District B last week started in District C. District B, in which there are 124 miles of the work, is bounded by Chouteau avenue, Ar- senal street, Compton avenue and the river. District C, which has 113 miles, is bounded by Cass avenue, Angelica street, Grand boulevard and the river. There are 34 miles of the work in Dis- trict D, bounded by Chouteau ave- nue, Cass avenue, Jefferson avenue and Grand boulevard.

The survey was started April 8 and will continue for several months until completed at a prob- able cost to the city of $15,000. It was ordered following a survey made for the Post-Dispatch last March by surveyors directed by R. H. Buchmueller, an engineer, from whose report it was concluded that Ryckhoff had overcharged the city at least $175,000.

Overcharge on Brick Work.

The city was charged 65 cents per square foot for brick street re- surfacing. Pitzman found in the 46 per cent of the work he has measured 23,146 square feet, or 14.7 per cent of 157,661 square feet paid for. If this percentage re- mains constant in the work yet to be measured, a total of 50,300 square feet will be found, leaving 107,361 square feet short, which, at the unit price of 65 cents per square foot, would amount to an overcharge of $69,784.65.

For macadam street resurfacing, 30 cents per square foot was charged. Pitzman has found 28,- 334 square feet, which is 25.5 per cent of 110,527 square feet paid for. Should this percentage re- main constant, 61,400 square feet will be found, leaving 49,127 square feet unaccounted for, or an overcharge to the city of $9827.

A charge of 30 cents per square foot was made for 17,660 square feet of asphalt resurfacing. Pitz- man has found 2027 square feet, or 11.5 per cent of the total paid for. Should this percentage remain constant a total of 4400 square feet will be found, leaving a shortage of 12,260 square feet, or an over- charge at 30 cents per square foot of $3978.

Sub-Surface Bores.

To run the cables across some streets holes were bored under in- tersections so as not to interrupt traffic by surface trenching. Bores were paid for at 30 cents per lineal foot. Pitzman found 8453 feet, or 20 per cent of the 42,386 feet paid for. Should this percentage con- tinue, a total of 18,400 feet will be found, 23,986 feet less than paid for, or an overcharge of $7195.80.

The total of the above items add- ed to totals of overcharges for brick and concrete sidewalk re- placement, now calculated on the same basis at $98,541, indicates there will be a total overcharge by the contractor of $186,888.14 on only six of the 31 items in the con- tract, many of which cannot be measured without digging up the work. Cable is one of these items. It will be recalled that Comptroller Nolte challenged Ryckoff's bill for cable and forced the contractor into a compromise settlement by which nearly $20,000 was saved for the city.

$135,000 for Extras.

Five other items—concrete, lime- stone, granite, limestone flagging and telford paving—were measured by Pitzman for a total of 75,269 square feet. This was paid for as "extras," according to information obtained at Comptroller Nolte's office ,and not on a unit price basis. Ryckoff's bill for extras was $135,000.

On only one of the seven items measured did the city benefit in quantity. The price for wood-block street replacement was $1 per square foot. Pitzman found 1580 square feet had been replaced, which was 158,5 per cent more than Ryckoff charged for. He was paid for 996 square feet. Should this ratio obtain throughout the remaining districts to be measured, 3435 square feet will be found, a loss on this item to the contractor of $2439. The contractor has been given the benefit of this sum in the preceding calculations on other items.

Ryckoff got the contract on a unit price basis and he finished it at a cost to the city of more than $1,800,000, or $600,000 above his bid.

FIRST ARREST MADE IN PHILIPPINES GRAFT

Sectional Chief in Insular Post-office Department Charged With $109,000 Theft.

By the Associated Press.

MANILA, Aug. 10. — The first criminal complaint in connection with a recent investigation which disclosed widespread thefts in the Bureau of Posts and the Bureau of Commerce and Industry resulted today in the arrest of Florencio Reyes, chief of the stamp section of the Postoffice department.

Reyes was charged with the theft of stamps worth 218,000 pesos ($109,000). Seven other section chiefs were dismissed and may be subjected to criminal pros- ecution.

By order of Gov. Gen. Dwight F. Davis, complaint also probably will be filed against several former employes of the engineer island section of the Bureau of Commerce and Industry, where $100,000 worth of government property is said to have been stolen. Engineer island is a place where government ships are overhauled.

Besides the thefts, the investiga- tion disclosed that with the connivance of Bureau of Posts employes, the mails were widely used for smuggling narcotics, jewels and silks.

Unwitting Quota Violator, Long in U. S., Is Deported

Dairy Expert Who Moved to Montana From Canada Shipped to Scotland With Wife and Children.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—John Donaldson Ross, Scottish dairy ex- pert, who unwittingly violated the United States immigration quota law by moving into Willow Glen, Mont., from Canada several years ago, was deported back to Scot- land today on the Adriatic, despite all the efforts of the Anaconda Copper Co., his employers, to keep him here.

With him went his wife, born in Scotland but reared in Canada, and the two small daughters, one born in Canada and the other in the United States.

They arrived at Ellis Island four days ago after a long trip across the country from Montana aboard a special train filled with deportees, many of them recruit- ed from penitentiaries and asy- lums.

Ross came from Scotland to Canada eight years ago. There he married, and one daughter was born before the Rosses crossed into Montana.

Entirely ignorant of the fact that he had violated immigration laws, Ross said, he got work as a farmhand on a dairy farm owned by the Anaconda Copper Co.

Ross is alert, intelligent and in- dustrious, and he had received ex- cellent training on his father's farm back in Scotland. Dr. H. C. Gardner, chief of all the dairy projects of the Anaconda Copper Co., became interested in him and a few months ago made him super- intendent of the ranch at Willow Glen.

Then somebody informed immi- gration authorities that Ross was living in the United States in vio- lation of immigration laws. He and his family were ordered deported, although Dr. Gardner did his ut- most to get a more lenient ruling from Washington. Ross was not even permitted to go back to Canada.

apply alike to all classes of insur- ance affected by the order.

Thelaw under which the reduc- tion was ordered provides that aft- er issuance of such a reduction or- der, if the companies do not spec- ify to what classes they will apply the reduction, within 30 days, the Superintendent shall issue the clas- sification order.

77 Apparently Relieved.

The companies made no move to specify classification, and the De- partment made none until Feb. 1, 1928, on the advice of counsel that the order was a mere formality be- cause of the agreement in the stip- ulation. That mistake apparently relieves 77 of the companies from any refunds for excess premium collections prior to Feb. 1, 1928.

Attorneys for the companies con- tend the effective date of the order for all of the companies is Feb. 1, 1928, the date of the classification order by the Insurance Depart- ment. The 114 companies which signed the stipulation were denied injunctions against enforcement of the reduction, by the Federal Dis- trict Court, and have taken steps to appeal to the United States Su- preme Court. Forty-one other companies, not signing the stipula- tion, were granted temporary in- junctions, which are pending final hearing.

While advising resistance of any effort to colect refunds back of Feb. 1, 1928, the Subscribers' Ac- tuarial Committee, in its letter, urges prompt action by the com- panies to make refunds to policy- holders on policies from Feb. 1, 1928, and urged the companies to conduct the matter so as to "leave no opportunity for criticism or challenge respecting entire good faith."

Committee Recommendations.

The committee recommended:

That the companies comply with the rate order as of Feb. 1, 1928, "which we regard as the effective date of the rate order as to all companies, if valid."

Prompt refunds to policyhold- ers on all policies issued, effec- tive on or after Feb. 1, 1928, in the amount of 10 per cent of premiums on fire, lightning, hail and windstorm insurance in Mis- souri, except automobile insur- ance.

That refunds be made through the company agents or other ap- propriate mediums available, "and we recommend that the matter be acted upon diligently and in agood faith effort to re- turn the moneys to every policy- holder entitled thereto."

That accurate records of the refunds be kept, and of the ef- forts made where its return may prove impracticable or impossi- ble.

One issue in the controversy not affecting the policyholders, but of considerable importance to the company agents, has been the posi- tion to be taken by the companies as to requiring their agents to re- turn a proportionate part of their commissions to the companies if the refunds were enforced. Many of the several thousand agents in the State have been apprehensive the companies would require the agents to make such a refund, and the Insurance Department has been notified that such action would bankrupt many of the agencies.

Advice to Agents.

The Actuarial Committee, in this connection, recommended that the comanies ask the agents to aid in making the refunds, and forego asking the agents to return any of their commissions, except for the period from last Feb. 1. This pe- riod, representing slightly more than six months, "more or less rep- resents current business," the com- mittee stated.

"It is the opinion of the commit- tee that if it were undertaken to exact the full return commission from every agent," the letter stated, "it would go far to defeat any ef- fort to re-establish business in Mis- souri upon a basis where it would be practicable to continue it with a hope of real co-operation and friendly help from all interests con- cerned."

Representatives of the agents had indicated they would resist any move to force return of a propor- tion of their commissions, on the ground the commissions were earned on rates prescribed by the companies and that the agents could not have charged any other rates.

The Actuarial Committee recom- mended a form of receipt to be used in handling the refunds. The Insurance Department was in- formed the Missouri Inspection Bu- reau, representing all of the com- panies in Missouri, is having 1,- 000,000 such reprints printed, in preparation for making the refunds back to Feb. 1, 1928.

FINDS PORTMANN'S DEATH WAS NATURAL

Doctor Makes Test of Real Estate Dealer's Body, Ordered Exhumed by Relatives.

A chemical analysis and examin- ation of the body of William W. Portmann, 71-year-old real estate dealer, exhumed Friday at Belle- fontaine Cemetery at the request of relatives who are contesting his will, yesterday substantiated the diagnosis of the attending physi- cian.

Dr. R. B. H. Gradwohl, who made the analysis and examination in his laboratory, concluded that Portmann died of aneurism of the aorta, kidney disease and arterio- sclerosis (hardening of the arter- ies), substantiating the diagnosis of Dr. Edward Snyder, 3535 North Newstead avenue, who was called in shortly before Portmann's death.

The body was exhumed at the request of a brother and sister, Fred H. Portmann and Mrs. Eliza- beth Woempner, who said they were not satisfied that Portmann died of natural causes. They paid the expenses of disinterment.

Portmann died at his home, 3901 North Taylor avenue, March 13, and his housekeeper, Mrs. Chris- tine Spindler, 62, was the chief beneficiary under his will. The brother, sister and several nephews and nieces joined in a contest of the will, alleging undue influence. Portmann's estate consisted of three pieces of real estate, said to have been assessed at $30,000, and about $3000 in personal property. He willed about $8700 to various relatives and friends, giving Mrs. Spindler the residue of his estate.

$3339 CUSTOMS FINE PAID BY HEAD OF NEW YORK SUN

W. T. Dewart Failed to Declare Considerable Amount of Foreign Made Goods, Officers Report.

By Leased Wire from the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—The New York World learned today that Wil- liam T. Dewart, president of the Sun, who returned July 9 from Eu- rope and declared $375 of dutiable articles was later fined $3,339.46 by customs officials for failure to in- clude on his declaration papers household goods and wearing ap- parel, bought in Europe, and valued by the officials at $1669.73.

This information was obtained and the facts authenticated through Washington officials.

Dewart arrived July 9 on the Majestic. He filed a declaration re- turn for $375 worth of dutiable ar- ticles, but the Customs officer, on going through his 42 pieces of bag- gage, found a considerable amount of undeclared foreign-made goods and refused to allow Dewart to take his luggage off the pier. The trunks then were taken to the Cus- toms warehouse and turned over to the appraisers.

After appraisal, it was found the foreign value of the undeclared goods was $1029 and the American value, plus duty, was $1669.73. At a hearing the next day, Dewart was represented by an attorney who of- fered no satisfactory explanation why the goods found in the trunk had not been declared.

Dewart was fined twice the amount of the appraised valuation, and, upon paying the fine, was permitted to take his luggage. The findings of this hearing were kept secret several weeks. They were not made public until they were filed in Washington.

Dewart long has been affiliated with the Munsey interests. Upon the death of the latter, in Decem- ber, 1925, it was found his will con- tained the provision that Dewart be elected to the presidency of all the Munsey enterprises. This was complied with, as well as the pro- vision in the will that the proper- ties be liquidated for the benefit of the Metropolitan Museum of Art. Dewart became a trustee un- der the Munsey will.

Among the Munsey interests were the Sun and the Telegram. In 1926, Dewart became president of a corporation which purchased these two newspapers from the Munsey estate. In 1927 the Tele- gram was sold to the Scripps-How- ard chain.

Dewart, when in New York, lives at 660 Park avenue. He has a summer residence at Alexandria Bay. He is married and has three children, William T. Jr., Thomas Wheeler and Mary. His wife was Mary Louise Wheeler, daughter of Commodore and Mrs. Thomas H. Wheeler.

ONE LIFE LOST, MUCH DAMAGE DONE BY STORM IN CHILE

Sea Wall at Antofagasta Wrecked; Trans-Andean Train Snow-bound in Tunnel.

By the Associated Press.

SANTIAGO, Chile, Aug. 10.—A storm that raged all last night did damage over almost the full length of the Chilean coast. In the moun- tains to the east it took the form of a blizzard.

A tug boat was sunk and its cap- tain drowned and several lighters and launches were lost at Magel- lanes in the extreme south. Two British cruisers escaped by putting out to sea. The $1,600,000 break- water at Antofagasta was destroyed and damage was done at Valpa- raiso, Miramar and Talcahuano.

All train service and air service between Chile and Argentina was suspended. Passengers on one trans-Andean train were snow- bound in a tunnel.

POWERS DECIDE TO MEET ISSUE ON REPARATIONS

tion of reparations would not be changed.

"The honor of at least one coun- try is involved in this," the Chan- cellor said.

A Question of Veracity.

Turning to Italy, he declared that Alberto Pirelli, Italian dele- gate, also had made a similar promise to Sir Austen Chamber- lain, former British Foreign Sec- retary. Pirelli denied this, where- upon the Chancellor remarked: "It is a pity the minutes were not kept of the conversation."

The rest of the financial com- mittee appeared somewhat startled by this time and the hopes based on the quiet opening of the ses- sion appeared to be blasted.

Snowden continued his criticism declaring an interpretation of the famous Balfour note made by Cheron to be "grotesque and ri- diculous." The interpreter left out these words when he translated the speech into French but Cheron, already aware of what had been said, smiled without comment.

The French were particularly af- fected by the Chancellor's criticism of former Premier Poincare and Cheron. Even Premier Briand was said to have been put out by the Chancellor's method of discussion.

Later Snowden apologized for language to Cheron.

Baron Houtart, president of the Financial Committee, gave out the following statement:

"It having been rumored that Mr. Snowden in a private session of the Financial Committee this morning, had, in reply to Mr. Cheron, pronounced words that were offensive to the latter, Baron Houtart, president of the commit- tee, went to see Mr. Snowden, who at once declared that nothing was farther from his thoughts than to say anything whatever offensive of M. Cheron.

"The words which he had used in speaking of the interpretation of the Balfour note by the Minister of Finances are not, in the English language, offensive or unparlia- mentary. He was entirely ignorant that they had an offensive signifi- cation in French.

"Had he supposed that his words might provoke an offensive inter- pretation, he would certainly not have pronounced them. As soon as his attention was called to the mis- understanding, he did not hesitate to have them erased from the record."

There remain three speeches to be heard in the general discussion of the Financial Committee on Monday, after which it is expected Snowden will call for action on his resolution for modification. Un- less he modifies it in the mean- time so that the subcommittee to examine the Young plan shall not be asked to report on the revised draft in accordance with the Brit- ish demands, it is believed that it will be defeated. The expectation is that if the British delegation will not accept the defeat, the confer- ence will terminate.

$600,000 IN JEWELS TAKEN BY BURGLAR

Robbery at Summer Home of S. E. Hutchinson While Family Sleeps.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SALEM, Mass., Aug. 10.—A bur- glar entered the summer home of S. E. Hutchinson, Philadelphia financier, at West Beach, Beverly Farms, early today and obtained jewelry estimated to be worth more than $600,000. George A. Dobyne of St. Louis has his sum- mer home on the opposite side of the bay.

The thief entered the bedrooms of three sleeping members of the Hutchinson family. A string of 150 matched pearls worth $1000 a pearl, belonging to Mrs. Hutchin- son, formerly Miss Edith Stotes- bury, was taken from her bureau not three feet from where she slept.

A few days ago $5000 worth of jewelry was stolen from the sum- mer home of Godfrey L. Cabot at Beverly Farms.

The robbery of the Hutchinson home apparently was carefully planned. Several days ago a pet poodle belonging to a married daughter of the Hutchinsons was drugged. Although the animal was in one of the looted rooms during the night, it had not recov- ered sufficiently to give the alarm.

The thief was detected at work when Mrs. Hutchinson was awak- ened by the glare of a flashlight. Her screams awakened other mem- bers of the household. Beverly Farms police searched the house and neighborhood for hours with- out finding a trace of the burglar, who fled when Mrs. Hutchinson screamed. His escape, police think, was made in a speed boat running with muffled exhaust.

Besides the $150,000 pearl neck- lace, the burglar stole a diamond pin with emerald clasp, one large pearl pendant and a string of pearls, a black heart, a solitaire diamond, a large diamond and pearl pin and three diamond brace- lets from Mrs. Hutchinson's room. In Hutchinson's room the thief took a pearl clasp pin, but missed $700 in cash on the bureau.

FORMER TEACHER OF MISS HIX AIDS SNOOK DEFENSE

Dr. C. S. Smith Among 11 Witnesses Called in Effort to Show Frenzy Was Motive in Killing.

CLASH OVER DRUG IN WOMAN'S STOMACH

Defendant's Attorney, J. F. Seidel, Tells of Difficulty in Interviewing Client at Time of Arrest.

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 10. — Eleven witnesses were called by the defense today in its effort to bear out contentions that James H. Snook, veterinary, was temporarily insane and struck in self-defense when he killed Miss Theora Hix, Ohio State University student.

Chemists and physicians attempted to describe what was in the sandwiches supposed to have been eaten by Snook and the young woman when she was killed on a lonely rifle range near Columbus the night of June 13.

Among the witnesses were: Robert Terry, pharmaceutical chemist; Dr. Clayton S. Smith, professor of pharmacology and physiology who taught Miss Hix when she was a medical student at Ohio State; Dr. Frank W. Harrah, who made an examination of marks on Snook's body, which the defendant claims were inflicted by the woman, and finally John F. Seidel, one of Snook's attorneys. Seidel related in detail the trouble he encountered in obtaining permission to interview his client while he was under arrest.

Disagreement Over Concoction.

Through Chemist Terry the defense attacked the testimony of Chemist Charles F. Long, a State witness, in regard to the stimulating narcotic concoction which Long said he found in the stomach of Miss Hix, mixed in undigested beef.

Chemist Long testified that his microscopic examination disclosed without question that the cellular tissue and the substance of two excitement narcotics were similar to the samples taken from Snook's office.

But Chemist Terry testified that the cellular tissue, by which Long had isolated and identified the substance in the woman's stomach, was not visible in samples of the narcotic to which Snook had access, supporting the defense protest that if the preparations actually were in the woman's stomach she was responsible for placing them there.

Why Snook Struck Woman.

In Snook's account of the killing, as related on the witness stand, he said he struck Miss Hix the first blow with a hammer which he had in the car, to loosen her grasp on him. They had gone to the darkened rifle range, he said, because the girl did not wish to stay that warm night in a room they maintained in an apartment house.

Until about a week ago Snook did not disclose even to his attorney the marks which he said were made on his body by Miss Hix when she attacked him. His counsel had him examined Aug. 2 by Dr. Harrah, who today told the story that bruises were visible when he made the examination, although he was unable to say how long ago they had been inflicted.

SPANISH WAR VETERAN, 60, SAYS DRY AGENT BEAT HIM

Warrant Out for Willard Mogland Who Had Just Returned After Suspension.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 10.—A warrant charging assault and battery on a 60-year-old Spanish-American War veteran was sworn out yesterday against Federal Prohibition Agent Willard Mogland who had just returned to the dry force after a 60-day suspension for alleged improper arrest.

The recent charges against Mogland were made by John Randecker, restaurant proprietor, who asserted that during a raid the dry agent struck him twice in the face as he was pouring a pitcher of denatured alcohol into a sink.

Randecker, who exhibited a blackened eye and bruised nose, said he did not resist the agents.

Three other dry agents who accompanied Mogland in the raid admitted that there had been a struggle between their companion and the gray-haired proprietor, but denied that Mogland had hit the veteran. Mogland did not appear at the hearing and he is being sought on the warrant.

TWO SOVIET GUARDS REPORTED KILLED BY WHITE RUSSIANS

Eight Others Wounded at Chernaevo on Amur; Gunboat Ordered to Scene.

By the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, Aug. 10.—Reports from the Manchurian Frontier say two Russian Frontier guards had been killed and eight wounded by White Russian soldiers at the village of Chernaevo, near the Amur River.

A Russian gunboat and a small detachment of troops were ordered to proceed at once to the village.

SEVEN WONDERS OF NEW YORK

Several Left Out in Merchants' Bureau Selection.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—The seven wonders of New York City have been named. Outstripping 76 other competitors for the honors in a contest conducted by the Merchants' Bureau, were, in the following order: The Woolworth Building, subway system, Great White Way, Metropolitan Art Museum, Holland Tunnel, Statue of Liberty and New York's sky line.

Among other suggested wonders were the Brooklyn bridge, Coney Island, Wall street, the railroad terminals, stock exchange, Chinatown, medical center, Riverside Drive, Grant's Tomb, the shopping district and Columbia University.

To Complete Oriental Church Code.

VATICAN CITY, Aug. 10.—A code for the Oriental church, similar to the code of the canon law for the Latin church, begun under Pope Pius X, will soon be completed. A commission has been appointed headed by Monsignor Dherbigny, president of the Pontifical Oriental Institute.

When you hear a Wurlitzer Piano you will recognize the genuine artistic merit—the "soul quality"—so characteristic of the Wurlitzer.

Rich, mellow tones of the lower register and a clear, crystal-line timbre of the upper satisfy the artist's need for delicacy with resonance and sweetness with power.

Whether you are now considering the purchase of a piano or not we cordially invite you to hear a Wurlitzer. Visitors are always welcome at the Wurlitzer Studios. Grand Pianos from $625 to $5000 Players from $395 to $650 Uprights from $295 to $495

SWISS FLYERS STILL MISSING

Three Took Off Thursday From Le Bourget for Lisbon.

LE BOURGET, France, Aug. 10.—The disappearance of the three Swiss aviators, who left here Thursday supposedly for Lisbon, tonight was as puzzling as ever. Nothing had been heard of them since they started on what was announced as the preliminary to a trans-Atlantic attempt.

It was hoped they had been merely forced down in some out of the way place. Had there been a serious accident it was thought certain that word of it would have reached Paris or Switzerland, unless they fell in the sea and were lost.

ST. CLAIR OFFICIALS SAY DOG RACERS OFFERED $100,000

State's Attorney and Sheriff Tell of Proposition Made in 1927 by Agents of "Eastern Syndicate."

Earnings of dog race tracks are so attractive that an "Eastern syndicate" offered State's Attorney Lindauer and Sheriff Ahrens of St. Clair County, lump sums of $50,000 each and $200 a day each during race meets for tacit permission to conduct a track in their county.

This offer, made in June, 1927, became public yesterday when both officials told of the effort to give competition to the Madison Kennel Club, operating on the Collinsville highway in Madison County, by construction of a track nearer St. Louis.

Names of emissaries and details of the proposed track could not be recalled by either official, both having dismissed them with a flat refusal.

Calls Dog Racing Illegal.

While horse racing is recognized by Illinois statute, legalizing and regulating the sport, and assessing a $2500 daily tax during operation, dog racing is not regulated and is looked upon by Lindauer as illegal. Chicago dog tracks were closed recently by raids and injunctions, but the Madison Club has been free from official interference.

"A couple of fellows who said they represented an Eastern syndicate came into my office in June two years ago," State's Attorney Lindauer said. "I asked them what their syndicate was organized for and they replied that they had $100,000 to invest in a dog race-track, since the crowds at the Madison Kennel Club, then operating, indicated that the sport was popular in St. Louis and the district and that two tracks could operate profitably.

Doesn't Recall Their Names.

"'There is $50,000 each in it for you and the Sheriff if we locate here,' they said. I told them that a dog track was unquestionably a gambling plant and that I would not permit any such establishment in St. Clair County. That closed the incident. I don't recall their names and I don't know whom they represented. They said that they operated tracks in New York State, but I don't remember where. That is the only time I have ever been approached by dog track promoters."

Sheriff Ahrens told of a visit by the same men who made their offer even more attractive by promising $200 a day for himself and Lindauer each day of a racing meet. Likewise, he declared it to be the only time dog track promoters talked to him.

Other dog track promoters, seeing the success of the Madison Club, now operating for its fourth year, have sought to enter the St. Louis district. St. Clair County, because of its proximity to St. Louis, would be a more favorable location than the Madison County plant.

Madison Track Profitable.

Petitions filed in court recently in connection with litigation over the estate of the late Martin J. Hyland, president of the Madison Kennel Club, alleged that the track paid dividends of $30,000 weekly during operation to his widow. While Mrs. Hyland declared the statement ridiculous, and dog men consider the estimate rather high, it is known that the track, operating on the Collinsville highway without competition, is a highly profitable venture.

The Madison Club has been successful in its monopoly in the sport through shrewd promotion and management. When Tony Foley, gambling house proprietor, threatened its business by opening the Ramona Kennel Club in St. Louis County two years ago, he was soon put out of business with little, if any, expense.

Aligning themselves with political elements opposed to those who made it possible for Foley to run, the Madison owners acquired property on the St. Charles road for the Wellstone Kennel Club and, working day and night, soon were competing on both sides of the river, both tracks operating profitably.

County officials at the time—Fred E. Mueller, prosecuting attorney, and Albert A. Wilmas, sheriff—offered no objection when Foley announced he would build a track, and the Madison organization met no interference.

Wellston Club Paid for Self.

Preferring to operate one track if there was no competition and being firmly entrenched in Madison County, the East Side syndicate welcomed public sentiment in St. Louis County which resulted in Mueller's filing injunction suits a year later and closing county tracks as general nuisances. The Wellston Club, although operated only for a few months, had paid for itself, dog racing men say.

Foley invaded enemy territory with his bankroll last spring, buying 32 acres of land in Monroe County south of Dupo, Ill., and announcing that he would start work on the Monroe Kennel Club. Nothing has been done so far, but the track will be ready for operation next spring, Foley, who has a reputation for shrewdness, said.

"Or," he said pleasantly, "we may strike oil down there."

SMOOT SLIDING SUGAR SCALE GOES INTO SCRAP HEAP

Utah Senator Announces Committee Thinks It Ill-Advised to Press the Proposal.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—The opposition voiced by the sugar industry to the proposed sliding scale duty on that commodity today led Republican members of the Senate Finance Committee to throw the plan into the legislative waste heap.

Chairman Smoot, who sponsored the proposal, announced it was the consensus o fthe 11 Republican Committee members that, in view of the position taken by the industry, it would be ill-advised to press for its adoption.

No vote by the committee was announced. Immediately after this decision, speculation turned to a vote expected next week on a flat rate on sugar. This talk centered around a possible cut in the House rate.

Ever since the House approved an increase in the rate from 1.76 cents against Cuba to 2.40 cents, and against other foreign sugar from 2.20 to 3 cents, a loud cry of protest has been heard from many quarters, especially from the Democrats from non-sugar states and those who profess to speak for the consumer.

Many of G. O. P. Oppose Increase.

Many Republicans, too, have voiced strong opposition to the proposed increase, which never was put to a direct vote in the House.

At the White House the only official statement ever made on the sugar tariff was that the President favored a plan that would protect both the producer and consumer. That is what Senator Smoot contended the sliding scale would do. The Utah Senator also had predicted that the chief executive would approve his scale.

In an effort to meet some of the objections raised to his original scale, the committee chairman had undertaken the preparation of a new scale. He had hoped to complete this plan by Monday, but the opinion of his committee colleagues was such, he said, as to make further work on any scale fruitless.

Changes in Wool Rates.

Besides the decision on the sugar duty, the committee today approved a general readjustment downward of the proposed manufactured wool rates as a result of their action yesterday in approving elimination of the House increase of 3 cents a pound in the duty on raw wool.

Some of the proposed processed wool rates would be raised, however, under other amendments approved. The present rate of 7½ cents a pound on wool rags, which the House raised to 8 cents, would be made 24 cents by one amendment, while others would boost the House duty of 21 cents a pound on noils to 28 cents on carbonized and 23 cents on uncarbonized noils. The present law provides 24 cents on carbonized and 19 cents on uncarbonized.

Another amendment approved would leave the House rate on wool flocks at eight cents a pound against a present levy of 7½ cents.

After completing consideration of the wool schedule, the committeeman began work on the new sundries section, and discussed for two hours the proposed 10 per cent duty on hides, now on the free list but reached no decision.

Five Corporations Remain to Be Dissolved, Says Chief of Dissolved Order.

By the Associated Press.

OMMEN, NETHERLANDS, Aug. 10—Although discontinuance of the Order of the Star of the East was decreed by Jidu Krishnamurti, young Hindu theosophist, in order to emphasize the freedom of each individual to express his inner beliefs in his own way, D. Rajagopal, chief of the dissolved order, explained today that considerable mechanism was still necessary to serve the movement.

There exist five distinct corporations whose purpose is dissemination of the teachings of Krishnamurti. They are the Publishing Trust, Eerde Foundation, Ojai Camp Corporation, Rishi Valley Trust and the Amphitheater Trust. Krishnamurti intends to keep Castle Eerde as an international center for theosophist activities.

Ojai, Cal., remains the center of American activities and Krishnamurti intends to continue yearly camps to give American theosophists opportunity to come into personal contact with him. He will also maintain the India headquarters and that in Sydney, Australia. Under his direction the name Star will be preserved in connection with theosophist activities "for practical purposes alone and is not used with any occult or mystic significance."

Supposedly Poor, Leaves $14,000.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Aug. 10.—When an 81-year-old janitress, Mme. Marie Louise Jacon, died suddenly, neighbors volunteered to pay her funeral expenses. She had for years lived on food given her by tenants. Police searched her room and found cash and bonds worth $14,000.

I. C. C. TO MAKE THOROUGH STUDY OF EXCESS FARES

Hearings to Begin Oct. 15 on Application of 12 Railroads for Authority to Continue System.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—The practice of Eastern railroads in charging extra fares for the transportation of passengers on desirable trains is to be thoroughly aired before the Interstate Commerce Commission, it was learned today.

The commission has ordered hearings to begin here on Oct. 15 on the application of the Eastern roads for relief from the "aggregate of intermediate fares" provision of the fourth section of the Interstate Commerce act.

This is said to be the first time that such an application in respect to passenger fares, on account of conditions created by extra fares, has been sought by the railroads. Railroad revenues aggregating $9,000,000 a year, it has been estimated, will be placed in jeopardy.

In other words, if relief is not accorded, and the railroads do not or cannot bring the combinations of local fares up to the level of the through fares now in excess of the locals, that amount of money will have to be given up on account of the prohibition of the fourth section.

Railroads named in the request for relief are the Baltimore & Ohio, Lackawanna, Erie, Lehigh Valley, New York Central, West Shore, Big Four, Pennsylvania, Grand Trunk, Michigan Central, Nickel Plate and Wabash.

Their application is for "authority to maintain extra fares on fast trains between points on lines of said roads in New York, New Jersey, Delaware, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Ohio, Michigan, Illinois, Indiana, St. Louis, Mo., and Windsor, Ont., without observing the aggregate-of-intermediate-fares provision of the fourth section of the Interstate Commerce act."

Informally, the matter of extra fares has been under discussion between the commission and the railroads for more than six months. It is understood that the roads intended canceling some of the extra fare tariffs because they probably could not show that the services rendered differed from those given on what have been called ordinary trains.

"Non-resident owner will sacrifice WONDERFUL OZARK SPRING. Flows over 20 million gallons per day, develops 24 horsepower, electrical possibilities. Property includes old grist mill in operation, spring stream and one-third mile river frontage. Best of fishing, hunting and mountain scenery. Wonderful buy at $8000. Terms if desired. Fred J. Foster, owner. Box 72, Yellowstone National Park, Wyoming."

PANTAGES ARRAIGNED ON DANCER'S CHARGES

Two Offenses Alleged in Complaint Against Theater Man —He Gives Bond.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 10.—Alexander Pantages, millionaire theater operator, today was charged with two offenses against a 16-year-old dancer, Eunice Pringle, in a complaint issued by District Attorney Fitts.

Pantages was taken to Municipal Court shortly after the complaint was made out and arraigned. He was ordered to return Wednesday for preliminary hearing and was released on $25,000 bond.

The two counts accused Pantages of a statutory offense and an attack by force and violence. Pantages denied the girl's charges and declared he was being blackmailed.

Miss Pringle reported Pantages attacked her in his office late yesterday after she had gone there seeking to regain her place on his theater circuit.

The complaint was issued after the District Attorney had conferred with the girl and Pantages and Dr. Hanna Beatty of the Juvenile Bureau.

Dr. Beatty reported an examination of the girl substantiated her accusations.

The arrest of Pantages was the second in the family recently. Mrs. Lois Pantages, his wife, is at liberty on $50,000 bond pending trial Sept. 2 on second degree murder charges growing out of the death of Joe Rokumoto, a Japanese, in an automobile collision last June. It was alleged that she was intoxicated when the car she was driving collided with that of the Japanese.

POPE IS ASKED TO PROCLAIM BODILY ASCENSION OF VIRGIN

Petition of 70 Bishops Is Coupled With Appeal for Dignity in Women's Dress.

By the Associated Press.

VATICAN CITY, Aug. 10.—A movement to induce the Pope to proclaim dogmatically the assumption of the Virgin Mary—her ascension into heaven bodily as well as spiritually—has taken on new life through an appeal to the pontiff by 70 Italian bishops and numerous heads of religious orders It is probable that it will be taken up at the coming Ecumenical Council.

Coupled with this appeal was a protest against exaggerations in dress in favor of the dignity of woman. The purpose of the petition was said to be "a plebiscite of love among Catholics throughout the world to honor the sanctity of dress and to obtain from the Catholic Church a dogmatic definition of the glories of her assumed into heaven in soul and body."

WOMAN ATTACKED BY THREE

Found Hysterical After Being Put Out of Auto in County.

A 20-year-old divorcee of Herrin, Ill., was taken to the city hospital yesterday morning after she was found by two Deputy Sheriffs at Bonhomme and Grady roads, St. Louis County, suffering from hysteria.

She said she came to St. Louis last Sunday seeking employment and that she was criminally attacked by a young man she had met casually and by two of his friends. They put her out of their auto after the attack and drove away, she said.

For cooler homes in summer, warmer homes in winter and less fuel waste . . .

GUARD YOUR ROOFLINE

WITH CANE-FIBRE INSULATION

. . . build new rooms out of wasted attic space

DON'T let all this valuable attic space simply go to waste. There are three or four new rooms that you can build easily and inexpensively with Celotex... rooms pleasantly cool in summer, comfortable and warm in winter.

You can have the new bedroom you need so badly when you have an extra house guest. There's plenty of space for an attractive living room that may soon become the most popular room in the entire house. And you can give the children a playroom of their own, fully protected from drafts and dampness.

Simply remodel your attic with Celotex. For Celotex builds as well as insulates... provides the structural strength you need for tight, strong walls and ceilings... makes permanent rooms out of space that is now completely wasted.

Roofs lined with Celotex assure more even, pleasant temperatures the year 'round... resist the passage of scorching sun's rays . . . retard the leakage of furnace heat.

Celotex is the only insulation made from the long, tough fibres of cane. It comes in big, strong boards that measure 4 feet wide, from 7 to 12 feet long and 7/16" thick. Celotex Lath comes in units measuring 18" by 48" and 7/16" thick. It is especially designed to reinforce against plaster cracks and eliminate lath marks . . . helps provide smooth, enduring plaster interiors.

Thousands of families remodel their attics with Celotex quickly, easily, economically ...are using cane-fibre insulation to line basements and garages, to insulate roofs and sun porches.

Ask your architect, builder or dealer to help you transform your attic into pleasant, livable rooms...or write for further information on how to utilize the waste space in your attic or basement, and save on fuel money as well.

Now
with extra strength . . .
extra insulating value

Now, you can also have "double-thick" Celotex. This stronger, more rigid Celotex comes in boards 4 feet wide and from 7 to 12 feet long but measures approximately 7/8 of an inch thick. This extra thickness assures even greater insulation value and greater structural strength. Simply ask for "double-thick" Celotex.
Celotex Lath can also be ordered "double-thick" in units measuring 18 by 48 inches and 7/8 of an inch thick.

Be sure it's CANE-FIBRE Insulation!
Only Celotex is made from the long, tough fibres of cane. The peculiar advantages of cane-fibre insulation cannot be obtained in any other material. Be sure you get CELOTEX!

REALLY IN WORKHOUSE, LEGALLY OUT ON BOND

George Uich's Singular Experience Uncovered in Bail Forfeiture Claim.

George Uich's encounters with the law have been many and various. Within a year he has been charged with peace disturbance, adjudged guilty and fined; he appealed and his appeal bond was forfeited; he has been picked up on the bond forfeiture and then paroled, although, in spite of his appeal, he went to the workhouse by mistake and served 30 days for the original peace disturbance. And the end is not yet.

Uich's adventures with the law were disclosed in the Court of Criminal Correction before Judge Bader yesterday, when Leo Biedermann, a professional bondsman, sought to have a $500 bond forfeiture set aside by producing Uich in court.

There it was shown Uich, who is 29 years old and lives at 16 South Seventh street, was arrested July 22, 1928, on a charge of disturbing the peace of Helen Zakowsky, 1405 Pine street. After a hearing in police court on July 25, a fine of $100 and costs was imposed. Uich appealed, with Biedermann as surety, but at this juncture something went wrong. It seems the execution which had been issued was not recalled from the City Marshal and Uich went to the workhouse, from which he was discharged after 30 days.

While in the workhouse Uich's appeal and bond began running in the Court of Criminal Correction. Of course Uich did not appear and in due course the bond was ordered forfeited.

Recently Biedermann saw Uich on the street and saw the chance to have his forfeiture set aside. He called for Uich's apprehension and yesterday Uich was again haled to court. He was not particularly interested in Biedermann's forfeiture, as he had not profited in liberty on his bond. Nevertheless Judge Bader set the forfeiture aside, and paroled Uich to Oct. 5 to determine if he is the man who appealed his case but served his sentence.

CORN LOWER, WHEAT UNCHANGED TO HIGHER

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, Aug. 10.—Wheat futures were unchanged to higher and corn lower at the close of the final session of the week on the local market. The wheat trade had both the United States and Canadian crop reports to interpret. Higher Liverpool caused temporary advance early. Report of forecast for beneficial rains was calle factor in corn trade.

In the cash grain market Saturday, soft wheat was generally steady. Offerings were lighter and mostly No. 3s, and there was a ready demand. No. 2 was selling at $1.30@1.31, basis 3½@4c under Chicago September, top prices late for bright, plump-berried wheat. Average qualities of No. 3 at $1.26@1.27, selected heavy test bright wheat at $1.28, thin dark, 56@56½-lb wheat a $1.25. Garlicky grades were in demand at discounts of 3c for light, 7@8c for medium and 10c for heavy. Hard wheat was steady. Some No. 3s sold at ½c and 1c higher levels. There was a good demand at about the same basis as compared to futures, with No. 2 selling at 6½c and 8c below the Chicago September figure. Offerings were absorbed by mills and elevator interests. Prices on mixed corn were unchanged, while sales of white and yellow were at 1½c and 2c lower prices. A good demand was furnished by elevators, industries and shippers. White oats were steady, but mixed and red were off ½c. There was a good demand from shippers.

Opening strong on the advance at Liverpool, prices there closing 1⅝d to 2⅛d higher; the market here turned around. Winnipeg also reacted from opening advance. Corn opened unchanged to lower and sold off. The Government crop report issued after the close yesterday showed 13,000,000 bushels less corn than the average of private estimates, while official figures on wheat were 7,000,000 above the unofficial forecasts.

September wheat opened at $1.32. December wheat $1.42. September corn $1.05⅝, and December corn 97c.

Local wheat receipts, which were 280,000 bushels compared with 449,400 a week ago and 438,200 a year ago, included 146 cars local and 54 through. Corn receipts, which were 120,400 bushels, compared with 58,800 a week ago and 100,000 a year ago, included 60 cars local and 17 through. Oats receipts, which were 132,200 bushels, compared with 127,600 a week ago and 202,000 a year ago, included 51 through. Hay receipts were 5 cars local.

PRICE TENDENCY HIGHER AT CLOSE IN CHICAGO

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 10.—Despite some bearish aspects both of the Canadian and United States government crop reports, wheat prices today closed with a distinct upward slant. Many violent fluctuations were witnessed.

Chicago closing quotations on wheat were nervous at the same as yesterday's finish to 2⅝c higher. Corn closed 5c to 1½c net lower, oats ¾c off to a shade up, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 7c.

At first, the wheat market here was largely dominated by the fact that Liverpool quotations showed an unexpected sharp uptrend, traders abroad construing the United States crop report as bullish. Chicago prices quickly receded, however, when the fact became known that the acreage which foreigners attached to the report was because of circumstances that had been to a great degree discounted here beforehand. The new official figures from Washington, nevertheless, confirmed immediate deterioration of the domestic spring wheat crop, as well as severe losses in domestic winter wheat, it was contended. On the other hand, the Washington report also indicated 7,000,000 bushels increase on yield of all domestic wheat as compared with recent private estimates.

Evidence pointing to a large amount of export business in wheat overnight from the United States led afterward to price rallies until word was received that Canadian Government crop condition figures, issued today, were considerably above what had been generally expected. The Canadian Government figures implied that the 1929 yield of wheat in Canada would aggregate 250,000,000 to 260,000,000 bushels. A sudden drop in prices here ensued, but with the Winnipeg market showing a quick recovery, the Chicago market promptly resumed a decided upward course, especially as the fact was recalled that the wheat crop of Canada last year totaled 538,000,000 bushels. The real essence of the two Government crop reports, it was urged, is that the 1929 North American wheat crop is 400,000,000 bushels less than a year ago. Seaboard reported export business in all positions small.

Somewhat better corn crop conditions, including a forecast of beneficial rains, did much to weaken the corn market, although early in the day the chief price-making factor was a bullish construction placed on the Government crop report as to corn. Bullish crop comments from the Canadian Northwest had but little effect on oats.

Provisions went higher early, but afterward sagged as a result of selling by scattered holders of lard.

COTTON CLOSES EASY ON A LOWER BASIS

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—An early advance in the cotton market today was attributed to week-end covering and declines followed which carried prices into new low ground for the movement under a renewal of liquidation combined with local and Southern selling. December sold off from 18.49c to 18.23c and closed at 18.29c, compared with 18.38c at the close of the previous day. The general market closed easy at net declines of 2 to 14 points.

The market opened steady at a decline of 5 points to an advance of 1 point. There may have been a little selling on the reports of showers in the Southwest and relatively easy Liverpool cables, but it was quite readily absorbed, and the market firmed up right after the call on covering for over the week-end. Some local buying was reported on a belief that the recent decline had improved the technical position of the market, while there was also some bullish comment on weather conditions to the effect that dry sections of the Southwest had not yet received sufficient rainfall and that showers in the Eastern belt were stimulating weevil. The advance extended to 18.28c for October and 18.78c for March, or about 10 to 10 points above yesterday's closing quotations, with November contracts showing a recovery of 28 points from yesterday's low level. The demand then tapered off as if the demand from shorts had been pretty well supplied, and the market broke later in the morning under a renewal of liquidation followed with reselling by local traders and some selling from the South which was supposed to represent hedging. October declined to 17.96c and March to 18.50c making net declines of 18 to 14 points and closing quotations were within a point or two of the lowest on active positions.

The more optimistic view of coming crop possibilities noted since the publication of the Government report on Thursday was considered chiefly responsible for the late selling. Liverpool cable advices said that covering and trade calling in Liverpool had been supplied by liquidation and short selling based on favorable weather reports from the South. These reports stated further attempts were being made to settle the wage dispute and that there was an improved inquiry from India. The amount of cotton on shipboard at United States ports awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 28,000, against 29,000 last year.

Total Sales, However, Aggregate but 1,478,450 Shares—Rails Make Most Spirited Recovery.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—Prices rebounded sharply in a dull two-hour session on the stock market today. Yesterday's torrent of selling appeared completely to have swept out weak holdings, for the moment at least. Traders who had sold short, hastened to cover their commitments, and were forced to do so at rapidly rising prices.

Short covering and a certain amount of buying by bargain hunters who found the reduced prices attractive, appeared to comprise the bulk of the day's activity. Total sales aggregated but 1,478,450 shares, one of the smallest Saturday turnovers of the year. Trading was at the rate of approximately 700,000 shares an hour, as contrasted with about 1,000,000 an hour yesterday.

Rails in Spirited Recovery.

The rails made the most spirited recovery. The Standard Statistics Co.—Associated Press—index of 20 leading carrier stocks indicated that about two-thirds of yesterday's losses were recovered. The index of 50 industrials regained about one-half its loss, but that of 20 utilities rallied less than two-sevenths.

Yesterday's flood of selling was generally regarded, on sober second thought, as a psychological rather than a logical reaction to the New York Reserve Bank's 6 per cent rediscount rate. It was recalled that last May, when a higher rediscount rate was being momentarily expected, Wall street was coming to the belief that it would be a positively bullish development.

Wall street was rather puzzled at the calm reception which the increased rate received in London.

Several brokers stated that yesterday's reaction had to a marked degree corrected a rather top-heavy speculative situation caused by the rapid advance during June and part of July. Whether the reaction had run its course, however, was a moot question. Several commission houses advised their customers to keep out of the market until it reaches a more settled state.

Unfilled Steel Orders Down.

The day's industrial news included announcement of a drop of 168,733 tons from June 30 to July 31 in U. S. Steel's unfilled tonnage, this was not regarded as unfavorable, however, since heavy shipments during the month had indicated a moderate decline. Wall street estimates had run from 150,000 to 200,000 tons. A highly favorable aspect of the report was that unfilled tonnage at the end of July was 517,230 tons above that of the like date last year.

Other prominent items were announcement that class railroads cleared aggregate net earnings in the first half of the year about 22 per cent above that period in 1928; W. W. Dodge Corporation's compilation showing building contracts east of the Rockies increased 20 per cent in July to the second largest monthly total on record, most of the increase being in public works and utility building; and announcement that Nash had followed Sudebaker and Packard in cutting prices.

Atchison Leads Rails.

Atchison led the recovery in the rails, rising about 10 points to a new high record of 278, while C. & O., D. & H., New York Central, Union Pacific and Canadian Pacific rose 4 to 6 points. American Tobacco was a strong feature, climbing about 9 points to a record level. Auburn Auto regained yesterday's loss with a rebound of 9 points, and such shares as U. S. Steel, General Electric, Consolidated Gas, American Water Works, North American, National Biscuit, Johns Manville, Packard and Wright rallied 4 to 8 points. Among the isolated soft spots, Midland Steel products preferred tumbled 7 points.

Commodities moved in narrow ranges. Wheat sold up moderately, then reacted. Corn slipped off slightly. Cotton also erased a little, closing 10 to 70 cents a bale low-

Foreign exchanges were quiet, with sterling slightly firmer, the cable rate reaching $4.84 13-16, which is still in the "gold import" area.

Weekly Average Range.

From the end of last week to the close Friday, the Standard Statistics Co.-Associated Press price index of 20 leading utility stocks suffered a loss of 20.7 points, the index of 50 industrials, 10.4 points and of 20 rails, 4.9 points. In today's rally, the utilities came back 2.4 points, the industrials 3.4, and the rails 2.9.

Gov. Young of the Reserve Board indicated that the higher rate was put into effect as part of a plan to conserve credit to meet autumn commercial and agricultural requirements, a plan which, the long pull, should logically considered bullish, marketwise. a tangible indication that the reserve system plans to aid agriculture and commerce, several of Reserve banks reduced their ing rates for acceptances ½ of per cent to 5½ per cent.

RATE BOOST SECRET WELL GUARDED ONE

Sharp Rise in U. S. Steel on Thursday, It Is Pointed Out, Indicated That Men Who Should Have Had Inside Information, if Any Available, Were Without It.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—The Evening Post in copyrighted weekly financial review, says:

"This week probably will be long remembered in Wall street because of Friday's disastrous and most unexpected break in stocks. If the market had been in a weaker technical position losses would undoubtedly been very much larger. But since Monday trading had been mostly in the higher priced investment stocks and the sharp declines in utility stocks in Chicago had sobered speculative sentiment somewhat. As it was, declines ranging up to 25 points were severe enough to give the street a bad jolt.

"The market broke on Friday because it was absolutely unprepared for bad news and speculators lost their heads. Weak margin accounts went by the board as always. Actually the 6 per cent rediscount rate will make very little difference in the cost of carrying margin accounts. Speculators have been paying about 9 per cent for the privilege of carrying stocks as all brokers make a service charge of about 4 per cent. While thousands of people in the market have suffered serious loss owing to yesterday's break the market should be in a much healthier position.

Secret Was Well Guarded.

"The increase in the rate probably was one of the best guarded secrets in Wall street history. The fact that United States Steel common was so strong on Thursday, advancing almost six points to a new high record of 221½, indicates that. Steel common is known as a favorite with the richest men in the country, men who should have inside information, if there is any to be had. Steel common on Friday was one of the weakest stocks on the list, declining at $213½ a share.

"Wall street did not know what to make of the increase in the rediscount rate. The announcement without warning it could understand because previously the Federal Reserve Board had been severely criticised for issuing prior warnings. The reserve authorities apparently had decided to give the public what it wanted in the way of surprise announcements. Leading bankers have advocated a higher rate for some time. Speculative Wall street had lulled itself into a state of false security with the idea that rates could not be raised here without hurting London. When the London rate was not raised on Thursday the street breathed freely again.

News Taken Calmly at London.

"It was thought that London would be very indignant over the action of the reserve authorities, but the news was taken so calmly over there that Wall street concluded that Gov. Norman must have been quite satisfied with the arrangement. He told London bankers and brokers that no increase in the London rate is contemplated.

"The English press hailed the increase as beneficial to England on the theory that it would stop speculation here and lead to the repatriation of large English balances attracted to New York by high call money rates. Other countries have complained that their credit systems have been strained by American speculation. This theory of course, s sound only 'f the increased rate does stop speculation here. If it does not London is likely to lose more gold.

Same New Plan.

"While the Reserve Bank raised its discount rate at the same time it lowered its buying rates on bankers' acceptances ⅛ of one per cent indicating a desire to support the acceptance market to help finance the moving of crops. One thing was obvious to Wall Street observers that the Federal Reserve Board has hit upon some new plan.

"There was no change in the immediate money situation as a result of the action of the Federal Reserve Bank. It is expected, however, that the liquidation of stocks will have the usual effect of easing money.

A. F. OF L. LEADER WARNS OF PERIL IN INVESTING ABROAD

Woll Declares Policy Menaces National Future and Well-Being of American Masses.

By the Associated Press.

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., Aug. 10.—Matthew Woll, vice president of the American Federation of Labor, addressing the trade relations conference of the Institute of Politics today, said that the United States had reached a period where it must view "our developing foreign investment policy as involving a menace to the well-being of our masses and the security of our national future."

Pointing out that between $300,000,000 and $400,000,000 of American money is at present invested in stocks and bonds of manufacturing companies in Europe and that approximately $500,000,000 is invested in American branch plants on that continent, Woll declared, "We have come to a sharp turn in the road. We fact a new problem."

"This new movement of money is not a loan," he said. "It is an investment of American money in manufacturing plants owned by Americans in foreign countries. In those plants are made commodities that might be called American commodities, since nearly all of them originally were made in this country, most of them are patented here and they find their best market here.

"But in every case the payroll stays in the foreign country. The power used is developed and paid for in a foreign country. The property tax is paid to another country, and raw materials, at least in part, are bought and paid for in another country.

Goods Shipped to U. S.

"Finally the commodities are largely shipped back to the United States to be sold here in a market that has been bereft of the wages paid in manufacture and bereft of a hundred other benefits of manufacture, in a market that extends its governmental protection to the commodities in the form of patents and trade mark protection.

"It will be said that the profits from these ventures come back to Americans, but these profits, if and when there are profits, return to the stock and bond holders, and not to the masses of the people.

"In spite of all our vaunted prosperity we have the problem of increasing unemployment and under-employment. Until this problem is solved the custodians of the national savings, whether they be bankers or industrialists, have no moral right to employ the invested funds in their hands outside of this country on mere promises of higher financial returns. By such a process individuals may get back their invested capital, but the country will never recover its lost opportunities.

"Nor is that all. Our official diplomacy has built up the theory that American interests are to be protected by the American Government wherever they may be.

May Involve U. S. Troops.

"American factories are operating in a dozen countries where they may be menaced by violent attack. I am trying to see the possibilities, not as an alarmist, but as something of a realist. Just this sort of thing has involved us in more than one military operation and we have no reason to believe we have seen the end of such operations. Within the next five years we may easily enough see our troops going to the ends of the earth to "protect" factories that have gone to the ends of the earth seeking easier fields for the exploitation of workers."

Citing the manufacture of Ford tractors in Ireland as an outstanding example of investment abroad, Mr. Woll said that electrical appliances, breakfast foods, machine parts, women's clothing, shoes and rubber goods were also manufactured in large quantities by American plants in foreign fields.

"I am among those who believe the world has not yet reached the millennium," he concluded. "As I see it, we are about to enter upon a period of international competition that will overshadow anything of the kind the world has ever known."

FIRST U. S. SOUND FILM SHOWN IN RIO DE JANEIRO

Talking Pictures Expected to Spread Knowledge of English Language in Brazil.

By the Associated Press.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Aug. 10.—Talking motion pictures from the United States are likely to prove an effective means of spreading knowledge of English in South America, in the opinion of observers who witnessed the first showing of a sound film here. The film was a news reel, speech by Sebastiao Sampiao, Brazilian Consul General in New York, delivered in Portuguese.

Probably there is more English spoken in Brazil than in any other South American country. There is a more pro-American attitude here than elsewhere due to the commercial relations which are closer between the two countries than between the United States and any other South American republic.

Coffee is the answer to this in the first instance, but Brazilians are more and more going to the United States for technical ideas, and several Brazilian actors and singers have recently appeared in theaters there.

Trotzky in War

Newspaper Activities Suddenly Briand to "Move On" Creates Re

In the preceding installment of his autobiography, Leon Trotzky told of his exile as an outcome of the Revolution of 1905, his second banishment to Siberia, his thrilling escape from there by reindeer sled and his hasty, secret departure from Russia for Finland to escape the Czarist police. This began an exile of ten years from Russia, during which he lived in various countries, earning a living with his writings and ever active in the revolutionary cause. For seven years he lived in Vienna, mostly engaged in journalistic work, making various excursions into Balkan countries and elsewhere. The outbreak of the World War in 1914 found him there in Vienna, and he now takes up the thread of his life story at that point.

CHAPTER VII.

IN July, 1914, the houses and walls of Vienna were covered with the slogan "Alle Serben muessen sterben" (Death to all the Serbs). This was the motto of the street rabble. Our younger boy, Serge, being moved by the instinct of contradiction shouted out on the Sivering meadow "Hurrah for Serbia!" He came home with two black eyes and an experience in international politics.

The patriotic uplift of the masses in Austro-Hungary seemed particularly unexpected. For what was it that brought the tailor's apprentice, Spissil, half German, half Czech, or our Czech grocer Frau Maresch, or the cabman Hrankl into the square in front of the War Office? Nationalism? Which? Austro-Hungary was the negation of the national idea. What the moving power was a different one. Men and women whose life is one dreary round of monotony with nothing to hope for are very numerous in the world. They are the back bone of contemporary society. The recall of mobilization if war breaks into their lives, like a promise.

All the old routine to which they were used and which they loathed so much is turned upside down, and something new and unusual takes its place. The future must bring still more drastic changes. Will these be for better or for worse? Why of course, for better. Can anything be worse than Pospissil's "normal" life?

The war takes hold of everybody, and consequently the downtrodden, those whom life has cheated and oppressed, feel themselves, as it were, the equals for the time being of the rich and the powerful.

Vienna Demonstration Reminds of St. Petersburg.

Let it not be taken as a paradox, but the upper of the Vienna mob demonstrating its might and confidence in the victory of the Hapsburgs reminded me by many features most vividly of things I had seen in the October days of 1905 in the streets of St. Petersburg as it then was. It is not without reason that war so often in history has been the mother of revolution.

Events moved rapidly. The telegram announcing the assassination of Jaures (the famous French Socialist leader). The newspapers were so full of all kinds of wicked lies that there was some hope and doubt. But soon it became no longer possible to doubt that Jaures had been murdered by enemies and betrayed by his own party.

What was the attitude towards the war in the leading circles of Austrian social democracy? Some of them openly rejoiced, using harsh language against the Serbs and Russians, hardly making any distinction between peoples and governments; these were politically inclined nationalists with merely a thin veneer of socialist culture which they were fast losing, not daily, but hourly.

Results With Socialists Show Emigrants' Attitude.

I remember Hans Deutsch, who subsequently became something like a Minister for War, frankly speaking of the inevitableness and salutariness of this war which at last would deliver Austria from the Serbian nightmare."

Some of the others, at their head Victor Adler, looked upon the war as upon a catastrophe from without which had to be "borne and get over."

On Aug. 2 Germany declared war on Russia, but even before that day Russians began to leave Vienna. On the morning of Aug. 3 I went to Wienziel to consult with the social deputies as to the attitude we, the Russian emigrants, had best adopt. Old Adler, the Austrian Socialist leader, immediately proposed that I go with him to Geyer, chief of the political police.

Geyer expressed his opinion that on the morrow an order might be issued to arrest Russians and Serbs.

Plan Into Activities Of Swiss Socialists.

The conversation took place at three in the afternoon, and at 6:10 p. m. I was already in a carriage of the train bound for Zurich with my family. I left behind me many years of life, associations, books, articles and some unfinished writings including a polemic against Prof. Masaryk on Russian culture.

With an escort of Austro-Hungarian police the last Russian citizens, a very motley group, were taken to the Swiss frontier. Zurich was already full to overflowing with Russian refugees. We had the greatest difficulty finding a small room for the four of us. We had to sleep on the floor and feed on porridge. When the first days of panic had passed it was possible to find better quarters.

I entered actively into the life of the Swiss socialist party. Among its masses of workmen internationalism was met sympathetically by nearly everybody. After every party meeting I went away more certain than ever that my position was right.

I found my first supporters among members of the Workmen's Union "Eintracht," who were internationalists almost to a man. By arrangement with the managerial committee in September I prepared a draft of a manifesto directed against war and social-patriotism.

When the German and French socialist press gave a clear picture of the utter political and moral failure of official socialism, I put aside my diary to devote myself to writing political pamphlets. One entitled "War and Internationalism" was published at Zurich in November, 1914, and with the assistance of Fritz Platton was fairly widely circulated, not only in Switzerland, but also in other countries.

Hohenzollern Sentence Is of Service to Him.

Intended for German-speaking countries the pamphlet was directed in the first instance against German social democracy, the leading party of the Second International. The booklet was a skillful tool of Entente propaganda.

Later on in France I read, not without some astonishment, a dispatch from Switzerland stating that I had been sentenced in my absence by some court in Germany to imprisonment for my Zurich pamphlet. From this I could see that my pamphlet had hit the mark squarely.

I may add that the Hohenzollern Judges by their verdict and sentence, which I was not in any hurry to serve, rendered me a most valuable service. The German sentence was alway a great obstacle to social-patriotic slanderers and "idealist" detectives and spies of the Entente in their noble efforts to prove that in reality I was merely an agent of the German General Staff.

On Nov. 19, 1914, I crossed the French frontier as war correspondent of the newspaper, "Kief Mysl" ("Thought of Kief"). Paris was sad, at dusk the streets were dark, Zeppelins hovered above. After the check suffered by the German armies on the Marne, the war became ever more cruel and exacting.

Russian Newspaper Established in Paris.

At the time the Germans were approaching Paris, and when many Frenchmen were leaving the capital, two Russian emigrants had established a small daily newspaper in the Russian language in Paris. It was intended to explain to the Russians whom fate had placed in Paris the true inwardness of the gigantic events then happening, and to keep the spirit of international solidarity from being extinguished. Under various names this paper continued to appear in France up to the Russian revolution of February, 1917. On my arrival in Paris I became a contributor.

My family joined me in France in May, 1915. We settled in Sevres in a small house placed at our disposal for a few months by our young friend, the Italian painter, Rene Paresce.

In the summer of 1915 there came to Paris the Italian Deputy Morgari, a romantic selectic, secretary of the socialist faction of the Rome Parliament, for the purpose of inducing French and British socialists to attend an international conference.

Forged Passport Idea Suddenly Ends Parley.

On the terrace of a cafe on the Grand Boulevard we had, together with Morgari, a conference with some French socialist deputies. So long as the conversation consisted of platitudes as to the desirability of recreating international connections, everything went off splendidly. But when Morgari in a tragic whisper broached the subject of obtaining forged passports for a journey to Switzerland, Messieurs les Deputies made long faces, and one of them, called the waiter and hurriedly paid for all the coffee that the conference had consumed.

That was the end of the business. Monatte and Rosmer had by that time been mobilized and could not leave. I proceeded to attend the conference together with Meerheim and Bourderon, very moderate pacifists both. There was no need to procure forged pass-

THE INSIDE OF PROHIBITION

By Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt

Millions of Gallons of Alcohol, Made by Government Sanction, Goes to Bootleggers Under "Permit" System

Under Present Regulations Dry Agents Cannot Follow Shipments to Ultimate Destination and Politicians Have Prevented Modification of Rules Which Would Stop This Biggest of Leaks—More Illicit Liquor Around the Capital Than Ever Before.

(Mabel Walker Willebrandt, former Assistant United States Attorney General in charge of prohibition, begins in this, the seventh article of her series, the revelation of the "big leaks," and points out how thousands of gallons of industrial alcohol are being diverted through "cover houses" for illegal use, and how the abused "permit" system, bolstered up by tremendous political pressure, forces the Federal Government into the role of helpless collaborator in one of bootlegger's most successful enterprises.)

(Copyright, 1929. All rights for publication reserved throughout the world.)

VII—THE BIG LEAKS: ALCOHOL.

WHERE does all the liquor come from? What constitute the "big leaks" in prohibition?—Typical questions most frequently propounded to me.

The "leaks" are many and varied. Some I shall mention and describe, not to indicate, in any sense, a final failure of prohibition, for in my candid opinion it has not failed of its essential purpose—the limitation and restriction of liquor consumption—but rather to serve as a basis of a better understanding, by the reader, of suggestions I shall advance farther along in this discussion for improvement in prohibition enforcement methods. Lack of information, or too much from unreliable and biased sources, has clouded the perspective to such an extent that the formation of sound conclusions with respect to a remedy is made difficult indeed.

To illustrate: Hardly a day passes, right here in the nation's capital, that either police or prohibition agents do not make a sizable seizure of "moonshine" liquor flowing in from stills in nearby Maryland or Virginia. At the time this is being written, newspapers carry stories of a seizure of more than 3000 quarts of "Maryland corn" temporarily parked in a garage. Most people, unfamiliar with the liquor history of the national capital, would naturally view seizures such as the above, which are reported almost daily in the local news sheets, as the direct outgrowth of the prohibition law.

Moonshine Eclipsed.

Such is not the case, however. Ready market for tax-free liquor has always existed in the metropolitan centers of Baltimore and Washington. Stills were in active and numerous operation long before prohibition. Corn liquor has always been a more or less popular beverage with certain indiscriminating drinkers. Many old-time saloon keepers of Baltimore and Washington included the tax-free product among their merchandise, and reaped the enormous profits accruing from sale of the moonshine brew to a clientele whose pocketbook or taste was satisfied with the cheaper article. There may be, and probably there is, more illicit distilling around Washington now than before prohibition. But the basic condition always existed. The only difference being that in the old days it attracted little attention.

Methods of securing alcohol with which to supply a thirsty populace are as ingenious as they are numerous. Some time ago a drug concern located in a sparsely populated town in Texas secured the release on permits for medicinal use of 200 barrels of Jamaica ginger. Jamaica ginger is 90 per cent alcohol. Two hundred barrels of it would take care of quite a sizable quantity of old-fashioned "tummy-aches"—many more than would be likely to occur in a sparsely populated Texas community! The fact is obvious that such an immense quantity of the "ready" could not have any legitimate medicinal distribution by any one drug concern in any one small locality.

Biggest Leak of All.

In my honest judgment, the greatest single source of liquor supply today is alcohol diverted illegally from concerns bearing the stamp of respectability in the form of a Government permit.

Long before national prohibition the Government authorized certain industries, such as paint factories, dye and chemical plants, manufacturers of perfume, etc., to withdraw tax-free alcohol for use in the preparation of such products. Under the existing law these industries are still permitted to withdraw alcohol with no restriction other than regulations promulgated by the Treasury Department.

I maintain, and have from my experience for years, that these regulations stop far short of the proper legal control necessary to keep industrial alcohol from being the chief source of the illicit cocktail supply.

Let no one make the mistake of assuming that I would hamper, harass or even make unduly difficult the conduct of legitimate business which needs alcohol. But making the regulations which govern its use, crisp, definite and as restrictive as the law permits, would safeguard legitimate business. It would hamper only the illegitimate concerns which use their permit as a cloak to divert alcohol. These latter all divert through the well-known ruse of shipments via "cover houses." A "cover house" is to the alcohol racketeer what a "fence" is to a thief. Let me illustrate. The dishonest permittee, under present regulations, is obliged only to show in his office a letter or some other form of confirmation of the sale of his products. Government Inspectors take a list of the places where the permittee's files indicate that his products have gone.

"None of Your Business."

Now I will cite an actual incident. Inspectors found that Permittee "A" shipped 50,000 gallons of highly alcoholic "Carnation Perfume" to "X." The inspectors went to see "X." They asked: "Did you receive 50,000 gallons of 'carnation perfume' from Permittee A?" "X" replied, "Yes." The inspectors looked about but "X" had apparently only a rented room, a desk and a telephone. They asked to see where the 50,000 gallons of "carnation perfume" was. "X" replied, "But it's none of your—— business where it is or what I have done with it." And the tragic fact is, that so far as prohibition enforcement is concerned under the regulations as now written, it wasn't any of the business of the inspectors to follow the product to its ultimate disposition. Nor can the inspectors who have plainly run into a lie return and charge the original permittee "A" with dereliction of his duty or revoke his permit for sending 50,000 gallons of "carnation perfume" to this fake establishment. These fake establishments with a set-up as ostensible consignees, are what is known as "cover houses."

In my legal opinion the regulations issued by the Treasury Department could be so drawn as to drive these "cover houses" practically out of business. To do it would, however, mean standing firm against a tremendous lot of pounding from the organized drive of thousands of permittees with heavy political influence. I know this, because repeatedly my office has recommended legal changes in the regulations.

The Alcohol Lobby.

I remember specially the fate of our recommendations about two years ago. They were well received by Dr. Doran, commissioner and highly capable chemist, and other Treasury officials, and we all practically agreed upon the details. But our puny legal beginnings of improvement in the regulations were exposed to the blighting political influence of the alcohol trade! Resolutions against the proposed changes, which I didn't know anyone but our two Government departments had seen, began to pour in. Lobbyists came to my office alleging that I was exerting a malignant influence over the Treasury Department! Drug associations, alcohol lobbyists, the patent medicine group, all appeared! Finally the regulations came out without the proposed changes. The improvements had died a-borning!

Every permittee, when he makes application under the law, asks the Government for a privilege. It is a valuable privilege. He expects to make money out of it. To get the privilege he enters into a contract with the Government. In my judgment the Government has a perfect right to require as a condition to his receiving this valuable privilege a considerable degree of diligence on his part as to where and to whom he will sell his products. There is no reason why before permittee "A" above mentioned ships the 50,000 gallons of "carnation perfume" with high alcohol content to "X" he should not by contract agree to let the Government into the secret of "X's" request for the consignment.

In an attempt to prevent the diversion of alcohol, Treasury regulations prescribe that it be treated by certain formula of denaturants which are supposed to make it undrinkable. For some uses the alcohol must be what is termed "specially denatured," and for other uses "completely denatured." Little trouble comes from misuse of the latter, which is either nauseous or poisonous. Much of the "specially denatured" alcohol, however, is susceptible to manipulation whereby the denaturing products may be eliminated.

General Andrews' Regime.

Crooked permittees naturally prefer the "specially denatured" type. Great pressure is exerted on every administrator to O. K. more and more, and weaker and weaker, formulas for "specially" denatured alcohol. Such permit becomes an open door by which the permittee can enter a field of operations entirely outside the law. The policy of handing out permit privileges has always been subjected to so much political pressure that it has been marked by vacillation and puerility. It is true that while Dr. Orville Matthews was Commissioner Haynes' assistant, he said definitely "no" to the multiplying applications. But by the close of Gen. Andrews' regime permits and permittees had reached into higher mathematics. A thing little apprehended but which formed a serious source of weakness in enforcement, was that the amounts of alcohol that permittees could handle monthly were enlarged, and alcohol manufacturing plants are given the right to make unlimited quantities of alcohol. These plants are not bootlegging concerns by any means, but they are making all the alcohol that they can sell, and the amount that they can sell is increasing daily at an alarming rate, away beyond the reasonable growth of businesses and trades that need alcohol for legitimate purposes. Witness how some alcohol manufacturing stocks have skyrocketed on the stock exchanges; note also the increased imports of sugar for alcohol factories.

Investment bankers, in advertising an issue of securities of an industrial alcohol company, included in their prospectus the following:

> "Commercial alcohol plays a vital part as a solvent or base in industrial alchemy, and likewise in the manufacture of dyes, glass, ink, drugs, paint, perfumes, films, and hundreds of other essential products, the demand for which is constantly increasing.

Mrs. Willebrandt as Prosecutor

A sketch of Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt by a Post-Dispatch staff artist.

$6,000 Bribe Netted Conspirators More Than $2,000,000 in Alcohol

AN election official of the State of Maryland bribed chemists in charge of the denaturing process and others who ran the pumps which carried the pure alcohol to tanks. He spent altogether in bribes $6000. They loaded a car with pure alcohol and billed it as "Pyro" (pyro is a denatured alcohol used in automobile radiators). The election official being notified of the car's initials and number diverted it and sold the contents in the bootleg trade. He succeeded in getting about 10 cars out that way in a year. A simple calculation shows how much money he made in these transactions which were discovered. One carload of pure alcohol would make 64,000 quarts of synthetic whisky. At $4 a quart the 10 cars reached a bootleg value of $2,560,000. Even if obliged to bribe a few city police and deduct the price of bottling and delivery, the conspirators made a small fortune on an initial outlay in the form of a bribe of only $6000.

The Overcrowded Prisons.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

BEING a Federal institution, the Leavenworth, Kan., prison is the concern of us all, and we all have definite duties and responsibilities toward it. If matters have gone wrong there, we should insist upon their immediate righting. We owe the inmates a sufficient amount of nutritious food, in reasonable variety. While space and privacy are necessarily limited, that does not imply that the men be crowded together like hogs. Intense heat, in our far more comfortable quarters, upsets anyone's nervous system. These prisoners, ill-fed, perspiring, nothing to do, jammed together in their narrow cells, are resentful. No outlet for natural irritation or energy, no peace. What else could they do, except to smash a few things? The magazine they publish, going as it does to outside officials and individuals, is never allowed to print a word of criticism or comment. They have no legally established board of grievances. Every incoming and outgoing letter is strictly censored.

Mental and physical exertion are necessary to health and sanity, even outside, where we have so much, where life is normal. How much more necessary is it that they be supplied to men in abnormal conditions, behind bars. Quite likely, the majority of guards, warden, etc., are doing the best they can in every possible way. But industries, provisions, roomier housing, etc., must be arranged for by Federal authorities and they should do so at once. Justice, ...used upon from outside, seems different than when considered from within.

The Political Parsons.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

K. KINGSTON, a minister of East Norwich, N. Y., takes exceptions to your splendid editorial on "Prohibition and the Schools." It will be a long time before he and his ilk will slip one over on the great American press. His charge that the press and the stage sold out to the wet interests is puerile and shows how badly the church needs men of common sense. In all ages and countries where the church assumed control of the Government, mischief and misrule were the result, as we are experiencing now.

There are great churchmen in all churches, but none of them has been identified with prohibition.

There is a conspiracy among certain of the ministers to wipe out the jury system—wonder if that is part of a general movement or just a few misguided fanatics.

The attempt to enslave mankind under the mask of piety and religion will fail as it always has failed.

For freedom's battle once begun,
Bequeathed from bleeding sire to son,
Though baffled oft is ever won.

Muny Opera Troubles.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

MR. KIEL'S white-washing letter as to the situation at the Municipal Opera may fool the naive but not the cognoscenti. It is sad but true that, notwithstanding Mr. Bishop's great talent as a stage director and Mr. Kiel's endorsement, the production this season of the opera is artistically one of the worst of its existence in spite of the uniformly laudatory press notices. And never before has there been so much internal dissension.

If four high-class members of the cast can't get along with the stage director the chances are—in fact, it is almost a certainty—that not they but he is the cause of the disruption. It is up to the directors to see to it that such a disturbing factor is eliminated.

Pontchartrain Bridge Co. Bankruptcy.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

AND now—receivership and near-bankruptcy for the New Orleans Pontchartrain Bridge Co., one of America's greatest fiascos in the private toll bridge "game." For the many investors in St. Louis and surrounding territory, however, there is no hope of recovering any substantial portion of their cash outlays—not "investment," mind you, for it was never that!

But here is the irony of the present situation: The very people responsible for selling these worthless securities now ask the proxies of the deluded bondholders to permit them to act as a "bondholders' protective committee." "Protective," indeed. "Alibi" would be a better word.

Instead of permitting self-styled "investment bankers" to continue this farce of alleged "representation" what is needed is an independent bondholders' committee, able to employ competent counsel to turn up the entire mess, including the conditions under which the bridge was promoted, the cost of the financing arranged, the "bonuses," gratuities and other inside deals and, in short, a drastic and complete inquiry, let the chips fall where they may.

Only in that way can those imposed upon find out the whole truth, it would seem. It is about time that this were known, anyhow. R. A. WARREN.

IS WAR PREVENTABLE?

That the world cannot hope lightly to break with the tradition that war is inevitable and unpreventable is proved by a recent debate before the American Institute of Politics between Dr. Willis J. Abbott, one of the editors of the Christian Science Monitor, and Admiral Rogers, retired.

Dr. Abbott belongs to that school to which we ourselves subscribe. That is, he believes that to be effective the Kellogg pact should have teeth in it. There should be some obligation upon the part of all the signatories to scotch the offender, and Dr. Abbott proposes that in our own case we prohibit the export of arms and munitions or loans of money to any nation wilfully disturbing the peace of the world.

Admiral Rogers disagrees with this school of thought. He refuses to join in the feeling that diplomacy has been a cause rather than a preventive of war, which he regards as being at length the only possible means of settling some disputes. There is, in his opinion, a point beyond which diplomacy cannot go—a point, indeed, beyond which the purposes of human progress are not served by the interposition of any deterrent.

It was this tradition that broke the lance of Woodrow Wilson. It had already rendered meaningless the peace tribunal at The Hague. It is too early to say that this tradition is passing, for few such powerful beliefs have gripped the minds of men. Nevertheless, it does seem that the tradition is weakening. With all its toothlessness, the Kellogg pact was itself a proof that war is not in our time the certitude it has been. To have made such a proposal even before the World War would have been to be laughed at. The operation of a changing psychology in such a field is one of the most interesting phenomena of history. Certainly the outlook for rationalism could not have been blacker than on the day when Socrates drank the hemlock. Nor could the outlook for the philosophy of the four Gospels have been more despairing than it was at the outset of the Christian era. Yet both have come to conquer most of the civilized world, and it is not impossible that we are witnessing the passing of the age-long tradition that war is something essential to civilization.

The case for war postulated by Admiral Rogers has always been the case of the status quo. It was the foil with which the champions of many another tradition at different times in the course of human events have fenced with those Voltaires, Jeffersons and Lincolns whose vision has foreseen a better day. The testimony of history is on the side of progress, and to the solemn arguments of the opposition it has always responded with that faith in human genius which Maxim Gorky says has made man the marvel of our earth.

Said Gorky in the Fiftieth Anniversary Edition of the Post-Dispatch: "He is the most enigmatic of all creatures inhabiting the earth, a creature endowed with an infinite power of imagination, an indefatigable thirst for creation, a reckless passion for the destruction of that which he has created, a wonderful capacity for disparaging himself in every way, an incapacity of wondering at himself." Again he said: "Man's riddance of amazement at the inventions of his reason, at the creations of his hands, I consider to be a fact of immense importance. I imagine that the man of the twentieth century begins to think in this way: I can fly in the air, swim under water, move upon the earth with a speed that seemed incredible before. I have discovered radium the mysterious and found a way to use it. I can speak with any spot of my planet by means of the wireless. It seems that I will soon find out the secrets of life eternal. What is there else that is concealed from me?" Or he might have said: "Nothing is impossible."

We agree with Dr. Abbott that war is preventable, and we believe our time can prove it. That is why we hope to hold up the hands of Mr. Hoover and Premier MacDonald. Those two men, occupying coigns of unprecedented advantage to this greatest of all human aspirations, are opposed to war. They regard it as an anachronism, as it is. They speak for the two great English speaking peoples, who hold the peace of the world in their hands. They have the sympathy of Briand, now for the twelfth time Premier of France. We owe them all the popular support without which they cannot succeed. The world has broken with many a powerful tradition. It broke with feudalism and slavery. It is breaking with superstition. It can break with war.

HEADY BIT BY THE EARL OF BIRKENHEAD.

That astute showman, George Bernard Shaw, had some remarks to make the other day on the value of political window dressing. He went so far as to say that the Conservatives, in the last election, had an excellent program but no one to dress it up for them. Surely the sage of Adelphi Terrace has forgotten the Earl of Birkenhead, whose wit and brilliancy have enlivened so many a dull campaign. Moreover, the Earl, more popularly known in England as plain F. E. Smith, has proved himself an adornment even in defeat.

The London correspondent of the New Yorker passes on his latest witticism. The Earl was interrupted in mid-speech not long ago by the strident voice of a woman raised (apropos of foreign policy) to inquire: "What did your Government ever do for us women?" In calm, measured tones came the reply: "Well, Madam, we gave virgins the vote—and we gave maternity benefits to mothers—and we gave widows the pension. And I strongly suggest that you take instant steps to qualify yourself with one of these three classes." That, we maintain, is window dressing of quality. It might even serve to adorn one of Mr. Shaw's plays.

AFTER READING A MEMOIR.

We hold no brief, as lawyers and Congressmen are wont to say, for Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt. Besides, she is fully able to take care of herself; her series of articles now running in the Post-Dispatch proves that. But there is one observation we feel impelled to make—an observation, we fancy, that expresses the sentiment of many of the readers of her articles, wets and drys alike. This is simply that Mrs. Willebrandt's story—which happens to be the story not only of prohibition but of the writer herself—rings true. The writing is that of a sincere woman.

It is the writing, moreover, of a woman who has something to say and knows how to say it. We do not recall in the recent literature of personal confession any touch more self-revealing, or more filled with what newspaper people call human interest, than the story of Mrs. Willebrandt's "good cry" over the long distance telephone after she had been accused, unjustly as she thought, of religious bigotry. She manages to tell of this in a manner happily devoid of bathos.

Of more permanent value to the reader, of course, will be what Mrs. Willebrandt has to say about prohibition enforcement. Here is a field of controversy in which sincerity is thrice welcome. We should all be better off if the politicians on both sides of the question—and those who try to straddle it—had more of that shining quality.

THE YOUNG PLAN IN THE BALANCE.

The attitude of the British Government toward war debts and reparations has been so far removed from cantankerousness in the reconstruction period that it is surprising to have the Young plan held up from this quarter. Yet this is what is happening at The Hague, where Philip Snowden, Chancellor of the Exchequer, threatens to bring the reparations conference to a stalemate unless Britain is better treated.

Mr. Snowden insists that the division of German payments among the allies, as written into the Young plan at Paris, is unfair to Great Britain, and he demands a larger share before The Hague parley proceeds with further discussion of the Young plan. He also wants to reopen the questions of conditional payments and deliveries in kind, which, of course, will involve Germany as well as the allies. "I do not accept the theory," says Mr. Snowden, "that the committee of experts who met at Paris is infallible."

France, Belgium and Italy are equally insistent that the Young plan stand as drafted at Paris.

It is reasonable to assume that the plan, adopted after long, hard weeks in Paris, after bitterness had been ironed into compromise by the tact and patience of Owen D. Young, is the best that could be agreed upon by all. But it must be remembered that the Baldwin Conservative Government represented Great Britain at the Paris conference and signed the Young plan. The MacDonald Labor Government now points out that Great Britain is being made to bear the chief financial loss under the compromise plan, which failed to reimburse her for payments previously made to the United States, amounting with accrued interest to approximately $1,000,000,000. On future payments, under the Young plan, Great Britain will merely break even in reparations received and debts paid out. For example, in 1930 she is scheduled to receive $40,000,000 less than she would have received under the Dawes plan. France at the same time will receive $80,000,000 less, since all nations agreed to scale down their claims on Germany. But, and here is the crux of the situation, this will cause Great Britain only to break even, while France will receive $120,000,000 in excess of her total outpayments.

Britain is called upon to make a sacrifice. And we confidently believe that the MacDonald Government, with the Young plan hanging in the balance, will modify its demands so as not to block a vital avenue to world peace and financial stability. Mr. Snowden has frankly stated Britain's position; that was undoubtedly necessary for political reasons at home and for setting a policy in future international adjustments of debts. With The Hague conference adjourned over the week-end, a solution may even now be quietly under way.

WHAT A STATE HIGHWAY PATROL CAN MEAN.

The last Missouri Legislature refused to authorize a State highway patrol, with the consequence that when a bank is robbed out in the State it is, as a rule, just too bad.

Minnesota is not so content to let highwaymen run amuck on the State highways. Three of these gentry robbed a bank at Elk River, Minn., last Friday and carried off $7200. Within less than 24 hours the State highway patrol had captured all three of the robbers and recovered the loot.

Minnesota showed them.

WRITING THE ZEPPELIN'S STORY.

Real literature will come out of the Graf Zeppelin's world cruise, if one may judge by the galaxy of journalistic luminaries aboard the mighty dirigible, which has completed in record time the first leg of its ambitious flight.

Karl H. von Wiegand, Sir George Hubert Wilkins and Lady Grace Drummond Hay will tell the absorbing story of the flight in all detail. Wilkins is one of the foremost explorers and adventurers, and knows how to write. Lady Drummond Hay has a keen eye for the human interest side. Von Wiegand, who will do the major share of the reportorial task, is one of the ablest newspaper writers now active. His experience has ranged from the San Francisco earthquake to seeing the World War with the German and Allied armies. A native of Iowa, he has wandered far afield in search of news. He made three trips around the world getting all in readiness for the flight now being undertaken. Undoubtedly he will make this one of the most thrilling stories newspapers have ever told.

The readers of the Post-Dispatch have a rare treat in store, to be provided by these three writers, the only correspondents on the ship. It will be a thoroughly modern adventure story, and one that will go down in history.

ADD AMERICANA.

"One glance at his unhappy, hopeless face is a sufficient argument against his creed," says William T. Ellis, a popular writer on religious topics, in reference to "a certain famous criminal lawyer." He might as well have spoken right out and named him—Clarence Darrow. Darrow wouldn't have minded. He is a "miserable man," with that despairing look, the critic thinks, because he is an atheist. We had always supposed that Darrow was an agnostic, not an atheist; but let that pass.

We can't for the moment think of anything more amusing than this notion that Clarence Darrow, that lusty warrior, is a broken and disconsolate man. Those who have debated with him about prohibition have not found him so; nor did the opposing lawyers in the Leopold-Loeb case, nor Bryan at Dayton, Tenn. Thinking about the world has cut deep lines in Darrow's face, but they are not the lines of despair. He is, in fact, a conscious, as the man who calls him miserable is an unconscious, humorist.

What moral would Darrow's critic draw, we wonder, from the beaming physiognomy of H. L. Mencken?

"WAIT, WE'RE PLANNING DISARMAMENT."

Press Opinion on the Prison Riots

Editors agree overcrowding has led to recent convict uprisings; Philadelphia Public Ledger finds sentimentalism and repressive laws complicate a sane solution; New York World quotes Alfred E. Smith's warning on congestion, which went unheeded; Cleveland Plain Dealer urges investigation from standpoint of inmate.

THE EARNEST PLUS THE SENTIMENTAL.

From the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

SOONER or later, after a few more overcrowded jails blow up, earnest people who seek to make us a morally perfect people by the increasing force of State and Federal statutes will have to realize that laws alone are of little use until they are sustained by the necessary mechanism of enforcement.

More jails are required in almost every section of the country. But no one wants to pay for them.

Clarence Darrow, looking at the man who picks your pocket, will suggest that blame should lie with the offender's great-grandfather or with men who directed the Street Cleaning Department in Chicago in 1856. This commingling of fierce sentimentalism with the opposite and fiercer belief in the social efficiency of harshly repressive laws has left Legislatures floundering. We have no accepted or acceptable philosophy of law enforcement or the punishment of criminals.

It has been estimated that at least 10,000,000 people violate the dry laws every day. If ever we have to build new jails to house this multitude, we shall have to admit that even good works may be pressed a little too rapidly and that goodness as modern reformers see it is going to be a pretty costly business.

DON'T FORGET THE REBELS.

From the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

ENOUGH has been said since the Dannemora incident to indicate cause for desperate unrest among the convicts. One complaint is of fearful overcrowding. Methods in handling prisoners suggestive of medieval days have been charged against the authorities.

Whatever investigations are undertaken should be broad-minded enough to consider the situation from the standpoint of the prisoner as well as from that of society generally. Discipline must be maintained at whatever cost, but discipline is not the whole of penology. We owe at least something to those who rebel.

SEPARATE THE TWO GROUPS.

From the New York Herald Tribune.

THIS problem is not a simple one if the Baumes (habitual criminal) code stands, as unquestionably it should. It involves the discipline of two distinct groups of convicts, the one, still fortunately in the majority, having something very definite to gain by tractability and obedience; the other, a growing body of men made reckless by their lack of hope. Obviously, prison methods and rules adequate to the treatment of the first group will not prove so in the case of the second. Yet our present prison system not only mixes the two groups together under the same institutional government in each of our great prisons, but it crowds them together into the same cramped cell blocks. Thus convict leadership naturally falls to the bolder spirits who have nothing to lose, the tractable become infested with intractability, the hopeful with desperation, and the blow-ups occur.

ALFRED E. SMITH'S REPORT.

From the New York World.

ON Jan. 4, 1928—a year and seven months ago—Alfred E. Smith submitted to the Legislature his last report as Governor. In this report he pointed out that "due to the increased penalties imposed by recent changes in our criminal laws the number of offenders serving long sentences or life terms has been and will continue to be greatly augmented." He declared that "we cannot look for lessened pressure but must rather expect even heavier demands." He cited Auburn and Dannemora specifically and said, "They are of the old type, without plumbing in the cells, constructed after the so-called cell-block system, where there is neither direct light nor air." He declared that "there are 1100 inmates in our prisons today for whom no cells are available" and appealed to the Legislature, then, as now, strongly Republican, to take steps to remedy this situation in advance of trouble.

The Legislature sat back on its haunches, confident, as usual, that it knew more than the Governor, and did nothing.

NIGGARDLY ECONOMY.

From the Chicago Daily News.

IF it be true that the convicts have real grievances, or that intolerable overcrowding was the principal cause of the recent riots, it follows that, from a humanitarian or strictly practical point of view, no state can afford to practice cruel and niggardly economy at the expense of its prisoners. Jails and prisons should be built and conducted with decent regard for the physical and moral welfare of the inmates. Punishment for wrongdoing is one thing, but barbarous treatment in contempt of law and reason is far different.

From the New York Times.

IT will be charged that only the soft-headed and sentimentally lenient are concerned with better provision for the prisoners. But the severest attitude about segregating and punishing men and women who have shown themselves to be enemies of society is compatible with adequate provision for giving them the ordinary decencies of life while they are shut up. The need of an improvement in that respect has been brought out repeatedly by prison authorities and penologists, long before desperate men behind the walls rose in anger and violent protest. It is not a question of spacious accommodations or costly food or an easy life for convicts. With modern social feeling what it is, barbarous punishment must be frowned upon and avoided; and nothing can be more barbarous in a prison than to force two or three men to live in a cell designed for only one. An essential part of prison reform is to make prisons large enough to care reasonably for their inmates.

SLOW MOTION.

From the American Lumberman.

IT has taken Niagara Falls 30,000 years to move seven miles. It's just like Sunday traffic.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11.

JOHN W. GARRETT is about to leave his beautiful home, Evergreen, just outside Baltimore, and go forth on another great diplomatic mission.

This time it is to Rome as United States Ambassador.

No new experience for Garrett, although his latest appointment is the greatest of his career in the diplomatic service. For something like 20 years he has handled delicate and difficult situations as a representative of the United States Government. And he goes to his new post with a reputation that is world-wide.

It is difficult to single out any one of Garrett's accomplishments as illustrative of his ability as a diplomat. There is one, however, that may be mentioned—the one he considers the best accomplishment of his career.

It was in 1914, when he was in charge of all the German and Austrian civilian prisoners in France—some 130,000. It was a vast work and one that required a constant display of tact to satisfy both the French and Germans.

IN August of 1916 he went into Germany to make a study of the prison camps throughout that country. At the time there were a number of "reprisal camps" in Germany where allied prisoners were treated with inhuman measures.

By obtaining many letters from German officers and others held in France and the expose of the reports, Garrett convinced the Germans that these camps were unjustifiable and should be discontinued. This subsequently were.

During his career Garrett has held many posts. In 1901 he was secretary of the American Legation at The Hague. From there he went to Berlin as secretary of the Embassy and later was transferred to Rome as first secretary of the American Embassy.

Then he was envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary to Venezuela, Argentina, the Netherlands and Luxemburg. He has been a representative of his country to many international conferences. His last great assignment was secretary of the limitation of armaments conference in Washington in 1921-22.

ABOUT 57 years of age, Garrett is a man of great personal charm.

His home is in Baltimore. His early education was gained chiefly in Europe, where he traveled extensively with his family. At the age of 18 he returned to the United States and entered Princeton. He was graduated in the class of 1894.

After his graduation Garrett went to the Southwest on one of the archeological expeditions that Princeton was carrying on at that time. He became so attached to New Mexico that he remained there working for the next five years.

He is immensely wealthy and entered diplomacy by choice. He is a member of one of the largest banking houses in Baltimore.

The diplomat will take with him to his new post his wife, who formerly was Miss Alice Warder of Washington.

PACKERS SEEKING MODIFICATION OF CONSENT DECREE

Armour and Swift, in District of Columbia Court, Allege Artificial Discrimination.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—The Armour and Swift groups of packers asked the District of Columbia Supreme Court here today to modify the consent decree of 1920 under which they, along with other large packers, were required to restrict their activities exclusively to the meat packing business.

The packers declared the decree set up an artificial discrimination against them, prohibiting them from engaging in other lines of business. They asserted they should be permitted to continue to use their facilities to meet competition.

In 1920 the Government instituted anti-trust proceedings here against he "big five" group of packers but did not push them when the packers consented to a decree divorcing them from all lines of business not directly related to the meat packing industry.

The Armour and Swift groups subsequently appealed, seeking to have the consent decree set aside, the case ultimately reaching the Supreme Court, which sustained the Government in its determination to enforce the decree.

The California Canneries, with a contract with the packers for handling its products, was permitted by the local courts here to intervene and instituted suit to have the decree which on its motion was suspended, set aside.

Court last spring decided against the canneries and directed the lower courts to give full effect to the decree.

The proceedings today would have the decree modified to meet what the packers declare are present day conditions, materially different from those existing in 1920 when they consented to the decree.

Premier Briand Ordered Trotzky "To Move On"

All of International Get in Four Vehicles.

The delegates made jokes about the fact that half a century after establishment of the International it proved possible to seat all the Internationalists in four vehicles. But these were not the jokes of skeptics. The thread of history often gets broken. It then becomes necessary to tie a new knot.

The Zimmerwald conference gave a great fillip to the development of the anti-war movement in several countries. In Germany the "Spartacus" men did their work on a large scale. In France there was formed a "Committee for Restoration of International Connection Among the Proletariat."

Workmen in the Russian colony in Paris came into ever closer contact with our paper, "Nashe Slovo," bearing all its financial burdens and some of the others.

In the meantime, black clouds were gathering over our heads and became more dense in 1916. In the shape of advertisements, the reactionary "Liberte" accused us of pro-Germanism. We were receiving frequent anonymous threatening letters. Both accusations and threats were undoubtedly inspired by the Russian Embassy.

French Government's Suspicions Aroused.

Suspicious figures were seen prowling near our printing works. Herve was shaking the finger of the State at us. Prof. Durekheim, chairman of the Government Committee on Russian exiles, sent word that in Government circles the question was mooted about closing down "Nashe Slovo" ("Our Word") and deporting the editor from France. But the matter dragged on. No fault could be properly found with me, as I was not infringing any law. A convenient pretext was necessary. Finally it was found, or to be more precise, created.

To understand the circumstances of my expulsion from France, it will be necessary to relate very briefly the story of the little Russian daily newspaper, published in Paris and edited by me. Its chief enemy, of course, was the Russian Embassy. Their men zealously translated the leading articles of "Nashe Slovo" into French and sent them, with appropriate comments, to the Quai d'Orsay and the French War Office. The latter thereupon telephoned to our wily censor, Monsieur Chale, who in the language had spent many years in capacity of teacher of the French Russia before the war.

He Receives Order to Leave France.

Monsier Chale was not a man of quick decisions. Whenever he did hesitate he concluded that it was safer to omit than to let stand. Thus, fortifying his heart, he would take under his protection not only the Czar, the Czaritsa, Sazonov, but

PACKERS SEEKING MODIFICATION OF CONSENT DECREE

Armour and Swift, in District of Columbia Court, Allege Artificial Discrimination.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—The Armour and Swift groups of packers asked the District of Columbia Supreme Court here today to modify the consent decree of 1920 under which they, along with other large packers, were required to restrict their activities exclusively to the meat packing business.

The packers declared the decree set up an artificial discrimination against them, prohibiting them from engaging in other lines of business. They asserted they should be permitted to continue to use their facilities to meet competition.

In 1920 the Government instituted anti-trust proceedings here against he "big five" group of packers but did not push them when the packers consented to a decree divorcing them from all lines of business not directly related to the meat packing industry.

The Armour and Swift groups subsequently appealed, seeking to have the consent decree set aside, the case ultimately reaching the Supreme Court, which sustained the Government in its determination to enforce the decree.

The California Canneries, with a contract with the packers for handling its products, was permitted by the local courts here to intervene and instituted suit to have the decree which on its motion was suspended, set aside.

Court last spring decided against the canneries and directed the lower courts to give full effect to the decree.

The proceedings today would have the decree modified to meet what the packers declare are present day conditions, materially different from those existing in 1920 when they consented to the decree.

Premier Briand Ordered Trotzky "To Move On"

ports because the government issued real ones.

All of International Get in Four Vehicles.

The delegates made jokes about the fact that half a century after establishment of the International it proved possible to seat all the Internationalists in four vehicles. But these were not the jokes of skeptics. The thread of history often gets broken. It then becomes necessary to tie a new knot.

The Zimmerwald conference gave a great fillip to the development of the anti-war movement in several countries. In Germany the "Spartacus" men did their work on a large scale. In France there was formed a "Committee for Restoration of International Connection Among the Proletariat."

Workmen in the Russian colony in Paris came into ever closer contact with our paper, "Nashe Slovo," bearing all its financial burdens and some of the others.

In the meantime, black clouds were gathering over our heads and became more dense in 1916. In the shape of advertisements, the reactionary "Liberte" accused us of pro-Germanism. We were receiving frequent anonymous threatening letters. Both accusations and threats were undoubtedly inspired by the Russian Embassy.

French Government's Suspicions Aroused.

Suspicious figures were seen prowling near our printing works. Herve was shaking the finger of the State at us. Prof. Durekheim, chairman of the Government Committee on Russian exiles, sent word that in Government circles the question was mooted about closing down "Nashe Slovo" ("Our Word") and deporting the editor from France. But the matter dragged on. No fault could be properly found with me, as I was not infringing any law. A convenient pretext was necessary. Finally it was found, or to be more precise, created.

To understand the circumstances of my expulsion from France, it will be necessary to relate very briefly the story of the little Russian daily newspaper, published in Paris and edited by me. Its chief enemy, of course, was the Russian Embassy. Their men zealously translated the leading articles of "Nashe Slovo" into French and sent them, with appropriate comments, to the Quai d'Orsay and the French War Office. The latter thereupon telephoned to our war censor, Monsieur Chale, who in the language had spent many years in capacity of teacher of the French Russia before the war.

He Receives Order to Leave France

Monsier Chale was not a man of quick decisions. Whenever he did hesitate he concluded that it is safer to omit than to let stand. Thus, fortifying his heart, he would take under his protection not only the Czar, the Czaritsa, Sazonov, but also the Dardanelles dreams of Miliukov. It would be not difficult to prove that the whole war against "Our Word," the daily war of attrition, was waged not by reason of the internationalism of the paper, but because of its revolutionary attitude towards Russia.

The censor's red ink flowed. Sometimes instead of the newspaper we had to issue blank pages. We were never guilty of contravening the desires of Monsieur Chale.

Nevertheless, in September, 1916, I was shown at the Prefecture the order expelling me from France. What caused the issue of the order? I was not told a single word about it. Only gradually it came out that the reason was a criminal provocation, organized by the Russian "surete" in France.

When a member of the House of Deputies, Jean Longuet, on his own initiative called on Monsieur Briand to protest against my deportation, the French Prime Minister replied to him: "Do you know that 'Our Word' was found at Marseilles on Russian soldiers who assassinated their Colonel?"

Soldiers Who Stoned Officer Had Copy of Paper.

Longuet knew of the "Zimmerwald" attitude of the paper, but the assassination of the Colonel could not but be a surprise for him.

Longuet asked for an explanation. My French friends asked me, but I knew as much of the Marseilles assassination as they did. The matter happened to come to the knowledge of the correspondents of the Russian Liberal press, who were opponents in principle of "Nashe Slovo," and they disclosed the hidden history of the Marseilles event.

The fact was that simultaneously with the dispatch of Russian soldiers to Republican France, the Czar's Government in great haste mobilized a suitable detachment of spies and agents-provocateurs.

Among the latter was one Wining, who came from London with an introduction or recommendation from the Russian Consul. With Wining's participation, fermentation broke out among the Russian soldiers at Marseilles and as a result Col. Krause was stoned to death in the courtyard of the barracks. When soldiers who were arrested in connection with that event were searched, the same number of "Nashe Slovo" was found on several of them.

Briand's Explanation of Trotzky's Expulsion.

When Russian journalists went to Marseilles to find out what had happened they were told by officers that a certain Wining distributed and forced copies of "Nashe Slovo" on men who never asked for it, just at the time before the trouble broke out. That was the only reason for copies of the paper being found on the men arrested, who moreover did not even have the time to read them if they wanted to.

To a number of deputies, including Georges Leygues, who was the chairman of the Parliamentary Committee, Monsieur Briand pointed to the Marseilles affair as the reason for my expulsion. That could not fail to carry effect. But since on the other hand "Nashe Slovo" was published under strict censorship and was freely sold at the Paris kiosks, the affair remained mysterious until its connection with the work of the agent-provocateur become known. But it was war time. The Czar was an ally. Wining could not be openly exposed. So I was expelled from France and in Madrid a trap was set for me.

Mrs. Willebrandt Criticizes Permit System

ily expanding market for the commercial alcohol industry, which in the United States has grown from an annual production of 1,000,000 gallons in 1906 to more than 90,000,000 gallons in 1928."

Would it be unfair to the legitimate alcohol companies, anxious to keep a legitimate business, to restrict the amount they can manufacture to some figure reasonably near the actual needs of the country?

In my judgment, one of the most important steps to stop the largest source of liquor supply in the country today is for the Commerce Department or some other disinterested agency to find out how much alcohol is really needed to meet actual industrial demands, and then limit the issuance of permit privileges to figures reasonably near such needs. To deliberately grant so many privileges where liquor can flow in unlimited amounts just means increasing proportionately the number of inspectors to watch how the privileges are used. But no such increases in the inspectors' forces have been made. It would have been simpler to have withheld these grants. To trace leaks has become well-nigh hopeless. The Government's policy has been like pouring BB shot on the floor with one hand and trying to pick it up with the other.

I'm not inferring that all permittees are dishonest. Far from it. But the honest ones are put at a disadvantage by the weak-kneed policy of too easy grant of permits. They should not be subjected to the competition of "fly-by-night" concerns. There is every economic reason that old firms with established reputation will use Government privileges most fairly. They should be given first chance. Allowing newly organized firms to have these valuable permit rights should be done very infrequently. Some lawyers in the Treasury Department have justified their "yes-yes" policy by saying that the prohibition law gives the Commissioner no power to say "no" to applicants for permit privileges unless they are found to be actually convicted law breakers. I do not so construe the law. The only way any law can be made certain is to have the courts speak on it. I have urged, literally begged, prohibition officials yearly since 1922 to refuse applications and let the applicants sue. I have looked with eagerness to the chance thus to clarify the limits of discretionary powers of the Treasury Department in such matters. But the Prohibition Office has said "no" so seldom that only one case raising the question has reached the Supreme Court of the United States in the whole 10 years of enforcement. It was the case of the Ma-King Products Co., 271 U. S. 479, where the Court observed, "Here plainly the refusal of the permit involved no error of law."

Easy to Obtain Liquor Now.

What I'm emphasizing is that this too liberal grant of "special" permits has created a big source of liquor supply in the United States today. It is easy to obtain liquor now. The public believes that enforcement has broken down. The conditions might be quite different if a sturdy policy of restriction of special permits had been steadily maintained from the first.

Permits are no longer issued in Washington, but the formulae for these specially denatured alcohol privileges are subject to approval at Washington. In the reorganization of the last year and since civil service ratings have been required, some courageous administrators have been wrestling valiantly with the permit situation in their respective districts. Their task is no easy one, for although they may say "no" to the loose issuance of a new permit, most of them took charge of districts where far too many permits were already in existence. It is a much harder job under the law to revoke a privilege once given, upon which the citizen may be able to show a large outlay, than it is to prevent his securing the Government sanction to handle alcohol in the beginning.

One Leak Plugged.

To illustrate: In Philadelphia there functions as Prohibition Administrator Col. Samuel O. Wynne, one of the ablest men in the entire service. He inherited a whole flock of malodorous out-and-out diverters of alcohol from former halcyon days for alcohol racketeers in the City of Brotherly Love when permits were apparently doled out with a prodigal hand. He is reducing the flow of alcohol in his district very materially.

Frequently agents are called upon for a high degree of courage in curbing these powerful permittees. On Dec. 12, 1925, two investigators, Leo Connor and Andrew Quigley, with whom I have come into close personal contact with the result that I hold their efficiency and integrity in the highest esteem, "bumped off" the Burlington Distillery at Burlington, N. J. These men were informed by the Burlington people, "You won't last 30 days."

On Jan. 2, 1926, at 11 a. m., these agents were handed a telegram dated Dec. 31, from Washington, which read:

"Your services are discontinued at the close of business as of Dec. 31, 1925, without dereliction or misconduct.
(Signed) WALTON A. GREEN.

However, when the men stood pat and dignifiedly refused to enter into any bargains for reinstatement, W. G. Murdock, as administrator working for Gen. Andrews, said, "For God's sake don't tell anybody, not even your families, about that telegram." The men were reinstated.

This Burlington concern had been given a permit in 1920. The permit had been withdrawn by the Government for several years, but about 1924 there was a reorganization of the company and a reissuance of permit privileges. The evidence of the diversion of about 95,000 gallons of alcohol through a cover house was very plain When the revocation of the permit was in litigation, the Government was "represented" by Roscoe Harper, another one of Gen. Andrews' appointments mentioned elsewhere. He failed to call as witnesses the two agents who had collected the evidence. Consequently the Government lost the case, and the permit was reinstated. This is one of the permits which gave by the loose administrative policy I have just described, the power to manufacture an unlimited quantity of alcohol and to put it out denatured by any one of the special formulas many of which enable the alcohol to be used in beverages after a comparatively simple cleaning process.

Locking Door Before Theft.

As an excellent example of the value of a thorough investigation before granting permits, the Quaker Industrial Alcohol Distillery is a case in point. It had a broad basic permit granted in 1924. In 1927 it asked for the additional right to withdraw 100 000 gallons a month of their own "specially denatured" alcohol for the purpose of manufacturing, on their premises, ethyl acetate. The administrator before whom their request was pending refused to say "yes" loosely, without a careful investigation. The investigation disclosed that there was no legitimate market for the requested ethyl acetate, and the plant did not have the capacity to handle that much alcohol. The alleged increase was based upon faked orders. As a result of a court hearing the permit to withdraw the 100,000 gallons of alcohol a month was not only refused but the Quaker Industrial Alcohol Distillery had its permit privileges revoked on the ground of fraud.

A Six-Thousand-Dollar Bribe.

In October, 1928, in Baltimore, Col. A. W. W. Woodcock, one of the ablest of United States Attorneys, successfully prosecuted an alcohol case which is quite typical of the kinds of fraud in diversion which often are not detected or stopped. This was an "inside deal." An election official of the State of Maryland bribed chemists in charge of the denaturing process and others who ran the pumps which carried the pure alcohol to tanks. He spent altogether in bribes $6000. They loaded a car with pure alcohol and billed it as "Pyro" (pyro is a denatured alcohol used in automobile radiators). The election official being notified of the car's initials and number diverted it and sold the contents in the bootleg trade. He succeeded in getting about 10 cars out that way in a year. A simple calculation shows how much money he made in these transactions which were discovered. One carload of pure alcohol would make 64,000 quarts of synthetic whisky. At $4 a quart the 10 cars reached a bootleg value of $2,560,000. Even if obliged to bribe a few city police and deduct the price of bottling and delivery, the conspirators made a small fortune on an initial outlay in the form of a bribe of only $6000.

Before I lived so close to repulsive facts of this kind, I found it possible to be much more unconcerned at the sight of really splendid people of high principles imbibing bootleg liquors. Repeatedly facing the trail of bribery and ugly, unfair profits in the hands of racketeers which every quart of whisky signals today, I cannot put aside the conviction that the price is too high.

(In her next installment, Mrs. Willebrandt tells about the beer leak).

Reprints of the first six chapters of "The Inside of Prohibition" are available to those who may have missed the start of Mrs. Willebrandt's series of articles. They may be had for the asking in the Post-Dispatch business office, or by mail for a 2-cent stamp.

U. S. WON'T GET WINDOW FROM WESTMINSTER ABBEY

LONDON, Aug. 10.—No portion of Westminster Abbey is for sale and no section of it may be removed from its setting and transferred to a museum in the United States or elsewhere.

Dr. Foxley-Norris, dean of the Abbey, made this clear today when questioned about a letter written to him by Raymond Henniker-Heaton, one-time director of the Worcester, Mass., Art Museum and now art adviser in Europe for that institution, asking the dean if he would be willing to sell the famous sixteenth century window of Islip Chapel in the Abbey. It was assumed that removal of the window would be necessary if a proposed new sacristy were built in the north side of the Abbey.

The dean declared today, however, that the window would not be removed but would be left where it is now although its light would be blocked by the sacristy wall.

Old Portrait of Apostle In St. Louis Collection

Although the rumpus Sir Joseph Duveen raised by doubting the authenticity of "La Belle Feronniere" is not likely to be repeated in the instance of an ancient portrait of an Apostle's head owned by Miss Grace Rathell of 5602 Enright avenue, this old picture offers the same generous leeway for controversy as did the alleged Da Vinci work.

Differences arise at the outset when an attempt is made to name the Apostle represented in this canvas which time has criss-crossed with cracks. Dr. W. R. Valentiner, director of the Detroit Institute of Fine Arts, has pronounced it the head of St. Paul. He ascribes it to the eighteenth century.

John Briggs Potter, keeper of paintings in the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston, another nationally recognized expert, thinks it a sixteenth or seventeenth century work, a product of the Bolognese school. Valentiner also considers it to be an Italian piece. Potter guessed the identity of the Apostle as St. Peter.

Cut from Larger Painting.

The painting was obviously only a part of a much larger work and apparently has been removed with a knife from this larger canvas. Its ragged edges, tacked to the old frame, conjure up visions of invading soldiery, possibly Napoleon's Hussars stabling their horses in an Italian cathedral and hacking out the head as a souvenir because the whole picture was too cumbersome for convenient transportation.

Miss Rathell inherited the nameless portrait from her father, the late Sam T. Rathell, a real estate dealer whose home at 5618 Cabanne avenue, was once a treasure-trove of antiques and pieces of art. He acquired it when the effects of Admiral Farragut were auctioned off at "Londonderry," the Admiral's Maryland home, nearly 30 years ago. Where the Admiral found the painting during his travels has never been told.

Lesser art experts than those named have inspected the painting and their conjectures place its age between 200 and 500 years. Miss Rathell thinks it is a fifteenth century painting. She bases her opinion upon a wide observation of the evolution of painting as illustrated in the improvements that came with the centuries.

The Apostle—whoever he may be—is in the posture of a writer with stylus and a sheaf of papyrus. His expression is attentive as if he were carefully noting the words of a speaker. This circumstance and the incorrect perspective of the one visible forearm prove further that the work is fragmentary

Figurines on Clock.

Miss Rathell has other representations of Apostles—but these are exquisitely carved and colored wooden figurines which form the processional of an elaborate old Swiss clock eight feet high. This mechanism, reminiscent of those famed huge Apostles' Clocks in the Strassburg and Prague cathedrals, was also one of her father's treasures. It was imported by A. N. Cuendet, a former St. Louis jeweler who returned to Switzerland many years ago.

Because this big clock is better adapted to a large house than a modern apartment such as Miss Rathell occupies, it has been partly dismantled and has not been running for several years.

The upper dial is an Alpine landscape over which a mimic sun rose and set in accordance with the calendar. A dial below the clock face contains various small dials indicating the changes of the moon, the week days, the days of the month, the months and signs of the zodiac, the seasons, the four-year periods with leap year, the current year and the various events, such as Easter, Ascension Day and Whitsunday.

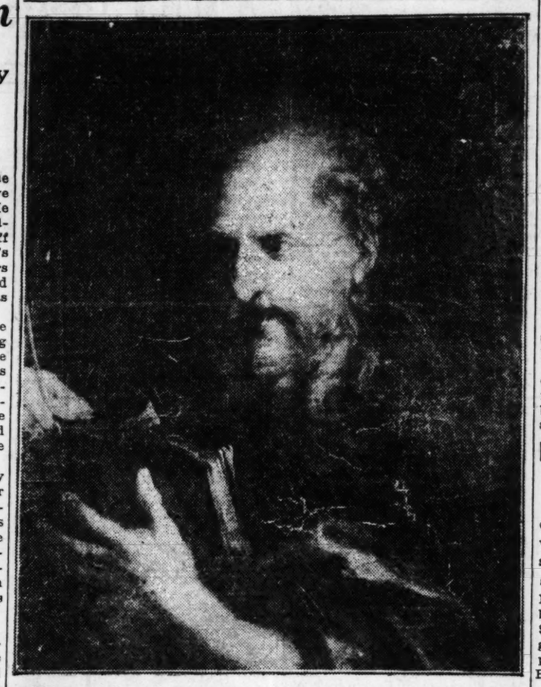
Music for Toy Processionals.

The pedestal contains a music box which plays three religious and three patriotic airs. To the air of "Stabat Mater," the figures of the twelve Apostles marched from a door to the center of the little stage, there turning to face a central door where the figure of Christ appeared and raised its arms in blessing while the tune "Old Hundred" was played. After Christ disappeared, the procession of Apostles turned and marched out of view through another door to the music of "Ave Maria."

Following this display, a bridal party of 22 pairs issued from a door while Mendelssohn's "Wedding March" and patriotic tunes were played as they circled the stage and returned into the clock by another door. The pairs represented in dress the 22 Cantons of the Swiss Republic. The 22 escutcheons of the Republic are carved and painted on the tiny railing across the front of the stage. The two processionals took place at noon and 9 p. m.

The entire clock, elaborately carved, is enclosed in an oak case in the Renaissance style, with beveled French plate glass on three sides.

Its Origin Unknown



THE portrait of an Apostle's head said to be from two to five centuries old. As it was cut from a larger painting, no mark appears to indicate the identity of the artist.

SENATOR LAFLAMME, NOTED CANADIAN LAWYER, DIES

He Was Counsel for Harry K. Thaw and Mrs. James A. Stillman.

By the Associated Press.

MONTREAL, Que., Aug. 10.—Senator N. K. Laflamme, 61 years old, Montreal lawyer and a noted figure in Canadian legal circles, died today at his summer home near Montreal.

Senator Laflamme, a native of Quebec, began the practice of law in 1893 and during the past 25 years had figured in most of the important trials held in the province.

He was one of the counsel retained by Harry K. Thaw, murderer of Stanford White, the architect, when Thaw escaped into Quebec in 1912 from Matteawan Asylum. He succesfully blocked efforts of the New York authorities to obtain the return of Thaw until the Canadian immigration officials forcibly ejected Thaw.

Senator Laflamme was one of the attorneys retained by Mrs. James A. Stillman at a Montreal hearing into the unsuccessful divorce action brought against her by her husband, the New York financier.

The Browns today find themselves still holding on to third place by a half-game margin over the Cleveland Indians. This piece of ing situation, however, exists because of what the Browns did opening their home-stay with Washington yesterday afternoon, because of what the Yankees did Cleveland. Here, the Browns lost to the Senators, 4—2; in Cleveland the world champions beat the Indians by the same score.

Stewart Has Two Bad Innings.

Walter Stewart, twice victor over the Senators, this season, failed in his attempt to add another to his string. He had only two bad innings—the second and third. In the second, the Senators made a single run, and in the third, by several long-distance clouting, they made their other three. In this inning a single, a double, triple, a sacrifice-fly and an infield out, figured in the scoring. Ogden pitched after the sixth and held the Senators rather easily.

Washington also had to use two pitchers—Marberry and Braxton. The Browns failed to bother Marberry until the sixth when an error by Hayes on Kress was followed by Melillo's triple and a double by Roetz for the two St. Louis runs. Braxton went the last three innings and allowed only one hit, a single by Schulte in the eighth.

Roetz Plays Well at First.

Lu Blue was out of action with an attack of indigestion and Ed Roetz subbed acceptably for him at first, handling 11 chances without a slip. In fact, the Browns played errorlessly as a team while Washington was charged with two misplays.

Neither Manush nor Goslin, batting leaders of 1928, made a hit during the afternoon.

In the second of the four-game series today, George Blaeholder will be pitted against either Sowell Bob Burke or right-hander Irving Hadley.

SARATOGA RACE TRACK, N. Y., Aug. 10.—Before a crowd estimated that 16,500 race fans and over a drying track, H. P. Whitney's Whichone, with Pony McAtee up, scored an impressive victory in the Saratoga Special Stakes here today. The Three D's Stable's Pansy Walker was second and Fair Stable's Sarazen II third.

It is purely a sporting race in which all the money and a gold cup go to the winner. Whichone received $16,500. The gold cup was presented by John Curtin, chairman of the New York State Racing Commission.

The race was marred by an accident that occurred at the start. The new style barrier failed to work and when the word "come on" was given Broadway Limited broke but was caught in the barrier. It was wound around him and he finally fell. O'Donnell, who had the mount, escaped unhurt. The colt was caught before he could run away.

Pansy Walker got off flying and set a terrific pace, leading by a wide margin to the stretch. However, she could not hold her advantage and in the final furlong Whichone, which had broken a bit slowly, came around the field and took the lead. He simply breezed away in the stretch to win by six lengths. Pansy Walker beat Sarazen II four lengths for the place.

Incidentally it was the first score for Young Jimmy Rowe, who succeeded his father as trainer for H. P. Whitney's Stable.

U. S. Wins Wightman Cup When Miss Wills Defeats Miss Nuthall

By Alan J. Gould,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Aug. 10. — Helen Wills clinched the Wightman Cup for America today, but it took one of the hardest-won triumphs of her career to turn back the challenge of her youthful English rival, Betty Nuthall, and regain the emblem of women's tennis supremacy for this country.

For nearly an hour, while a gallery of more than 8000 spectators sat thrilled in the big west side club's stadium, the queen of the world's courts was played to a standstill by the bounding, impetuous rush of the 18-year-old English girl. Expecting a one-sided victory, the crowd was startled instead by one of the most dramatic battles of Miss Wills career as well as one of the biggest upsets of the tennis season.

Queen Helen won, finally, by scores of 8—6, 8—6, applying the winning touch in identical fashion in each set, but for 56 minutes of slashing action the American was given the sternest battle she has had in three years.

One deuce set has been a novelty for Miss Wills as she has swept the courts of both Europe and America the last few seasons. Two, of the same length, proved to be nothing short of sensational for onlookers accustomed to see her mow down all opposition.

Close to Losing Set.

As a matter of fact, the Californian was closer to losing a set than at any time since 1927 at Wimbledon, where she dropped one to Gwynneth Sterry. What was more unusual, she was face to face, perhaps for the first time in her career, with a girl willing as well as capable of matching her generalship as well as tremendous driving power from the base line.

It was a stirring, fitting climax for the two-day series to be decided by the victory of Miss Wills over the ace of the British team. The final margin was four matches for American to three for England. It was gained altogether on the superiority of the home forces in singles. They won four of the five individual matches while the British captured both doubles contests.

Through the triumphs of Miss Wills and Helen Jacobs in the singles, yesterday, the United States led, 2—1, a margin that was saved by an even break in the concluding four matches today. Edith Cross, third of the California stars on the American squad, scored the third singles victory over Mrs. Peggy Saunders Michell in a well-played duel, decided by scores of 6—3, 2—6, 6—3, after Mrs. Phoebe Watson had evened the count for

America Holds Edge

By the Associated Press.

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Aug. 10. —America now holds the edge over Great Britain in the Wightman Cup tennis series, gaining possession of the trophy for the fourth time as a result of today's victory. The British have won it three times.

The results of the matches:

1923—United States 7; Great Britain 0.
1924—Great Britain 5; United States 1.
1925—Great Britain 4; United States 3.

1928—Great Britain 4; United States 3.
1929—United States 4; Great Britain 3.

England by overcoming Miss Jacobs in straight sets, 6—3, 6—2.

British Win Doubles.

After Miss Wills' decisive victory, the English team of Mrs. Phyllis Covell and Mrs. Dorothy Shepherd-Barron took the final double match from Mrs. Hazel Hotchkiss Wightmann, donor of the cup, and Miss Jacobs, 6—2, 6—1.

When Helen Wills broke through Betty Nuthall's new overhand service in the first game of their match the crowd set back in anticipation of another one-sided victory for the champion, but it only took a few minutes for Betty to retaliate by piercing her rival's delivery. From then on, it was a ding-dong battle as each went to deuce, the winner

Carl Kauffmann of Pittsburg, retained his national public links golf title, winning it for the third time in a row, when he defeated Milton Soncrant, postal clerk of Toledo, O., 4 up and 2 to play, in the 36-hole final match of the eighth annual tournament over the 18-hole municipal course in Forest Park yesterday before the largest gallery which ever witnessed a public links final.

The crowd which followed the afternoon match hole by hole was estimated at 3000 and in addition there were more than 2000 persons scattered about the course who viewed the play at several holes.

Kauffmann finished the morning round 2 down, but in the afternoon he began to play his usual steady game, soon squared the match and once he was in the lead, was never headed, increasing his margin until he was 4 up and 4 to play, going to No. 15.

Then he lost the 15th to be only three up but won the 16th to take the match 4 and 2.

The large crowd made play difficult throughout the day. It was bad enough in the morning, when probably 1000 persons viewed the play, but in the afternoon, people were scattered all over the fairways while the players were trying to drive; they crowded them on their second and third shots, swarmed around the greens, packed in so tightly that it was necessary for the police to wedge a way through the crowd for the players to get on the greens.

All of this failed to disturb Kauffman in the least. The Pittsburg clerk, smoking cigarettes incessantly, refused to be ruffled at any time during the match and even in the morning, when the breaks were going against him, played at his "dime-a-hole," commercial gate. When his game came back to him in the afternoon, he played just the same with unsmiling countenance and slow swing.

Soncrant Ahead at 18 Holes.

Soncrant took advantage of several breaks in the morning to gain his lead, but in the afternoon, when the champion recovered his form, the Toledo man was unable to cope with his opponent. Soncrant's driving, while not sensational, was generally longer than Kauffmann's but his approach shots and his putting were far inferior in the afternoon, although in the morning he had the edge in these departments of the game.

Neither of the contestants had a medal score to brag about although Kauffmann shot the first nine in the afternoon in par figures. For the 36 holes they played he had 146, nine over par, while Soncrant, with 152 strokes, was 15 over par. Birdies also were scarce throughout the day. Kauffmann had none at all in the morning and only one in the afternoon, while Soncrant had two in the morning and none in the afternoon.

Kauffman started off well in the afternoon, while rain threatened, and regained one hole only to have Soncrant regain the advantage a moment later. Kauffmann was playing right with par, however, and by playing the first six holes in one over par he wiped out the lead of Soncrant.

Afternoon Round Details.

A bad break enabled the champion to whittle Soncrant's margin to one up on the nineteenth hole. Soncrant's second shot was stymied by a large tree, forcing him to lose a stroke and take a 5. Kauffmann was on in two and in the cup for a 4.

Soncrant made it up, however, on the twentieth. His second shot

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 10.—Grover Cleveland Alexander, 43-year-old veteran of 19 seasons in the National League, gained whole possession of the league record for most games won this afternoon when he was credited with the victory that the Cardinals scored over the Phillies in the second game of a double-header, after a courageous uphill struggle.

It was Alexander's 373d victory, surpassing the record which he held jointly with the late Christy Mathewson after his last previous triumph. The score was 11 to 9 and gave the Cardinals an even break for the day as the Phillies won the first game, 7 to 1.

Alex Hero of Contest.

Bill McKechnie and his men have not had much to cheer about lately. Defeat in the first contest of the double-header was their fourth in succession, but their own courage of fight in overcoming an eight-run Philadelphia lead and Alexander's fine pitching gave them cause for a celebration, and only the Old Master's fleetness of foot, despite his 43 years, prevented the Red Birds from carrying the veteran off the field on their shoulders. But when he saw Lerian's grounder bouncing toward Gelbert for the last out in the eleventh inning he broke for the clubhouse, and he was well on his way to the door before his cheering companions reached him. Then he fought them off and insisted on walking the rest of the way to the shower bath that he had so well earned.

Haines Routed.

The score was 9 to 8 in the Phillies' favor when Alexander went to the hill. He was the fourth Cardinal pitcher to answer McKechnie's call during the game. Jess Haines had started and had been pounded for eight hits and six runs and knocked out with nobody out in the second inning. Taul Haid then took up the burden and was lambasted for two runs in the fifth.

Chick Hafey hit a homer in the sixth with two on, but the Phillies came back with a run off Sherdel in their half and it looked like a double defeat at the hands of the tail-end Phillies, a terrible disgrace for the once proud Red Birds. But Lester Sweetland lost his stuff and the Cardinals added four runs in the seventh on a pass, two singles, a sacrifice fly and a home run by Roettger and another in the eighth off Bob McGraw, who relieved Sweetland.

Alex Again the Old Master.

Then Alexander went to the hill and Bottomley doubled in the ninth and scored the tieing run on Chick Hafey's single.

Alexander again was the Old Master. Just as he was invincible on that October afternoon in 1926 when he struck out Lazzeri to save to the winners' share of the world series pot for the Cardinals, so today he pitched as though a pot of gold depended on his old right arm.

The dangerous Phillies threatened. Whitney led off in the ninth with a single and advanced on a sacrifice. But after Thevenow took a called third strike, Alexander walked Lerian intentionally and when Cy Williams went in to bat for McGraw, Alexander treated him as he did Lazzeri and struck him out.

Then in the tenth with one out Friberg doubled, but Alex walked O'Doul intentionally, got the free swinging Klein on a pop fly and Whitney on a fly to Roettger.

This display of masterful pitching was enough to inspire anybody and the Cardinals won the game for Old Pete in the eleventh. Frankie Frisch led off with a double that rattled against the score board in center and Jim Bottomley followed with a double against the high right field screen—the home run catcher recently installed at Baker Bowl—and Frisch scampered home. Hafey walked and Roettger bunted into a double play, but Charley Gelbert singled to right to send Bottomley home, giving Alexander a two-run margin over the enemy.

Alexander pitched with the ease and grace to belie his long years of service and his excellent showing has inspired hope that he may bag the necessary seven more victories to give him the remarkable averageof 20 victories a year for the 19 years he has served in the National League.

Willoughby Invincible in First.

Willoughby's pitching was the high light of the first game. He held the Cards to three hits in seven innings and they didn't score until the eighth when they bunched three singles. The St. Louis pitching, on the other hand, was bad in two frames, in which the Phils scored all of their runs. Thompson's single, Friberg's double and O'Doul's single produced two tallies in the first frame. Sherdel escaped further trouble until the fourth when he was knocked out of the box. Tommy Thevenow, a Cardinal hero in 1926, started the big rally with a double to center and scored when Davis doubled against the bleacher wall in left-center. On Willoughby's bunt Davis was run down, but Thompson singled to right, sending Willoughby to third and Friberg singled to score Willoughby and send Thompson to third.

Mitchell then relieved Sherdell and O'Doul beat out a grounder to High, scoring Thompson. Klein forced O'Doul, but Whitney doubled down the left field line, scoring Friberg and Klein.

Hallahan went to the hill in the fifth and gave three hits and no runs in three innings, walking only two men and Frankhouse pitched the ninth without the Phils adding to their hit or run total.

The lower third of the Cardinal batting order did all of the hitting against Willoughby, Douthit, High, Frisch, Bottomley, Hafey and Roettger going through the game without a safety.

Orsatti Drives in Lone Run.

Gelbert singled in the second inning and Sherdel got the next hit, a single in the third. Mitchell singled in the fifth and the Red Birds then went hitless until the eighth when Gelbert led off with his second single. Earl Smith singled against the right center field wall, sending Gelbert to third and Jonnard ran for Smith and Orsatti batted for Halahan. Ernie singled against the right field screen, scoring Gelbert, but Douthit was called out on strikes and High hit into a double play which was made possible when Jonnard tried to think.

Andy tapped to Willoughby and Orsatti beat the pitcher's throw to second, but Thevenow's relay nipped High at first. Jonnard, thinking the double play had been completed, wandered off third and started for the dug out. When Jonnard saw Hurst chasing him with the ball he realized his mistake, but it was too late then and he was doubled, Hurst to Davis.

Cardinal Notes

TOMORROW the Cardinals will have a day of rest. It is the first time in years that the Red Birds have not used a Sunday in Philadelphia for an exhibition game.

Between games friends of Jimmy Wilson gave the Cardinal catcher a golf bag and a set of clubs. Burt Shotton received a basket of flowers.

Orsatti lost a home run in the eighth inning, as a result of the 12-foot screen recently placed on the right field wall. The ball bounced back into the field and Ernie got only a single out of the blow. He was batting for Hallahan.

Bottomley had only one put-out in the first game, very unusual for a first baseman.

Barney Friberg, playing left field for the Phillies, made a real spectacular catch in the fifth inning. He went to the fence for Roettger's foul, stabbed the ball back-handed when within a yard of the wall and held the ball and avoided a collision.

O'Doul's second single knocked Haines out of the box, in the second inning of the second game and, as Jess was leaving the field, he said a few unkind words to Umpire McLaughlin. Jess thought he had Friberg struck out to start the inning, but McLaughlin called it a ball and Friberg then doubled. Jess went from the mound to the dugout, ignoring McLaughlin's order to leave the field. Play was suspended until Jess complied.

WRAY'S COLUMN

Vindicated.

WE note that Red Kress of the Browns has moved up into the clean-up position and made good at it the first try. He hit two homers, each with a man on. Kress was one of the bones of contention that caused considerable growling in the Browns' official dugout, on several occasions. Howley has always maintained Kress was both a great fielder and a fine hitter. Red was off to a slow start and the office managers of the club became uneasy. Howley was ordered to use Roetz and to make other substitutions, all proved flivvers.

It is quite natural that a man who handles players should know more about them than those who merely sign them. It is also natural for a club owner to become uneasy when the heralded stars delay their "arrival."

Several clubs have found success in giving their managers plenty of latitude and one of them is about to win a pennant, McCarthy of the Cubs. The Browns have tried all sorts of control—field, office and remote; and, while they have not succeeded as yet, they obtained the best results in the days of managers who were allowed to handle the players without drastic interference.

Real Things in Commissions.

THE commission way of regulating boxing and wrestling is due for a fine test in Illinois, if the personnel of the members just named by Gov. Emmerson means anything. A millionaire coal operator, a former Brigadier-General and World War hero and a banker comprise the group of three men that will handle the destinies of boxing in Chicago and the State.

Of the three, Mr. George Getz, the millionaire business man, demonstrated his executive ability when he, in connection with Rickard, put over the second Tunney-Dempsey fight for the greatest "gate" known to pugilistic history. He had a splendid initiation into the promotion angles of the ring racket.

Gen. John S. Clinnin has been a follower of amateur athletics all his life and has held the middle and light-heavyweight boxing championships of the Central A. A. U.

Fred Gardner, Chicago banker, also was an amateur boxer.

The commissioners are qualified both in brains, experience and community standing to uplift the game. If such a group of men fails to clarify the pugilistic atmosphere, we might as well admit the trouble is incurable.

Missouri Body Ranks High.

MISSOURI is also very well equipped for the work to be done. Seneca Taylor, a lawyer, has followed boxing since he was knee high. Chester Brewer, State University Athltic Director, also has experience and executive ability. Harry S. Davis of Kansas City already has shown he was a live one by the way he made Young Stribling toe the mark when he sought to run out of the match with George Cook.

The success of a commission is entirely up to the individuals composing it. In this respect Missouri and Illinois now seem to be all set for a big forward move.

Can No One Stop Him?

SEE where Gus Sonnenberg is going to defend his title against Stanley Pinta in Waterloo, Ia. We hope there's something in that name, Waterloo, besides a reference to history.

We see no hope in Stanley Pinta. In fact, we don't know whether Pinta is the name. It might be our old friend Dan Koloff pulling another one of those things.

There seems no way to prevent Gus from taking these desperate risks of violence and defeat, three or four times a week. But the poor fellow must do something to keep the wolf from the door. He's down to his last $200,000 or so as it is.

They do say Gus would be a wow, if he only knew how to wrestle.

Perhaps the public as well as the push overs would fall for him then.

in doubt right up to the final strokes.

For game after game, Helen found her most stinging shots returned, full force. The champion's service was no more reliable than that of Betty, whose first ball, when she was getting it in, proved almost unreturnable. If Miss Wills kept the English girl on the run at times, she also found herself doing a full share of the chasing, as Betty craftily mixed the length of her strokes.

At times Queen Helen seemed in complete command, angling her shots beautifully, at others, she hit wildly or was passed completely by the daringly successful shots that came off Betty's forehand or backhand. Seldom did either come to the net and as the match was prolonged, the remarkable ability of Betty to hold her own with the greatest of women baseline drivers astonished the gallery.

Few players have tried, much less succeeded in holding the champion even at her own game, yet Betty did it for 12 games in each set. In fact, Miss Nuthall held leads of 5—4 and 6—5 in each set—four times altogether within a single game of winning—but in each critical stage, where every point counted, the champion was still champion—the decisive breaks came in the thirteenth game of each set, with Miss Wills upsetting Miss Nuthall's service and then clinching the issue on her own.

Toward the Close.

The only stage of the match where either consistently maintained an advantage was in the closing three games of the first set and the first two of the second set, as Miss Wills took these five in a row. It appeared Miss Nuthall had shot her bolt. She was tiring fast, it seemed, but recovered so rapidly that she ran off the next three games in a row to make it a battle once more.

Again, in the seventh game of Wills ...442 034 424 415 54-46—8 Nuthall .024 452 146 043 32-40—6 the final set, as Miss Wills broke through service with the aid of a faulty line decision, the end seemed near. Betty's reserve, however, was equal to breaking through the champion's service in the eighth game. In the twelfth, as they battled furiously, the English girl was within two points of capturing the set.

She led at 6—5 after deuce was called on Miss Wills' service, then missed by inches on a try for a cross-court placement that would have given her advantage point. It was a "break" for Helen. She seized it to win the game and then take the next two for the set and match.

In her only apearance in the singles, Miss Cross, the third national ranking player, won a hard-hitting encounter from Mrs. Mitchell to put the American team in the lead after Miss Jacobs had fallen before the smooth-stroking Mrs. Watson. Miss Cross capitalized a service break in the sixth game and two net-cord shots in the seventh game to win the first set, dropped the second after apparently having it well in hand and then rallied to capture the deciding set as she outdrove, outgeneraled her opponent.

MRS. DUEKER AND MISS ENDICOTT WIN SEMIFINALS

Melicent Endicott of Forest Park and Mrs. Virginia Baer Dueker, O'Fallon Park star, reached the final round of the Municipal women's singles tennis championship at Forest Park yesterday. Miss Endicott defeated Mrs. Ann Lindemann, O'Fallon, 6—4, 6—2, in one semifinal match, while Mrs. Dueker won from Lottie Hagemeyer, Forest Park, 6—1, 6—4, in the other.

In the first set of their semifinal match Mrs. Lindemann put up a good battle against Miss Endicott. The Forest Park player scored 39 points while Mrs. Lindemann counted 35 points. In the Missouri Valley championship at Independence, Kan., last month, Miss Endicott won, 6—2, 6—2.

Mrs. Virginia Dueker surprised by winning the first set from Miss Hagemeyer by a 6—1 score. The O'Fallon Park player counted 34 points while Miss Hagemeyer scored only 22. There were five duce games in the second set. Mrs. Dueker scored 44 points as compared to 36 counted by the Forest Park player.

In the final round of the women's singles today, Melicent Endicott will oppose Mrs. Dueker. Last week Miss Endicott defeated Mrs. Dueker 6—1, 6—3, in a team match between Forest Park and O'Fallon Park. The final today is expected to be closer with Miss Endicott favored to win and succeed Ruth Bailey, Forest Park, as the champion.

BOEHMER WINS TENNESSEE NET CHAMPIONSHIP

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Aug. 10. — Crowning of junior singles, boys' singles and women's doubles champions and the reaching of the finals in men's singles and doubles featured today's play in the annual Tennessee State open tennis tournament in progress on the courts of the University Club. Stubbornly contested matches in all divisions, held under a scorching sun that made endurance a deciding factor, were witnessed by the largest and most enthusiastic gallery of the season in which society was excellently represented.

Gustav Boehmer Jr., St. Louis, Missouri Valley junior champion, added the Tennessee State title to his string at the expense of Robert "Lefty" Bryan, Chattanooga. Boehmer defeated Bryan in a terrific match in the finals that went five sets. The score was 3—6, 6—2, 2—6, 6—4, 8—6. They had to meet again later in the day in a semifinal men's singles tilt and Boehmer won in four sets, 7—5, 6—1, 5—7, 9—7.

Teddy Burwell, Charlotte, N. C., who eliminated Teddy Eggmann, St. Louis, in a hard-fought semifinal match today, scores 6—2, 2—6, 6—4, 6—3, 6—4, will match skill with junior Boehmer of St. Louis, conqueror of "Lefty" Bryan, Chattanooga, in the championship round match of the men's singles tomorrow afternoon at the University Club at 2:30. Jimmy Durhan and Billy Hughes, local players who hold the tri-State and Arkansas State doubles titles, entered the final round of the men's doubles in the Tennessee championships when Eggmann and William Martin, St. Louis, defaulted. Eggmann and Martin have to leave Sunday morning for home.

Seeded Players Advance in Net Meet in County

By Davison Obear

The fifteenth annual St. Louis County tennis championship opened yesterday afternoon on the courts of the Westborough Country Club. Owing to rain which delayed the start of the men's singles events, all first round matches were not completed.

While all of the seeded players advanced, there were some surprising results. Proctor Wright of Webster Groves fell before the better placements of Kenneth Senkosky, another Webster entry. The match required the limit of three sets, Senkosky winning, 7—5, 4—6, 6—1.

In the first set each player won his own service until the score reached 5-all. Senkosky then took his service and broke through Wright's service to win the set. Wright ran up a 5 to 1 lead in the second set, but Senkosky took three straight games and threatened to deuce the set. Wright outplaced his opponent to win the set, 6—4. In the third set, Senkosky kept a safe lead and was steadier in the pinches.

Gus Weinstock, University City player, won a hard-fought battle from Francis Gillespie of Clayton, in another first round contest. The score was 6—4, 7—5. Weinstock was steadier than his apponent.

Forrest C. Stuckman, referee, announced that all first round singles matches must be played before 3 p. m. today or players not reporting will be defaulted. First round doubles matches will start today and must be finished by tomorrow night. Second round singles matches must also be finished by tomorrow night.

Kauffmann Wins His Third National Parks Golf Title

pitched 2 feet of the cup and he had an easy par 3. Kauffmann was on in 2 and took 2 putts.

Kauffman won the short twenty-first with a par 3 to Soncrant's 4 and was 1 down.

The rain stopped. They halved the long twenty-second in par fives. Because of a nice 125-yard approach, Kauffmann had a chance for a birdie but missed a 4-foot putt.

The gallery now totaled about 2000. Both got par fives on the 488-yard dog leg, twenty-third. Soncrant was still one up. The champion squared it on the twenty-fourth when he got a par 3, while Soncrant required 3 putts for a 4.

Kauffmann went one up for the first time since the ninth hole when he captured the twenty-fifth hole with a par 4. Soncrant's second landed in a sand trap back of the green and he took two shots to explode to the carpet, getting a bad 6.

They halved the twenty-sixth in par 4. Kauffmann nabbed a birdie 5 on the long twenty-seventh and was 2 up. His shots were all long and true and a pretty pitch gave him his advantage. Soncrant got a par 6.

Starting the after-lunch round 2 down, Kauffmann reached the first green in 2 and won the hole with par 4 when Soncrant's second lodged behin a tree and he had to sacrifice a stroke to get out. He was on the green in 3 and took two putts.

Soncrant got this hole back at No. 2 when he ran a good approach close to the cup for a par 3 while Kauffmann, on in two, required two putts.

Kauffmann failed to reach the third green with his drive while Soncrant was just off the front edge, but Kauffmann made a splendid approach and got down in three, while Soncrant's second left him a 6-foot putt which he missed and again was only one up.

Soncrant's third shot was over the back edge of No. 4 green and his fourth hit the cup and bounced away and he missed his birdie, while Kauffmann, close in three, missed the short putt for a birdie and they halved the hole with fives.

Kauffmann played it safe straight down No. 5 fairway with his first and second shots, while Soncrant with a good first, slammed the ball over No. 15 tee and both were on the green about 20 feet away in 3. Kauffmann putted two feet past the cup while Soncrant missed his try for a birdie and the hole was halved in par five.

Both reached No. 6 green with their tee shots. Kaufmann putted past the cup while Soncrant was short, missed his three and lost the hole to be even when Kaufmann sank his third.

Kaufmann Takes the Lead.

They started the seventh with good drives, but Soncront's second rolled over the back of the green into a trap, while Kouffmann's stayed on.

Soncrant took two to get out of the sand and had six while Kauffmann got his gar four to go one up to rthe first time since the ninth hole of the morning round. But he was never down again.

No. 8 was halved with par four, while on No. 9 Soncrant was almost hole high and to the right with two ringing wood shots and a good iron(while Kouffman's third was short. The champion ran his approach close, however, and got a birdie five, while Soncrant's chip was short and he took two putts for a par six to be two down.

Kauffmann went three up at No. 10. He was on with his tee shot while Soncrant was to the left. Kauffmann got his par three while Soncrant's approach left him about a five-footer, which he missed.

A Short Cut, a Hole Won.

Concrant gambled at No. 11 and won the hole when his second, cutting through the trees to the right, struck several leaves but continued through to the fairway, while Kauffman played straight down the fairway and was short with his third. Soncrant's third was past the cup but he got down in two putts, while Kauffmann, on in four, also took two putts for a six and was only two up.

Kauffmann's tee shot at No. 12 rolled over the back edge while Soncrant was to the left. Soncrant tried to drive the ball into the bank in the hope that it would bounce on the green. It did, but was far from the cup, while Kauffmann got his second nicely on. Both missed their putts, however, and the hole was halved in fours.

Trees Stymie Soncrant.

Kauffmann won No. 13 with par 4 to Soncrant's 5, when the latter, stymied by trees after his first shot, pitched high over them and to the green, which failed to hold and the ball rolled over the back edge. Soncrant chipped back but required two putts while Kauffmann, on in two, toow two putts.

Kauffmann put his second on No. 14 green while Soncrant was short and his approach left him a 12-foot putt, which he missed, and was four down when Kauffmann got down in the regulation two putts.

Soncrant made his final effort to stay in the game at No. 15. To the left of the green with his tee shot, he was on in two and won the hole with a par four, when Kauffmann, down the hill to the right, failed to get on with his first, pitched on in three and was down in five. This left Kauffmann still 3 up and 3 to go.

The rally was brief for the challenger, however, because he put his drive off No. 16 tee into the water and his second effort was in the trees to the left. He was short of the green in four, while Kauffmann was nicely on in 2 and won the hole with a par 4 to Soncrant's 6 and the match was over.

Soncrant took a lead of 2 up at the eighteenth hole, but was squared at the twenty-fourth hole and went 2 down at the twenty-seventh. A crowd of more than 2000 followed the final round.

Soncrant's morning advantage was gained due in a large measure to superior putting and his ability to make fine recoveries from difficult lies. He also was favored with some good fortune, while Kauffmann was unable to get a break.

Kauffmann had a medal score for the morning of 79, 40 on the first nine and 39 on the second, while Soncrant had 41 on the first nine and 36 on the second, for 77. Soncrant had two birdies and both were due to sinking long putts. He dropped a 20-footer on No. 4 for a birdie 4 and 25-footer on the fifteenth for a birdie 3. Kauffmann failed to score a single hole undar par.

They started out under the boiling sun, but while they were playing No. 11, it began to rain. After a brief shower, the skies cleared and as they finished it was very hot.

Mrs. Gann has been definitely and finally placed, but where to put the divers and sundry animals now mascoting at the capital is a matter that is occupying some of the best minds in Washington.

When Secretary Stimson, returning from Manila, included in his official family a billy goat named William Hamilton Bones and a parrot answering to the euphonious but hangoverian monaker of Old Soak, he started something that he hasn't been able, so far, to bring to a successful conclusion.

So many new and strange names have been added to Who's Zoo in Washington that several congressional noses are reported to be out of alignment.

KAUFFMANN TIES A RECORD, TAKING HIS THIRD TITLE

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 10.—Pittsburg golfers, from the public linkers to those who play the ancient game on such exclusive courses as Oakmont, tonight hailed Carl Kauffmann, three times national champion of the municipal links.

Homage was paid the 34-year-old stenographer-titleholder not only as the winner of the 1929 tournament at St. Louis toda,, but as one who had won three successive championships, a feat accomplished only once before, when Willie Anderson won the national open in 1903, 1904 and 1905.

A near parallel to Kauffmann's record is that of Bobby Jones, who won the amateur four out of five years, the break coming in the middle when he was defeated by Von Elm in 1926 after winning in 1924 and 1925. If Bobby should win this year's event at Pebble Beach, Cal., after having been successful in 1927 and 1928, he will have equaled Kauffmann's mark.

Kauffman won his first title at Cleveland in 1927 and the second at Buffalo in 1928. In 1925 at New York he was beaten in the semifinal game and in 1926 he was defeated in the final at Buffalo. He fell short in attempting to qualify for the national amateur last year.

An employe of a machinery company here, the national champion wields his wood and iron whenever there is a respite from shorthand and dictation. An unassuming fellow who drives and putts in silence both in the game of life and the game of golf, he's the "big shot" of the public links, especially at Schenley, Pittsburg's only public course.

Sidelights ON THE Golf Tourney

Morning Round.

Kauffman had the honor on the first tee due to the fact that he was the defending champion and the judge called him first.

Ben Lahrman, president of the Municipal Athletic Association and of the Forest Park Golf Club, was referee.

There were traffic jams on the narrow bridges leading over the water at No. 1, No. 2 and No. 3. Police held the crowd back until the players, caddies and referee were over, then it was everybody for himself or herself.

The sympathy of the gallery was with Soncrant, but each player was given a generous hand when he made a good shot. However, one woman's desire for a Soncrant victory got the better of her while Kauffman was putting on the sixth green and as he struck the ball, she shouted "Miss it, miss it," and he did miss it. Kauffmann turned around, bowed and said, "Thank you." But if looks could kill—— That was the only instance of poor sportsmanship.

While the players were putting on No. 16 there was a traffic jam on the road nearby and how either of them got the ball down with the din of honking horns is a mystery. Kauffmann did miss a short putt for a half but scorned to blame it on the noise.

Soncrant started out with a cigar in his mouth, unlighted, much on the order of Otto Stein, when he is bowling. When he was making a shot he laid the cigar on the grass and then usually had a hard time finding it. He would shout "Fore," and those near him would look around carefully before taking a step for fear of stepping on the cigar. The first weed didn't last him throughout the 18 holes and some one who declared he had counted said Soncrant chewed up four cigars on the round.

The crowd watched intently as the contestants drove over the water at No. 17, probably in the hope of seeing them put a few in the lagoon, but both were nicely on the green with their tee shots.

Soncrant's second shot on the 18th hole rolled over the green and stopped in the long grass below an embankment. He walked briskly to the ball whistling "When Dreams Come True." Evidently his didn't, for he took a 5 on the hole to a 4 for Kauffmann, and was only 2 up instead of 3.

Afternoon Round.

The huge afternoon gallery was generally orderly and good natured, although officials and policemen worked overtime trying to keep them out of the way of balls.

One old superstition was dealt a blow but also won again. That is the one which has it that a medalist never wins a golf tournament. As Kauffmann and Soncrant tied for medal honors, the old boy won one and lost one.

Soncrant was a professional several years ago at the Sidney Golf Club, Sidney, O. At present he is employed in the postoffice at Toledo. He is married and has two children, but made the trip here at his own expense.

There were many cheers when Kauffmann's tee shot rolled over the back of No. 12 green for Soncrant and off to the left in the trees. "That makes it even" was the shout, but what was really meant was "that makes it harder on Kauffmann." The crowd wanted to see a new champion crowned.

Bob Graham, the huge special policeman from Pittsburg, acted as Kauffmann's bodyguard and adviser throughout. And when a way had to be cleared through the crowd, Bob certainly cleared it.

Ganson Depew, chairman of the Public Links Section Committee of the United States Golf Association, refereed the afternoon match.

Depew was tickled with the crowd and said it was four or five times larger than any which had ever before witnessed a national public links final.

Suspension of a local rule helped Soncrant on No. 5 in the afternoon round. His drive was to the right and he put his second high over No. 15 tee. Ordinarily shooting over the tee carries a 5-stroke penalty, but during the tournament players were permitted to shoot over the tee.

ST. PAUL WINS RADIO TRACK AND FIELD MEET

The Mid-Western Playground Radio Track and Field Meet, held yesterday afternoon in eight cities throughout the Middle West, including St. Louis, was won by St. Paul and the local Public School playgrounds finished fourth. The winners rolled up a total of 52 points, placing in every event to lead the second place Louisville team by 20 points.

Honors for third place developed into a hot battle between Evansville and St. Louis, with the Indiana playground team winning out by the scant margin of a half point, counting 24 to the locals 23½ points. Chicago took fifth place with 17½, Kansas City sixth with 15½ and Duluth seventh with 5½ points. Hibbing, Minn., the eighth city to compete, was unplaced.

TILDEN-HUNTER TEAM DEFEATED; MERCUR WINNER IN THE SINGLES

By the Associated Press.

SOUTHAMPTON, N. Y., Aug. 10. —Under the withering racquet fire of a brilliant pair of college stars Bill Tilden and Frank Hunter went down to defeat today in their first tournament since they returned from the Davis cup campaign abroad.

Dealing sudden death from all corners of the court, Berkeley Bell of the University of Texas and Gregory Mangin of Georgetown, smashed the hopes of the former national champions in a thrilling doubles final by scores of 11—9, 10—8, 1—6, 6—3.

Tournament honors in singles went to Fritz Mercur of Bethlehem Pa., who out-played Johnny Doeg of Santa Monica, Cal., by scores of 6—4, 6—3, 6—4 in a comparatively colorless encounter.

Mercur at Peak.

The match found Mercur, seventh ranking American, at the peak of his game and not even the furious service and aggressive net play of the husky California southpaw could avail against the easy perfection of his strokes.

Doeg, No. 8 in the national list and the big tournament winner of the current season with four singles trophies to his credit, found Mercur a far better player than when he was beaten by Johnny in the Longwood invitation final a month ago.

Mercur outguessed and outmaneuvered his harder-hitting adversary, forcing him back into mid-court with well-played lobs and out-steadied him in the driving duels that ensued. When Doeg did manage to reach the net he was deadly, piling up more earned points than his conqueror in every set, but his game lacked the all-around steadiness that the Eastern player put into his shots.

Drama in Doubles.

All that the singles contest lacked in melodrama was more than supplied by the doubles which kept a capacity gallery of close to 1500 persons on the edge of their seats from start to finish.

Bell and Mangin won an uphill battle for the long first set, finally breaking through Hunter's service to accomplish the feat, took the second in similar fashion by piercing the famous cannon-ball delivery of Tilden himself and came back after losing the third set by a one-sided margin to outstroke and out-smart the veterans in the final session.

It was the youngster's remarkable work at the net which enabled them to crack the burly hunter's delivery in the eighth game of the final set. On what proved to be the deciding point of this game, Hunter shot one of his hardest drives straight at the feet of Mangin as he stood near the net.

With a veritable circus shot the Georgetown sophomore rapped the ball and twisted it down the sidelines where neither Tilden nor Hunter could reach it.

Big Bill and Hunter have seen a lot of their travels over the tennis world but this one made them stand with their hands on their hips and stare while Mangin's grim face relaxed into a tickled grin.

The Choctaw, well up, but raced unnecessarily wide, responded well when called upon and steadily bettered position, headed War Eagle in final strides and was drawing away. War Eagle crossed some of the field sharply shortly after the start, had speed into a good lead after reaching stretch, but could not withstand the winner. Brown Flash, away poorly, appeared to impede several opponents while moving up, and closed fast. Patricia Marian tired after racing in contention with a rush. Brown Brutus, away poorly, closed full of run. Grand Prince began tiring after three-quarters. Earl of Warwick tired. Honeyman had early speed and was eased in stretch. Flattery lost her rider at first turn.

CHICAGO, Aug. 10—The Audley Stock Farm scored its third straight victory when The Choctaw won the Great Lakes Claiming Stakes, the feature attraction of an excellent card at Hawthorne race track here this afternoon. War Eagle, from E. B. McLean's stable, was a close second, and Brown Flash, from Harned Brothers' stable was third.

The Audley Farm's previous scores were with Gallant Knight in the second event, when that horse made his first start at this track, and in the third, when Nellie Custis registered her fifth consecutive victory. The Audley Farm's winnings totaled $7673.

The Great Lakes Stakes was worth $5625 to the winning stable, $1000 to second, $500 to third and $250 to fourth.

The Choctaw, reserved off the pace while running close up until reaching the stretch, responded well when let down and in a hard drive won by a neck. War Eagle, after forcing and setting the pace, hung slightly in the final sixteenth to take the place by a length and a half. Brown Flash, off last and racing far back to the stretch turn, finished fast to take third by half a length. Patricia Marian was away slowly but improved her position and was closest up to the stretch, but hung in the final drive.

The winner paid $7.52 for a $2 ticket.

The Whitney colt, Whichone, victor in the Saratoga Special in such impressive manner yesterday, had won his last two outs, one at Saratoga and one at Aqueduct. The failure of the Waite starting gate to function perfectly came near causing serious injury to the Three D's Stable's Broadway Limited, which was one of the highest priced yearlings sold last year, bringing $65,000. He has yet to win a race. The colt was thrown when he became entangled with the barrier webbing. A late report on this colt credits him with working a quarter in 23 seconds, which shows he can run in some sort of keeping with the high price paid for him.

The Choctaw and Rose of Sharon, winners of the Hawthorne features yesterday, were both the high-figure horses of their races. Rose of Sharon had worked well since her bad race in the American Classic at Arlington behind Blue Larkspur, while The Choctaw had chased Mike Hall home a few days ago, showing a good effort to finish second.

Vito in Training.

Vito, the winner of last year's Belmont Stakes, is again in training. According to the clockers in the East, this son of Negofol-Forever has worked a mile and a quarter in 2:07 3-5, a highly impressive showing. Should he continue to train satisfactorily, it is likely that Trainer Max Hirsch will point him for the Saratoga Cup, which is to be run the final day at Saratoga, Aug. 31. Vito will be a real menace to the distance runners should he come back.

Vito is owned by A. H. Cosden and after winning the Belmont Stakes last fall, which is at a mile and a half and was worth $63,430 net, the Negofol horse started once and was beaten by Ironsides. He then broke down and was sent to Kentucky where he came around enough by Spring to have Hirsch ship him on to New York, where the trainer has gone along slowly with him since.

Brown Wisdom, at 66 cents to the dollar met defeat in the third at Hawthorne yesterday, a handicap in which he was carrying 111 pounds. This is the 4-year-old gelding by Brown Prince, Prodigy which ran a fast six furlongs at Arlington to beat My Dandy six furlongs in 1:10 3-5, private timers catching it in 1:10 flat. This race so impressed the owners of My Dandy that they sought out Cal Milam and purchased the Brown Prince gelding. His race yesterday according to the form chart, was not his best effort, as the chart states that he was badly handled throughout. Brown Wisdom's future races will be closely watched by horsemen and racegoers.

Col. Lyman T. Hay was one of the Fairmount racegoers who did not let My Dandy get away when he won the big race at Hawthorne Thursday. The Colonel had the colt's good races of last season in mind and reaped quite a substantial reward for his courage in backing his opinion in the face of such formidable contention for the little Belleville-owned racer.

Yearling Brings $8300.

Alec B. Gordon, an old timer with horses and who raced around the old St. Louis tracks, offered a number of yearlings for sale at Saratoga Thursday night. The best price brought was that paid for a son of Master Charlie, Fricasse, which went to Jack Goldsborough, one-time trainer of Roamer, for $8300. The other eight that were offered brought $7800. Gordon trained the horses of Bud Fisher, the cartoonist, when that sportsmen entered the racing game in 1920 as an owner and won a number of stakes for him, including the Latonia Championship stakes, with Sporting Blood, in 1921. Later successes with the Fisher horses included the Preakness of 1925, with Nellie Morse, named for the cartoonist's mother. Gordon later trained the horses of Mrs. Virginia Fair Vanderbilt, who raced under the nom de course of the Fair Stable and for whom Gordon won 15 races and $25,551 last season.

It was a big day for the Audley Farm stable at Hawthorne yesterday, when the division of that stable which is trained by Kay Spence, a Missourian, won three races. Gallant Knight, paying $2.99 to $1, won the second race. Nellie Custis then came along and won the third, beating Greenock and the odds-on choice Brown Wisdom. She paid $3.23 to $1. The Choctaw then won the fourth race, making it three in a row. The latter's victory was scored in the running of the Great Lakes Claiming Stakes which had $5600 added, and in which he met some worthy opposition. He was the favorite and paid $2.76 to $1. Spence is noted as a trainer whose horses when fit run well and then repeat.

A Flying Jockey.

G. H. Bostwick, who headed the list of gentlemen riders last year, winning five races out of 32 mounts, was second on Devilkin at Saratoga yesterday in the steeplechase. He won on this horse a few days ago, competing with professional riders. Bostwick, who is quite wealthy, goes up from New York by plane, which he flies himself, whenever he is to ride at the spa.

By Damon Kerby

Matchmaker Jack Tippett's fight card at the Battery arena, tomorrow night, will feature two bouts between boxers who fight in the vicinity of 130 pounds, and the fighter who makes the best showing will be given a bout with Davey Abad here on the Hatzfeld Post's program of Aug. 22, according to Tippett.

Eddie Shea of Chicago, rated as a leading featherweight, will appear in one of the 10-round events tomorrow night. He will oppose Phil O'Dowd, a veteran with little visible rating from Columbus, O. In the other "elimination" bout, Eddie Anderson of Casper, Wyo., will meet the Mexican, Chicho Cisneros, who won from Johnny Kaiser here three weeks ago.

A third 10-round bout, which is figured to furnish much of the hard slugging on the card, will bring together Jackie Doss of Texas and Charles "Young" Darby of New Orleans.

Of the invading fighters, Shea comes with the best reputation. He has been touted this year as a serious contender for the feather-weight title. In 10 fights so far this year he has scored six knock-outs. None of the six kayo victims was of first-rate quality, however. Shea received a setback at the hands of Andy Martin, who beat him April 19 in a 10-round bout. His fight tomorrow night will be the first for Shea since June 24.

O'Dowd in a veteran of some 10 years in the ring. The record of Dick "Honeyboy" Finnegan shows the latter knocked out O'Dowd in one round in 1922. O'Dowd claims to have met, among others, Joe Lynch, Kid Chocolate, Charley "Phil" Rosenberg and Carl Tremaine.

Abad to Fight Here Aug. 22.

The Cisneros-Anderson bout may be more interesting. Cisneros is a willing young fighter and should keep the veteran Anderson going at a fast pace. Anderson's long experience in the ring may be the deciding factor in this event.

Abad, who is now in Cleveland, told Tippett he would be willing to meet any one of the four whom Tippett would select. It is hardly likely that Shea will be the one selected. A bout between Shea and Abad would probably cost Tippett more than the gate receipts would stand.

Tom Pivac will appear in the opening event of six rounds against Billy Meyers of Indianapolis.

Seats in the four rows nearest ringside will sell for $4.40. All other tickets are from $3.30 down to $1.10.

BABE RUTH'S ALL-AMERICA TEAM CONTEST OPENS WITH NEW FEATURE

FANS NOT ONLY MUST NAME THE SAME PLAYERS, BUT THE SAME BATTING ORDER RUTH CHOOSES

Rules Governing Babe Ruth's All-America Team Contest

THE contest is open to everyone, except employes of the Post-Dispatch and their families.

Entries will close Aug. 31 at midnight and letters bearing postmark up to that time will be considered eligible.

The contestant naming the same players in the same positions and batting order as Babe Ruth wins the first prize; but in event no contestant duplicates Ruth's picks, the one nearest will be considered the winner.

In addition to naming the players to conform to those chosen by Ruth, contestants must arrange them in the same batting order as Babe Ruth. The Babe has agreed to place his choices in the order in which he thinks they should go to the plate.

(This feature is new. Previously it was sufficient to name the men according to position only.)

An explanatory letter of not more than 250 words must accompany the selections and will be passed upon by the judges. This is as important as selecting the players. Babe himself will write an explanation of his choices. In event of a tie, excellence of the compositions would determine the winner. (Write on one side of the paper only and make your selections on a separate sheet.)

Ten players will make up the team, two pitchers and eight other players, one for each position. Only one team may be submitted by each contestant.

No corrections will be accepted once an entry has been received and filed.

Babe Ruth is not eligible. He will not pick himself.

Players must be selected on the basis of their play in the 1929 season only. Performances of previous years do not count.

A player may be placed in a position other than the one he regularly occupies, provided he has played such position in one or more championship games. Otherwise regular positions must be rigidly adhered to. For instance, a regular left fielder may not be placed in right field, unless he has played there at least once in 1929.

The trophies will be $100 cash for first, $75 for second and $50 for the third, $25 for the fourth and five others of $10 each. A dozen autographed Babe Ruth bats and another dozen autographed baseballs mounted on blotters will be the other mementoes for successful contestants.

Mail selections to the BABE RUTH CONTEST EDITOR, care the Post-Dispatch.

Get out the dope books and the averages and prepare to consume several hundred midnight kilowatt hours studying what the big league boys are doing—the annual Babe Ruth contest is with us again, the fifth consecutive year.

Just in case you were not entered last year, and perhaps may not know about the Babe Ruth contest, it may be explained that Babe Ruth, assisted by a committee of 10 sports editors, annually names an All-America team from the players of the two major leagues; and the fan who picks a team that exactly coincides with Babe's, and accompanies it by a 25-word letter that the judges consider O K, is declared the winner.

For four years the Post-Dispatch has conducted this event and for three years a combined total of only five correctly named the players. But last year no fewer than 73 persons in the territory served by the Post-Dispatch correctly picked the team.

Evidently, the territory covered by the Post-Dispatch is populated by fans remarkably well versed in baseball lore, for in no other section of the country did similar contests reap such a harvest of answers. Several women fans turned in a correct list of players. Letters were received from all parts of the United States and some from foreign countries. One from Germany was very close to the correct lineup.

Fans, Take Notice!

This year the Post-Dispatch will make the test of baseball knowledge still more severe. Babe has consented not only to name a team for the Post-Dispatch, but he will name the players in the order in which he would have them go to bat, if they actually went into a game.

Thus it will be necessary not only to name eight players and two pitchers, 10 men in all, but to name the lead-off man, the No. 2 batter, the cleanup hitters and so on down the batting order to the pitcher.

This will demand more special study of the players and the qualities that adapt them for this or that place in the batting list. For example, if Taylor Douthit of the Cardinals were chosen for the center field position, he would be eminently qualified to fill the lead-off position in the Babe Ruth batting order, as it is his normal place in Cardinal lineup.

This new feature will make the competition considerably harder, but it need not frighten fans. A little study of the batting orders will give fans plenty of information. Besides, even though no one should name the batting order correctly, the prizes would be distributed just the same, the contestant coming closest to Babe Ruth's team and batting order being in line for first place.

There were two years in the history of Post-Dispatch competition when only one correct answer was received and under the new conditions it is possible that NO absolutely perfect answer will be received. But the prizes will be distributed just the same.

In this connection there is more good news for the fans. Last year there were only three awards—$100 for the first award, $50 for the second and $25 for the third. This year the following list of prizes and trophies will be distributed:

First prize	$100
Second prize	75
Third prize	50
Fourth prize	25
FIVE $10 prizes	50
	$300

That is not all. The next 12 answers, in order of their merit, will each receive one of the famous Babe Ruth home-run bats, autographed. And the next 12 will receive an autographed American League baseball, mounted for use as a blotter.

Thus there will be 33 prizes and trophies distributed altogether.

Fans Should Observe Instructions in Preparing Their Explanatory Letters

The duration of the contest is only three weeks, and fans should get their dope books out and go to work at once to get their choices in early. The form shown by players at this time is almost certain to continue through to the end of the campaign, because the players have become seasoned and only sickness or injury should be likely to cause a radical change in their showing. Babe Ruth requires his committee to send their selections in early.

The Post-Dispatch publishes the averages of the players and pitchers in its Sunday editions and this will be of material aid in checking the players.

There is one suggestion to be made that is of paramount importance: Take pains with your 250-word essay. The substance and the form both will be given consideration by the judges in this connection.

How to Prepare Letters.

Be sure and write (or typewrite) clearly on ONE side only of the paper, double spacing the lines. Many hastily-written letters were sent in last year by contestants who had correctly named the players. Name your team on a separate sheet of paper from that on which you write your essay, but attach them all together.

Thousands of fans compete in this contest and again we caution that success or failure may depend upon this explanation of why you named the players and placed them in the order you submit. In case of two correct replies for first place, the one having the better explanation will get the award. The same applies to every other award.

Everyone is eligible to enter this competition except the employes of the Post-Dispatch and their families.

A committee of widely known St. Louisans will be named as the judging committee, and they will have sole charge of the naming of the winners of the various prizes.

Here are a few DON'TS for fans who expect to take part in the contest:

Don't send in more than ONE selection.

Don't name Ruth on your team as he will not name himself.

Don't pick your team at random. Study the batting averages and pitching records, which will be published each Sunday.

Don't forget to put your name and address on your team and letter.

Don't write more than 250 words in your explanatory letter.

Don't write your team and letter on the same piece of paper.

As explained in previous years, a committee of 10 baseball writers and sports editors has assisted Ruth in compiling the data from which his final choice is made. The committee that assist Ruth is composed of the following men:

James Robbins, New York World.
Ralph Davis, Pittsburg Press.
Jack Malaney, Boston Post.
Gordon MacKay, Philadelphia Record.
Kirk Miller, Washington Times.
Tom Swope, Cincinnati Post.
Stuart Bell, Cleveland Press.
Bert Walker, Detroit Times.
J. E. Wray, St. Louis Post-Dispatch.
Warren Brown, Chicago Examiner.

Ruth receives the reports and selections of the members of this committee and then makes his own picks with the aid of these.

The Babe Enthusiastic.

Ruth is more enthusiastic over the contest this year than ever, as he has been in the past come back with another big year, the Ruth contests show that no single hurler has twice gained a place on the team. In 1925 it was Dazzy Vance and Ed Rommel; then came Herb Pennock and George Uhle, followed by Ted Lyons and Charley Root. Last year Larry Benton and Waite Hoyt were the choices. This incidentally shows that only one southpaw, Pennock, has been able to make the grade for all-star rating from Babe Ruth.

It is probable that no fewer than a dozen of the players named on previous all-America teams will again gain recognition. They are Bottomley and Gehrig at first, Hornsby and Frisch for second, Traynor and Lindstrom at third, Jackson shortstop, Simmons for left field, Douthit center and Cuyler and Waner in right. And Mickey Cochrane will again have his following for backstop.

Although each of the eight pitchers named on the four clubs is still performing in the big tent, it is probable that 1929 will again see a new pair of hurlers selected on the all-star nine.

Babe Ruth Sizes Up New And Promising Material For His All-America Team

By Babe Ruth.

I'VE been looking over the fielding and hitting averages lately, just trying to get a line on a few things that will help me next month, when the time comes to name my All-America team for 1929. The thing that surprised me most was the great number of young players who have stepped up to the top this year and are making their bid for baseball fame. Every club in each league has one or two—and some of them are fortunate to have three or four young fellows, all going great and looking like comers.

Somehow or another it sort of seems to me that there are more kids than ever making good this year.

Take your pitchers, for instance. Big Earnshaw over in Philadelphia is the best and most consistent performer on the Athletic staff right now, with the exception of Lefty Grove. And when Connie Mack got Earnshaw late last season he thought he was going to be a bust. Yet here's a right-hander, new to the big league, who is a full-fledged star right now.

BABE RUTH.

You can go right down the list and you'll find an unusual number of real ball-players among the 1929 crop of kids—Ferrell, the Cleveland pitcher, and Averill, the Indian center fielder. There's Alexander and Johnson at Detroit; Shires and Watwood with the White Sox, Young Ferrell, the catcher with the Browns—and, by the way, he is a brother of the Cleveland pitcher.

Ott and Klein Real Finds.

In the National League there's Chick Fullis and Mel Ott with the Giants. Ott, of course, was with the club last year, but this is really his first year as a regular. The Phillies have Klein, who has been busting fences all over the league all season long. The Pirates have young Bartell, and the boys tell me that Bartell has been more responsible than any one else for the Pirates' success this year. He stepped right in at short and turned a weak spot into a really strong position. Uncle Robbie tells me that young Frederick, his new outfielder, is a real find—and the averages show that he is. And the Yanks have Bill Dickey, who right now rates as one of the best catchers in baseball.

These are only a few. There are a lot of others—kids, all of them—making their bow to big league society and at the same time making things mighty tough for the old-timers who are beginning to fade out of the pictures.

Veterans Help Kids.

The thing that impresses me about it all, though, is the way these kids step out and grab jobs for themselves—with the old fellows helping them and advising them. Time was a few years ago when every kid who came into the league had to fight his way to a job. All the old fellows were against him and made the going just as tough as they could. Nowadays every kid who shows promise gets help whenever he wants it. Older players advise him. Managers take a lot of time to give him instruction. And when he breaks into the batting order there are eight other fellows out there trying to make things easy and get him away to a good start.

Which is as it should be. We used to think that kid players should be snubbed and sat on, all the time. But we know better now. Long years of baseball have taught us that we've all got to come to the end of the string sometime—and there'll be a day when a kid will come along to step into all our jobs. Picking on the kids and making it tough won't keep us up there a single day longer and only hurts the club that we're trying to help win. I've made up my mind that when the time comes for me to step out I'll do it gracefully, and I hope that the kid who steps into my shoes will be a better ballplayer than I have been. I mean that, too—and I think the other veterans feel the same way about it. Perhaps that's the reason why so many kids are coming up and showing so much stuff these days.

ST. LOUIS STARS WON PLACES ON 4 ALL-AMERICA CONTEST TEAMS

By Herman Wecke

Players for St. Louis clubs have gained a place on the Babe Ruth All-America team in each of the four years in which the Post-Dispatch has held the competition. Rogers Hornsby and Bottomley were honored in 1925 and Hornsby again in 1926. Then in 1927, Frank Frisch, playing a sensational game, ousted Hornsby as the second sacker, while last season, Taylor Douthit gained the center field berth on the team selected by the Home Run King.

The competition has grown rapidly. In the first year there were no more than 2000 entrants. This jumped to 2500 in 1926 and then came a big jump to 10,000. Last year more than 11,000 letters were received by the Contest Editor.

Selecting a team to agree with that chosen by Ruth was a hard task the first three years, inasmuch as but five correct answers were received out of almost 15,000 Then came the deluge. In 1928, when it appeared there were one or more outstanding men for each position, the Post-Dispatch received 73 letters correctly naming the 10 players and the three awards were made on the essays which accompanied the picks.

Naming Bluege Upset Fans.

For the 1925 contest, there was but one person, Harry L. Bunton, whose team was identical with that selected by Ruth. This was the year of one of Ruth's "jokers," when he named Ossie Bluege of the Washington club as his third baseman over Pie Traynor, the great star of the Pittsburg club.

In 1926 there was another "joker." This time it came in the selection of the catcher. It was in this campaign that Bob O'Farrell had the greatest season of his career and won the National League's most valuable player prize. He was the consensus of the fans for the catching berth. But Ruth surprised all. He selected Bubbles Hargrave of the Cincinnati club. And as a result of this again only one man turned in the correct selection. He was Charles P. Ash, a disabled war veteran in a hospital in Kentucky.

73 Named Players Correctly.

In 1927 each of the three winners turned in teams which agreed with that named by Ruth. And then last year came the 73 selections agreeing with the players selected by Ruth.

Winners in previous contests follow:

1925—Harry L. Bunton, first; Sam Muchnich, second, and Clarence Missler, third.

1926—Charles P. Ash, first; George Kyle, second, and W. P. Breen, third.

1927—Peter Kunkel, first; Walter Hardy, second, and Fred W. Engels Jr., third.

1928—James Griffin, first; Eugene Pomeroy, second, and Wilsey C. Feamon, third.

Some great players have gained recognition on the Babe Ruth All-America in the four years the Post-Dispatch has conducted the contest. Rogers Hornby has been named as second baseman three times. And he is again in the running. Lou Gehrig of the Yankees has twice been selected as the first sacker, with Jim Bottomley and George Burns gaining the honors in the other campaign. Traynor twice has been named at short, while Joe Sewell was on two occasions chosen for shortstop.

In the outfield, there have been more changes. For instance, in center field, there has been a new man each year, with Speaker, Mostil, Simmons and Douthit being picked in the order named. Goslin, twice and Meusel and Simmons have been the left fielders, while Kiki Cuyler and Paul Waner divide the right field job. Cuyler was named in 1925 and 1926 and Waner the next two seasons. And right now, both are playing a fair brand of baseball.

Cochrane Named Twice.

"Mickey" Cochrane, the great catcher of the Athletics, was named in 1925 and again in 1928, with Hargrave and Muddy Ruel gaining the berths the in-between campaign.

Although more than one pitcher has in the past come back with another big year, the Ruth contests show that no single hurler has twice gained a place on the team. In 1925 it was Dazzy Vance and Ed Rommel; then came Herb Pennock and George Uhle, followed by Ted Lyons and Charley Root. Last year Larry Benton and Waite Hoyt were the choices. This incidentally shows that only one southpaw, Pennock, has been able to make the grade for all-star rating from Babe Ruth.

It is probable that no fewer than a dozen of the players named on previous all-America teams will again gain recognition. They are Bottomley and Gehrig at first, Hornsby and Frisch for second, Traynor and Lindstrom at third, Jackson shortstop, Simmons for left field, Douthit center and Cuyler and Waner in right. And Mickey Cochrane will again have his following for backstop.

Although each of the eight pitchers named on the four clubs is still performing in the big tent, it is probable that 1929 will again see a new pair of hurlers selected on the all-star nine.

Look Them Over

Records for the 1929 campaign indicate that many players, on their performance this year, will be eligible for positions on Babe Ruth's All-America. Among those who are almost certain to come in for consideration are the following:

PITCHERS—"Lefty" Grove, Guy Bush, Burleigh Grimes, Sam Gray, Rube Walberg, George Earnshaw, Perce Malone, Root.

CATCHERS—Mickey Cochrane, Jimmy Wilson, Bill Dickey Mike Gonzales.

INFIELDERS—Lou Gehrig, Foxx, Bottomley, Melillo, Lu Blue, Terry, Hornsby, Lazzeri, Frisch, Maranville, Jackson, Traynor, Lindstrom, Whitney.

OUTFIELDERS — Simmons, Manush, Goslin, Wilson, Douthit, Klein, Ott, O'Doul, Paul Waner, Lloyd Waner, Cuyler, Hafey and Herman.

HEYDLER BOOSTS RUTH CONTEST; GREAT FEATURE M'KECHNIE SAYS

"The Babe Ruth All-America team contest helps to stimulate interest among the younger generation of fans and is the reason I follow it closely each year," declared John A. Heydler, president of the National League.

"I'm interested in it myself, and I'm always eager to get a peek at the 10 players selected by Ruth each year. Of course I'm delighted when the National League is well represented on his team.

"We have many new stars in our league this year and I know that Ruth will not overlook them. Incidentally the old stars of the league are stepping along with the young ones and playing great baseball.

"The contest is a popular one with the fans, I know. They tell me that teams are submitted from all over the country and some letters are even received from foreign countries. This only goes to show the interest in our national game."

McKechnie Likes It.

Bill McKechnie, manager of the Cardinals, said he considered the Babe Ruth All-America team one of the most interesting features of the baseball campaign.

"I follow it closely and I have found that the ballplayers take a keen interest in Babe's team," McKechnie said. "It is a wonderful feature, and early in each campaign you will hear remarks that such and such a player is off to a good start and is likely to make Babe's team.

"You would be surprised at the widespread interest among the general public. As soon as the contest is started we are bombarded with questions everywhere we go as to who is the best pitcher and the best center fielder and so on."

Good for Game, Howley Says.

Dan Howley, manager of the Browns, said: "The Babe Ruth contest, sponsored in St. Louis by the Post-Dispatch has my heartiest approval. Ruth, able to play or not, is the idol of the fans and the contest stimulates interest in the national game among the younger generation upon whom the game must, in later years, depend for support. The fans have a chance, in a contest of this sort, to match their skill in picking a "best team" with Ruth and that opportunity, together with the prizes offered are sufficient incentives to make for deep figuring and abiding interest. It's a great thing and I hope every fan in St. Louis will enter."

"Some people think that interest in baseball is on the decline and point to the increase in numbers of golfers and tennis players to support their opinion," said Billy Killefer, Brown coach. "Personally, I believe that the old game is as popular as ever. Nothing is the worse off for a stimulus, however, and this annual Babe Ruth contest which the Post-Dispatch holds, is a wonderful thing to keep people interested. I certainly support the idea heartily."

Austin Offers Help.

"Like the idea? Sure I like the idea," remarked Jimmy Austin, Howley's other coach. "The kids like it, too. Don't they enter it by thousands? Baseball's a great game and so is picking a team to see how close you can come to the one Babe Ruth picks. Maybe I'll enter it myself though I guess I'd put too many of the Browns on the team while Ruth would divide up a bit. The Post-Dispatch is to be congratulated for holding the contest and if any kid in St. Louis wants my help picking his club let him see me at Sportman's Park while we are home."

Miller Huggins, manager of the Yankees, is another prominent major leaguer who is a great booster of the All-America contest.

"The Ruth contest is a real good thing for baseball, said Huggins. "It keeps the fan's interest in baseball at a high pitch and makes him better acquainted with the records of the player.

"Did you ever go to the ball park and see one of the regulars have a bad day and lose the game?

"No doubt you have. And you often have heard several of the fans abuse the player and called him this and that and claim he should be sent to some stick town.

Educates Fans.

"This certain player may be the most valuable player on the ball club. He is getting his hits and he is driving in runs. But the fan doesn't know his record and puts him on the 'pan,' as they say.

"As the Ruth contest is one of skill the fan must dig into the records of the players each week. In this way he learns the value of each player to his ball club. Then when that player happens to have a bad day, which they all do, he will not be the target for the fan's abuse."

Wilbert Robinson, manager of the Robins, believes that the Ruth All-America contest is one of the big features of the baseball season.

"You know a number of kids already have asked me if Babe Herman was going to win a place on Ruth's All-America team," said Robbie.

"Well, I don't know," Robbie answered, "but if Babe leaves our Babe off his team this year he'll be missing one of the best hitters in the league."

SUNDAY SCHOOL CHAMPIONS ARE DEFEATED

WAGONERS LOSE TO HAMILTONS BY 3 TO 2 SCORE IN 10 INNINGS

An upset occurred yesterday in the opening game of the Sunday School round robin for the Sunday school baseball championship of the Municipal League, when the Hamilton Christian nine beat the Wagoner Place M. E. team, defending title-holders, 3 to 2, in 10 innings. Memorial was the victor in the other bracket, winning from Union Methodist Episcopal, 6 to 1.

The usual no-hit, no-run performances turned in by the various league pitchers were absent but there were three creditable two-hit games.

Gray of St. Peter's shut out St. James in the Evangelical North Side Junior division, 9 to 0, allowing two hits and two walks, while he struck out 10 batters.

Tarantola, who pitches for Cleveland High School in the spring, enabled the Wolverines to defeat the Owls, 12 to 0, when he let the Owls down with a pair of safeties and one walk. He fanned seven. The Wolverines are in the South Side Employed Boys' League.

In the Junior Employed Boys' circuit, Hemple of the Candy Boosters permitted one run on two hits and two walks, while his mates scored twice against the Tower Grove nine.

BRITISH EXPERIMENT ON BEST GOLF GRASS

BINGLEY, England.—In an effort to find the most suitable grass for golf courses, the recently formed golf research board is experimenting on the St. Ives estate here.

Hundreds of plots about 10 feet square, like miniature putting greens, have been laid out and different kinds of seed will be planted in each.

Experts also are hoping to discover a suitable way to exterminate worms and grubs, which spoil not only golf but cricket and bowling greens.

Yacht Races Climax Summer Activities Along North Shore

Secretary of Navy Adams Among the Visitors—Notes From Maine and Rhode Island Resorts.

MARBLEHEAD, Mass., Aug. 10.

THE past week was the climax of the season at the North Shore, for yachting week at Marble head brought together a larger number of racing yachts than have ever gathered here for a regatta. It is estimated that 500 boats are racing in Massachusetts Bay this summer and it seemed as if all of them were in the Marblehead races. The regatta was held under the auspices of the Eastern Yacht Club for three days, the Boston Yacht Club for juniors one day, and the Corinthian Yacht Club for the final three days. On each day nearly 30 classes were sailed over either the outside or inside courses while thousands watched the boats' progress from other yachts or from rocks along the shore.

Among the prominent visitors to the North Shore this week was Secretary of the Navy Charles Francis Adams, who is better known to North Shore people as a yachtsman than as a Government official.

Mr. and Mrs. George A. Dobyne, formerly of St. Louis, gave a buffet supper and dance at their Beverly Farms summer home Inglelowe. This was one of a series that Mr. and Mrs. Dobyne are giving. They have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Earl P. Charlton at Westport, where a house party of Palm Beach guests was entertained.

Mr. and Mrs. Don Chylo McCord and son of St. Louis are recent arrivals at the Oceanside, Magnolia.

Mrs. Frank B. Coleman, St. Louis, is among the late arrivals at the Braemore, Pigeon Cove.

Mrs. Jesse Dwight Dana, St. Louis, is the guest of friends at Marblehead.

Miss Eleanor Knapp, daughter of Mrs. Harry G. Knapp, St. Louis, is the guest of Mrs. Thomas Powell at her summer home Blue Spruces, Bass Rocks.

Mr. and Mrs. Stephen B. Sheldon and daughter, Miss Kathleen, St. Louis, are members of the Hyannisport colony.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold W. Simpkins and Miss Ruth and Miss Louise Simpkins, St. Louis, have joined the other members of their family at Hyannisport.

Mrs. Thomas Francis and children, St. Louis, are spending August at Nantucket.

BAR HARBOR, Me., Aug. 10.

At Bar Harbor all interest the past week was centered upon the eighth international maritime tennis tournament between officers of the British and American navies, which was played at the swimming pool.

Among the events of this week the most brilliant was the Bohemian Cabaret party for the benefit of the Bar Harbor Hospital. The ballroom of the Swimming Club was arranged to represent a night club and during the evening a cabaret entertainment was given by young people of the villa colony. Among those having tables for the party were Mrs. Joseph Pulitzer, St. Louis, Mrs. Potter Palmer, Mrs. Dave Hennen Morris, Mrs. Walter Damrosch and Mrs. A. Atwater Kent. Mrs. Pulitzer also was one of the patronesses for the special performance of Somerset Maugham's "Caroline," with Margaret Anglin, at the Surry Playhouse, for the benefit of the Children' Fund of America.

The yacht races of Monday were held in a good breeze and 11 boats were entered in the annual women's race of the Bar Harbor Yacht Club. Third place went to Miss Kate Pulitzer, St. Louis, who sailed George McMurtry's Mab.

Mrs. Ephron Catlin of St. Louis and her son, Ephron Catlin III, New York City, are guests at the Rock End Hotel, Bar Harbor.

Mrs. Arthur B. Shepley and her daughter, Miss Mary Merwin Shepley, St. Louis, are spending the summer at the Rock End Hotel, Bar Harbor.

Washington Social Season Opens Early

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.

WITH the Senate reconvening in a little more than a week and the House Sept. 23, social Washington is laying plans for an early autumn program. The boat races for the President Coolidge Cup will be held Sept. 13-14, and the army carnival and fete Oct. 3-4-5, for the benefit of the Army Relief Society.

The regatta is a sporting event which was first held two years ago, but was omitted last season. This year it is to take place off Haines Point, a peninsula extending into the Potomac opposite the Navy Yard.

The President is expected to present the Coolidge Cup to the winner this year. The Secretary of the Navy will probably bring his own yacht from New England waters to observe the races.

The army carnival and bazar to be held for the third time at the war college is elaborate. Former President Coolidge attended the first two carnivals. Every branch of the army service contributes features, both in air and on land, and supper is served from army canteens, army food making up the menu. Mrs. Summerall, wife of Gen. Charles P. Summerall, is at the head of the arrangements. More than $40,000 is realized for the army relief each year.

ADRIATIC SARDINES AT CENT A POUND AFTER RECORD CATCH

Factories on Dalmatian Coast Overstocked and Hundreds of Pounds Thrown Away.

By the Associated Press.

SPALATO, Dalmatia, Aug. 10.—Adriatic sardines of the finest variety were offered here for less than a cent a pound. This year's catch was the largest in the history of the Dalmatian coast and there was such a glut of the market that local fishermen threw away hundreds of pounds. The sardine factories and curing stations were all overstocked.

Jugo-Slavia's inadequate means of transport from the coast to inland and foreign markets were employed to the limit of their capacity, yet huge quantities of excellent fish remained unused.

The Dalmatian fishing industry has grown rapidly since the war. In 1918 the fishermen had practically no equipment and fish were scarce, as great quantities had been destroyed by depth bombs in the war. Now there are more than 19,000 fishermen, owning 6000 boats, and catching 6,000,000 kilograms of fish per annum, worth nearly $1,000,000.

Using More Australian Wine.

By the Associated Press.

SYDNEY, Aug. 10.—Australian wine shippers sold 33,000 gallons more of their product in Great Britain in the quarter ending March 31 than in the same period of 1928. They assert that the English use of Spanish and French wines declined but that Portugal held the lead, marketing twice as much wine as Australia.

BUNGALOW RANSACKED AND BLOWN UP; DAMAGE $2000

Windows Broken in Near-by Houses on Brentwood Place; Woman Thrown From Bed.

Damage estimated at $2000 was caused by an explosion in a brick bungalow at 8727 Brentwood place about 10 o'clock Friday night. Joseph Signorelli, also known as Joseph Schwarz, and his family, the occupants, were absent at the time but returned while the place was still burning.

After an investigation, Signorelli told Brentwood police that the house had been ransacked. Fire Chief Whitaker found an empty powder can and a piece of fuse. Several windows of neighboring houses were broken by the explosion and one woman was thrown from her bed. One neighbor reported seeing a woman in the house shortly before the blast.

EAST ST. LOUIS SCHOOL BOARD ROW OVER BUYING METHODS

Superintendent of Custodians Has Made Purchases Without First Getting Approval.

Disputes over the proper procedure of buying supplies and equipment for schools and the facility of a purchase made by an official without sanction of the board, occurred at two meetings of the East St. Louis Board of Education last week.

A report of purchases made by F. L. Thrasher, superintendent of custodians, was criticized by members of the board last Monday night. The report stated that Thrasher had purchased certain supplies after receiving bids which he opened, dividing the purchases among two or more firms. Lloyd G. Harmann, board member, objected to Thrasher's practice of awarding the contract to any other than the lowest responsible bidder.

Frank Watson, board member, challenged Thrasher's authority to make any purchases in excess of $500 without first referring the bids unopposed to a vote of the board.

Dr. R. L. Campbell, president of the board, said yesterday that he had asked the board attorney for an opinion on the matter. He stated he thought that the bids should have been submitted to the board for action.

408TH RESERVE OFFICERS TO GO TO CAMP THIS WEEK

Will Leave Wednesday for Leavenworth to Take Charge of Students' Camp.

Forty-five officers of the 408th Infantry, Organized Reserve Corps, who reside in St. Louis and vicinity, will leave Wednesday for two weeks' active duty at the citizens military training camp at Fort Leavenworth. Commencing Thursday after retreat, they will relieve the 497th Infantry, another St. Louis regiment, which has been on duty since Aug. 1, and will have complete charge of the 1400 student soldiers until camp demobilization on Aug. 31.

Col. Leroy K. Robbins will be regimental commander and the two battalion commanders will be Capt. J. B. Prosser and Maj. J. H. Hudley. There will be eight rifle companies, each with a company commander and four platoon commanders.

Special features of the camp will be a practice march and overnight camp on Aug. 28, Governors' day on Aug. 27, graduation exercises on Aug. 28 and the 408th Infantry regimental dance on Aug. 24, at which the honor guests will be Brig. Gen. P. G. Heintzelman, commandant at Fort Leavenworth, and Col. E. L. Butts and Col. O. W. Riell, both of St. Louis. A number of the officers' wives from St. Louis will attend.

GAS COMPANY'S FIRST AID CREWS ALWAYS AVAILABLE

Co-operating with the St. Louis Safety Council in accident prevention work, the Laclede Gas Light Co. yesterday announced that its first-aid crews would be available at all hours for the treatment of drowning, electric shock, gas poisoning and other asphyxia cases. The announcement was made by C. Howard Stewart, assistant-treasurer of the gas company and vice-president of the Safety Council.

A series of letters are being sent by the council to St. Louis physicians asking co-operation in the plan and containing articles on methods of treating asphyxia cases.

SIDNEY BLACKMER ANNOUNCES MARRIAGE TO LENORE ULRIC

Stage Star's Leading Man Confirms Rumor That Has Been Current on Broadway.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—The announcement of Sidney Blackmer, stage and screen star, last night in Hollywood, that he and Lenore Ulric were secretly married May 23 at the bride's estate at Harmon, N. Y., confirmed rumors that have been current along Broadway.

At the office of David Belasco, who originally starred Miss Ulric on Broadway, it was said that he had received no announcement of the marriage.

Blackmer played opposite Miss Ulric in "Mima" last season, and rumors that they were married were circulated about the time the play closed.

Blackmer said they were married by a Justice of the Peace and that Gilda Gray, vaudeville actress, witnessed the ceremony.

45,556 POUNDS MORE AIR MAIL

Another New High Record for July Over That of June.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—Air mail poundage set another new high record in July, with an increase of 821 pounds daily over the month of June. The July total was 638,810 pounds, 45,556 pounds more than was carried in June.

WOMAN AIR RACER LEAVES FOR WEST

Mrs. Neva Paris Off for Starting Point to Fly for Curtiss-Robertson.

Mrs. Neva Paris of New York, an entrant in the coming women's national air derby and a pilot for less than a year, took off from Lambert-St. Louis Field at 12:20 p. m. yesterday for Santa Monica, Cal., the starting point of the race.

During a week in St. Louis, Mrs. Paris demonstrated that she was an excellent pilot in spite of her brief training. Flying a new Challenger Robin monoplane, similar to the St. Louis Robin which holds the endurance record, she expects to reach Santa Monica in three days, flying by way of Kansas City, Wichita, Kan., and the Southwest.

Mrs. Paris, a widow and former California rancher, received her training at a Curtiss Flying School on Long Island and is the Curtiss Flying Service entrant in the race. Her ship, made by the Curtiss-Robertson Airplane Manufacturing Co. here, has special streamlining and is expected to develop a speed of 135 miles an hour.

The coming race will be her first experience in competitive flying. In preparation for the event, Mrs. Paris recently took off from Long Island in the face of a 50-mile gale and flew a designated course to convince her backers that she was capable of piloting under adverse conditions.

Seventeen women, among them Ruth Elder, Bebe Daniels, movie actress, and Lady Mary Heath, English woman flyer, have entered the air derby so far. The racers are scheduled to reach Parks Airport, an overnight control point, on Aug. 24, with Cleveland their goal.

Elinor Smith Leaves on Tour of Airports With Unnamed Jumper.

By the Associated Press.

ROOSEVELT FIELD, N. Y., Aug. 10.—In a six-passenger cabin monoplane, equipped with all the latest safety devices and christened Happy Landings, 18-year-old Elinor Smith will start off tomorrow on a five weeks' barnstorming journey, whose primary purpose will be to make the air-minded public also "parachute minded."

Miss Smith will not do the jumping herself, but an unnamed member of the "Caterpillar Club" will give exhibition leaps at 50 airports between New York and the Pacific Coast while she pilots the ship.

The tour is sponsored by Col. Louis J. Campbell of New York.

$500,000 FOR STREET WORK IN KIRKWOOD

Entire Program Is Expected to Be Completed by Next Summer.

Plans for the construction of roadways and streets in Kirkwood, involving the expenditure of approximately $500,000, were announced yesterday by City Clerk Donworth. With the disposition of a few remaining condemnation suits, it is expected the work will be begun before winter and that the entire program will be completed before next summer.

Of the total expenditure, $200,000 is being furnished from the St. Louis County bond issue of $10,000,000 for road-building, as the Kirkwood allotment, and will be used in the construction of streets connecting major highways. Appropimately $175,000 will be expended by Kirkwood on 20 small sections within the city limits, and the remainder of the $500,000 to widen the 20-foot concrete pavements provided by the county for connecting roads.

Allotment of the money in three major projects is as follows:

1. Paving of Big Bend road from Geyer road to Barrett Station road, a distance of two miles, with 20-foot concrete slab, at a cost of $75,000, paid for by the county. This strip will not be widened out of the Kirkwood expenditure. The county is also constructing, exclusive of the Kirkwood projects, a three-quarters of a mile strip on Big Bend road from Geyer to Denny road on the southern boundary of Kirkwood, to connect with the project mentioned.

2. Paving of Geyer road from Big Bend road to Manchester road, a distance of two and a quarter miles, with a 20-foot slab. From Big Bend road to the Missouri Pacific tracks, Kirkwood will widen this road to a 36-foot thoroughfare with curbings. From the tracks to Manchester road, the county will pave a 10-foot strip on each side of the present 18-foot paving recently put in by the city.

3. Paving of Adams avenue from Geyer road east to the city limits of Kirkwood, a distance of one and three-quarters miles, with a 20-foot slab. Portions of this road will be widened from 10 to 24 feet, out of the city appropriation.

Estimates on the cost of each project are not available but the amount to be expended by the city of Kirkwood surpasses the largest previous amount $265,000 the municipality spent for highway developments last year, according to county engineers.

SCHOOL PLAYGROUND FESTIVAL AUG. 24

3500 Children Will Participate in Pageant at High School Stadium.

The summer season for St. Louis Public School playgrounds will be brought to a close Aug. 24 with a festival at the High School Stadium in which 4000 children from the playgrounds will participate.

A feature of the day will be the "Mother Goose Pageant," to be enacted in costume by 3500 of the children. This event has been in preparation throughout the summer and practices have been held at each of the 66 playgrounds. Mary, the contrary one, the 10 o'clock scholar, Little Boy Blue and others found in nursery rhymes are to appear in the series of dances.

The pageant will begin at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. The festival itself will open at 1:30 o'clock with an exhibition of the products of "industrial play" periods and contests in nine forms of sport to determine the inter-playground champions.

Each of the playgrounds will have a booth in which to display decorative or useful articles made by children of the playgrounds assisted by the supervisors.

In the athletic events playground teams will compete for a trophy donated by the Public School Patrons' Alliance. There will be baseball, dodge ball, volley ball, hand ball and end ball events, a track and field meet and a contest for model airplanes.

OBSERVANCE OF ADOPTION OF WEIMAR CONSTITUTION

St. Louis Services Today at St. Peter's Evangelical Church and at Mission Inn.

Ten years ago the fledgling German republic adopted its Constitution at the city of Weimar, an instrument known since as the Weimar Constitution. As in Germany and elsewhere, there will be a celebration of the anniversary in St. Louis today by Germans and persons of German descent. A service to be attended by the staff of the German consulate in St. Louis will be conducted at 9 a. m. at St. Peter's Evangelical Church, Warne and St. Louis avenues.

At 5:30 p. m. a celebration will be held in the garden of Mission Inn, Grand boulevard and Magnolia avenue, Dr. Georg Ahrens, the Consul, and by the German Orchestra Society, the Eden Singing Society and the German Sporting Club, all young people's organizations. Members of other German societies also will attend.

Dr. Ahrens will speak. The program will open with the singing of "The Star Spangled Banner" and close with "Deutschland Ueber Alles," now the German national anthem. Dr. Ahrens has pointed out that Germans regard the meaning of this famous song as "Germany above everything else in Germans' hearts" rather than "Germany over the world." It was made the anthem, he said, by former President Ebert, a Socialist.

LINDENWOOD PUBLICATION SUGGESTS CAREERS FOR WOMEN

Booklet Prepared by Dean Gipson Emphasizes Popularity of Specialized Courses.

The growing dominance of specialized courses of study over the purely cultural subjects offered the college woman of 20 years ago is illustrated in a brochure for young women, "After College, What?", prepared by Dr. Alice E. Gipson, dean of Lindenwood College.

Issuance of the booklet was prompted by the fact that of the 38 members of this year's graduating class, only two stated the intention of staying at home. The others had ambitions that ranged from the practice of medicine to the sale of women's apparel in a department store.

Among the activities suggested in the brochure are dietetics, food and institutional management, costume designing, interior decoration, and social service. For each of these callings the college offers a specialized course. The dietetics course includes, besides study of foods, cookery, nutrition, home nursing and management of tea rooms and supplementary work in organic chemistry, physiology, bacteriology, anatomy, education and psychology.

Supplementary work for the social service course includes preventive medicine, child psychology, heredity, mental hygiene, labor problems, child welfare and social pathology. ...

IF NUMEROLOGISTS ARE RIGHT, THIS CHILD SHOULD BE LUCKY

Alice-Roberta Hereford Was Born Seven Days Ago at Seven Minutes After Seven.

If numbers have significance, as numerologists contend, then "seven" should be fraught with mystic meaning in the life of Alice-Roberta Hereford, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. Hereford, 5660 Kingsbury boulevard, who will be seven days old tomorrow.

Alice-Roberta, who weighed 7 pounds 7 ounces, was born at seven minutes after seven in the evening. Alice-Roberta's mother was a seventh child, and her father is 27 years old.

To carry matters further, Alice-Roberta's second name has seven letters and the first two numbers of her telephone number which is CAbany 6160 add to seven.

Mrs. Hereford, the former Alice Hinckley, is a graduate of the University of Alabama and was born in that State, the name of which is spelled with seven letters.

THE STANDARD OF QUALITY

Did any Doctor ever say to you:

"Take this prescription to the chain store"?

TENSE silence as the physician examines the patient . . . the family on anxious tiptoe at the door . . . then the verdict, and a curious scrawl of characters and Latin words on a little white slip of paper.

The prescription, which holds the secret of returning health for your loved one.

Because it is vital that the drugs be fresh, full strength, and accurately compounded, the chances are overwhelming that the doctor will recommend an independent community druggist, either around the corner from your home or downtown near your office.

He is certain that the community druggist who owns his store is an experienced pharmacist, registered under state laws. He isn't a cog in a system, but a friendly, human, sincere individual, interested in you and your health problems.

His education, training, professional ethics, and reputation, make him the man to rely on when the health of your family is at stake.

He does not try to give you "something just as good," because he sells no products on orders from high pressure sales managers. His entire thought, time, and effort are dedicated to your better service.

He is the man you have always trusted to fill your prescriptions. Now, compare his values in all drug store merchandise with those obtainable anywhere in his neighborhood—weigh the benefits of his personal service—and you will readily decide that the McKesson symbol, shown above, is a good guide to the better drug stores.

SUITS SEEK TO SET ASIDE TWO ACTIONS OF COUNTY COURT

Taxpayers' League Attacks Price Paid for Hospital Site, Alleging $25,000 Overcharge.

OPPOSES RENTAL OF JUDGE'S OLD HOME

Alleges Wehmeyer Set Up 'Straw Man' Owner to Permit Use of Property by County.

Purchase of a site for the projected St. Louis County Hospital and rental of quarters for the County Health Department are attacked in two suits filed in Circuit Court at Clayton yesterday by the County Taxpayers' League. The league asks that both transactions be set aside.

It is alleged by the league that $25,000 too much was paid by the county in acquiring the hospital site in Clayton from the Davis Estate, a corporation established for the property of the late Samuel Davis, capitalist. The other action charges that a "straw man" was set up to rent the Health Department a house which had belonged to Presiding Judge Wehmeyer of the County Court, or administrative body, "without authority of law."

Taylor R. Young, of counsel for the Taxpayers' League, filed the suits. Plaintiffs in both, besides the league, are a group of its leaders—Peter F. Maes, Gustav Loeffel, William A. Brady, J. A. Jennings, George W. Baumhoff and Hezekiah Sanders.

The same men are plaintiffs in a suit pending in the Supreme Court of Missouri to prohibit the County Court from exercising jurisdiction over the $10,000,000 county road bond issue. They also had filed a similar suit in Circuit Court over the $1,000,000 hospital bond issue and have announced the intention to appeal from an adverse decision last week in the lower tribunal. The league has been active in county politics and its activities lately have been devoted to the conduct of bond issue affairs by the County Court.

"$25,000 in Excess of Value."

The suit over the hospital site names the members of the County Court—Presiding Judge Wehmeyer and Associate Judges Gardner and Rott—County Treasurer Deuser and the Davis Estate as defendants. Samuel C. Davis of 13 Westmoreland place, is president of the Davis Estate. Records show his brother, Dwight F. Davis, Governor-General of the Philippines, as secretary, but Young understands the latter has relinquished the position.

The County Court, the suit sets out, bought 28 acres fronting on North and South road from the Davis Estate for $100,000, about July 3, 1928, for the hospital site. The petition charges the transaction was without authority of law and in violation of taxpayers' rights because the law requires a board of trustees to handle all hospital matters. This is a moot point, since Circuit Judge Mulloy held in the lond suit dismissed last week that trustees were not required under the form of proceedings followed.

The property never had a fair, reasonable market value in excess of $75,000, the suit avers, "but the defendants in order to permit the owner (the Davis Estate) to pay unreasonable and exorbitant real estate commissions, attorneys' fees and for other pretended services in effecting the sale of said real estate did cause to be expended out of the hospital bond issue at least $25,000 in excess of the fair market value."

$1,000,000 Will Be Wasted.

Therefore, the plaintiffs allege the sale to be void. Treasurer Deuser, they say, is threatening to pay out money on warrants drawn by the County Court for improvements on the site. Without court aid, the suit adds, the $1,000,000 fund will be "wasted and expended in violation of law." They ask that the land sale be set aside, the Davis Estate be ordered to repay the $100,000 with interest, the County Court be enjoined from issuing warrants on the hospital fund until they appoint the trustees and the County Treasurer be enjoined from paying warrants on the fund.

Members of the County Court, Treasurer Deuser and Clarence Curt, described in the suit as a nephew of Wehmeyer, are defendants in the action over the rental by the county last month of a house at Bonhomme and Bemiston avenues, Clayton, for the Health Department. The petition avers that Wehmeyer and his wife transferred ownership of the premises last month from their names to Curt. The quarters were needed because various public offices had to be moved from the Clayton courthouse to make room for two new Circuit Court divisions.

The suit charges that the three County Judges entered into an agreement with Mrs. Wehmeyer and Curt to rent the house to the Health Department at "an unreasonable and exorbitant rental" and for that purpose to cause the property to be transferred from the Wehmeyers to Curt.

Say Rent Is Too High.

Rental, it is set forth, was fixed at $85 a month, the county furnishing water, light, heat and janitor service, although the league claims reasonable rent would be $55 to $60. A deed to Curt was executed about July 3, with no consideration passing between the parties, it is alleged. The suit asserts that Curt is the "agent and straw" for the Wehmeyers. Judge Wehmeyer and his associates in the court, acting in official capacity, entered an agreement with Curt to rent the place, it is alleged, "without authority of law." The suit claims the deal is void and in fraud of the rights of taxpayers.

Treasurer Deuser has paid an $85 warrant for the July rent, it is stated, and will pay future warrants if not stopped. The suit asks that the rental agreement be set aside, that Curt be ordered to repay the $85 with interest and that the County Court and Treasurer be enjoined from issuing and paying future warrants for the rent. Attorney Young asserted that the law prohibited the County Court members from being interested in any transaction with the county.

PARTNERS IN DRUGSTORE SUE FOR RECEIVERSHIP

Two of Four Say Business Is Losing Money and They "Can't Agree on Anything."

Suit for a receiver and an injunction was filed in Circuit Court at Clayton yesterday against the West-Del Pharmacy, 6335 Delmar boulevard, and Henry Rubin and Julius Leventhal, two of the four proprietors of the store. Leo and G. B. Barken, 612 Leland avenue, University City, the other two proprietors are the plaintiffs. They assert that they and the defendants have been "unable to agree on anything concerning the running of the drug store."

The petition for an injunction is to restrain Rubin, who is secretary-treasurer of the company, from interfering with Leo Barken's exercising his authority as president of the concern.

According to the petition, the store has been operated four years with a loss of about $8000. Assets are listed at $19,710.05 and debts $7787.87. The plaintiffs charge that creditors are demanding payment and ask that the assets be reduced to cash, the debts paid, and the balance distributed to stockholders. The company is capitalized at $20,000.

FOUR AVOID BORROWERS' SUIT

Demurrers Sustained for Business Bureau and Three Loan Firms.

The Better Business Bureau, the Home Finance Co., the Mayflower Loan Co. and the Metro Loan Co. are no longer co-defepndants in a $25,000 damage suit brought by C. W. Mounts, a mail carrier, 6336 Wells avenue, St. Louis County, and his wife.

Alleging they were permitted to borrow more than they could repay and charging violation of the small-loan law, the Mounts, in June, filed suit against five loan companies and the Better Business Bureau. The Bureau and the Home, Mayflower and Metro companies demurred on the ground there was no evidence to justify making them co-defendants. The demurrers were sustained Friday by Circiut Judge Malloy at Clayton.

"Drunkenness Is a Disease and I Can Cure It"
—Leslie E. Keeley, M. D., LL. D.

THE EDITOR of a powerful Chicago Newspaper before his death, challenged this statement of Dr. Keeley that "Drunkenness is a disease and I can cure it." He defied Dr. Keeley to cure the men whom he would send to the Institute. The results were so convincing that, through his great newspaper, he was personally responsible for thousands of men and women taking The Keeley Treatment for Liquor.

STORMY ELECTION ENDS WAITERS' CONVENTION

Ralph M. Rowland, Caterer at Cleveland Club, Is New President.

Election of officers broke up the fourth annual convention of the National Association of Colored Waiters and Hotel Employes in session here since Monday.

Described in the oration which put his name in nomination as "a candidate, who if unable to be the bell cow, is content to gallop along with the herd," the new president, Ralph M. Rowland, caterer at the Union Club, Cleveland, on his election Friday was rushed down the center aisle on the shoulders of his enthusiastic delegation and dumped on the platform while his fellow Wild Cats shouted "Speech! speech!"

Cane in hand, a flowery butterfly tie perched beneath the wings of his turn-down collar, the new president, "deeply touched," thanked the convention for thus honoring him and told them that "while I lost a year ago in Cleveland, you are paying me now for losing then."

Chairman Is Diplomatic.

Wilson Robinson, acting head waiter at the Fred Harvey restaurant, Union Station, was elected first vice president; W. H. Turner, waiter at the Knollwood Country Club, Detroit, and wielder of the silver spoon later supplanted by a gavel at the convention, second vice president; Lincoln Garfield Sliger, captain of service, Hotel Gibson, Cincinnati, third vice president, and Hugh H. Lurton, waiter at the American Hotel, and convention committee chairman, fourth vice president.

A number of demonstrations were so enthusiastic that Delegate Jackson of Harrisburg, Pa., sought Chairman Turner's assistance in "preventing the destruction of the meeting." The chair ruled it was not "empowered to decree how Wild Cats may express their feelings." The most diplomatic of the many tactful rulings by the chairman—he studied procedure first hand in the House and Senate galleries while residing in Washington, D. C.—was his request that Past President Chylow H. Brown, head waiter at the Cooper-Carlton, Chicago, "try not to confine his remarks to personalities."

The chair's declaration that it would recognize the delegate farthest to the rear when more than one desired the floor led those in front to move their seats to the back of the hall. Before long the rear was crowded and only with difficulty did the meeting proceed. Numerous caucuses on the floor at the time of nominations prompted Chairman Turner to enjoin "all whispered correspondence."

Printing Bill Paid.

Norman Dunlap, manager of 1500 employes in Chicago, was chosen general secretary; Omar C. Johnson, captain of service, Hotel Gibson, Cincinnati, recording secretary; Richard W. Smith, head waiter, Wade Park Manor, Cleveland, treasurer; Irving W. Gray, head waiter Del Prado Hotel, Chicago, director of the budget, and J. T. Elliott, head waiter, Chamber of Commerce, Cleveland, and Robert H. Dale, head waiter, Chelsea Hotel, Chicago, trustees.

Just before the convention closed, C. A. Klein of the St. Louis Association of Credit Men was granted the speakers' platform to announce that he had received a check for $200 from the retiring president, Morris A. Cowan, maitre d'hotel, Penn-Harris, Harrisburg, covering "most" of the association's indebtedness to the A. B. Dewes Printing and Stationery Co. of St. Louis. President-elect Rowland had promised "to make good" the remaining $50, he said. Klein was on the platform when the convention opened Monday morning.

The Wild Cats then stood and shook hands around while they sang "God Be With You 'Til We Meet Again," after which they retired to Room 421 of the Grand Central Hotel, where the Chicago delegation served "buttermilk."

MOTHER AND SON ARRESTED FOR FORGING VETERANS' CHECK

Mrs. Mae Elrod, 56 years old, 1220 Dolman street, and her son, Carl Ivesta, 20, were charged in Federal warrants yesterday with forging the name of Mrs. Elrod's former husband, Frank Elrod, a disabled soldier, to a compensation check for $36.75. The maximum punishment upon conviction of the offense is 10 years in prison or $1000 fine, or both.

Mrs. Elrod and her son were arrested by police Friday night for the Federal Secret Service Bureau, which has been investigating the case since last January, when the forgery was discovered. According to Secret Service agents, Elrod, who is 33 years old, divorced his wife and remarried and now resides at Osage, Ark. Mrs. Elrod, who says she knew nothing of the divorce, said she cashed the check after her husband deserted her. It is alleged that her son signed Elrod's name to the check. Mrs. Elrod has also continued to receive $21.60 a month compensation from the Government as Elrod's wife. Bond for the defendants was fixed at $1000 each.

Woman Falls Dead on Street.

Mrs. Josephine Sexton, 63 years old, a widow, 4526 Claxton avenue, fell dead as she was walking at Union boulevard and Prange avenue yesterday morning. Heart disease is thought to have been the cause. The body was claimed by a brother, Harvey Coup, of Gilbert, Ky.

POLAND NOT TO EXTEND DOLES AFTER 17 WEEKS

Pilsudski Cabinet Decides That Is Long Enough for Unemployed to Find Jobs.

By the Associated Press.

WARSAW, Aug. 10. — The new Pilsudski cabinet which was formed in April and consists mostly of army representatives, has no intention of weakening labor with doles.

By the Polish law of 1924 all unemployed are entitled to a dole varying between 35 per cent and 50 per cent of their normal wages for 17 weeks following their release. When many of the idle did not find work after the elapse of these 17 weeks, the Government continued to pay the doles under the idea that they were "extra doles necessitated by present conditions."

The present Government has declared that 17 weeks is plenty of time in which to find a job and that doles will cease after that interval.

Poland had 105,000 unemployed at last accounts. The new regulation affected 3000.

Motor Tour to Springfield, Ill. Leads to Salem State Preserve

By ROBERT L. BRADLEY,
Automobile Editor.

As long as Springfield, beautiful capital of Illinois, stands, the spirit of Abraham Lincoln will invest it with an aura of historical romance, for just as Lincoln, alive, was one of the city's most progressive citizens, to use a hackneyed description, so, dead, he still seems a dominant force.

Springfield is easily reached from St. Louis over an all-concrete road—Illinois No. 4. Only 108 miles distant, it affords many pleasant rambles through the Lincoln Tomb, inspections of the places where he resided and where he had his offices, and views of the old Statehouse, where he made many of his greatest political utterances.

To avoid the bumpy streets in East St. Louis at the other end of the Municipal Bridge, the motorist may cros the Mississippi on the McKinley Bridge (a toll bridge). Leaving the east approach of McKinley Bridge, one follows the carline for two blocks to plainly marked Illinois No. 4, in Venice.

Streets in Venice, Madison and Granite City are smoothly surfaced. The only drawback to this route is the possibility one may be held up at any of numerous railroad crossings by passing trains.

No. 4 leaves Illinois No. 3, the road to Alton, Jacksonville and upper Mississippi River points, and cuts across a mediocre landscape of plains to Staunton, Ill., a coal-mining center. The countryside may give a farm relief expert or crop statistician many thrilling moments, but it is only a blur along the road to the average automobilist.

As one swings along, with a wary eye open for Constables and other officers who might have something to say about speed laws, his thoughts might understandably turn to such matters as mileage per gasoline gallon, oil consumption and the varying effects on even "super-extra" tires of slab—the vulgar name for pavement—and gravel. Some hold that slab is as detrimentaly insofar as friction and wear are concerned as are the rough, skiddy particles of rock that pass for gravel. Or—the miles to Springfield might seem like as many yards if an argument could be started, for instance, on the perennial and problematical question of general wear-and-tear and depreciation.

But the wear-and-tear should not be permitted to keep one's mind off the road. At Staunton, the left fork of a branch in the concrete is taken through Carlinville, a peaceful, clean little town, and Auburn (no comment), to Springfield.

As one zooms down a main street, automatically avoiding street cars and pedestrians, one's thoughts are recalled with a jerk from tires and oil to more momentous subjects. The new Capitol Building stands out like a church on the left of the street. Pause a moment, do the tourist act and judge whether Missouri or Illinois has the finer.

Not everyone realizes how many visual reminders there are of Abraham Lincoln in the Illinois Capitol.

He was 28 years old when he went there to live. During the preceding several years he had been living in New Salem, 20 miles away, where he was grocery clerk, soldier, merchant, surveyor, postmaster and, from 1834, State Legislator.

However, every occupation, save the last, had been a failure or a stop-gap, and so he had taken up the study of law. Lincoln says this of himself:

"He studied with nobody. He still mixed in the surveying to pay board and clothing bills. When the Legislature met the lawbooks were dropped, but were taken up again at the end of the session. In the autumn of 1836 he obtained a law license, and on April 15, 1837, removed to Springfield and commenced the practice—his old friend Stuart taking him into partnership."

This was John T. Stuart, the man who in the beginning had urged Lincoln to study law. The new firm was called Stuart & Lincoln, and endured until the spring of 1841. During these years the partners occupied an office then designated at "No. 4, Hoffman's Row, upstairs." Although nearly 100 years old, the building still stands on its original site, 109 North Fifth street.

Upon the dissolution of the firm, Lincoln became the junior partner of Stephen T. Logan, one of Illinois' greatest lawyers. At first the two had an office across the street from that of the other firm, but before long they moved to another old building, still standing on the southwest corner of Sixth and Adams street.

In the autumn of 1844 the partnership of Lincoln and Herndon was formed, to terminate only with the former's death more than 20 years later. For several years the firm had office space in a building on the west side of the town square, where a modern office structure now is.

Lincoln's political activities and, to a large extent, his legal work, were closely connected with one of the most historic buildings in the Middle West—the old Illinois Statehouse. In the same year that he went to Springfield the city was made the capital and the building was ready for partial occupancy in 1840. Lincoln was then serving his fourth and last term in the House of Representatives. In 1858, in the chambers of the House, he delivered what many call his supreme speech, that which opened with the words: "A house divided against itself cannot stand. I believe this Government cannot endure permanently half slave and half free. I do not expect the Union to be dissolved. I do not expect the house to fall—but I do expect it will cease to be divided."

For almost 50 years the old Statehouse has been used by Sangamon Count for a courthouse. Thirty years ago, in order to provide more room and eliminate needless fire hazards, it was remodeled and enlarged from two to three stories. The building was raised and the third story placed underneath, to preserve the original appearance as faithfully as possible.

While Lincoln was acquiring a national political reputation, he lived in the modest structure which has since become famous as the Lincoln home. On November 4, 1842, he married Miss Mary Todd of Springfield. They took up their residence in the Globe Tavern, a small boarding house which Lincoln described as being "very well kept by a widow lady of the name of Beck. Our room and boarding only costs us four dollars a week."

Within a year and a half, however, Lincoln had purchased his own home, a small frame cottage at Eighth and Jackson streets. With one exception—in Lincoln's only term in Congress—the Lincolns lived in this house until their departure for Washington in February, 1861. Before many years had passed, an increasing family made enlargement necessary, and the upper half story was made to full-size. Since then the only change has been the addition of a one-story room at the rear.

The Lincoln home remained in

Wiseacres Say, "It Can't Be," But Engineers Keep on Doing It

By FREDERICK C. RUSSELL.

"It can't be done."

So said the wiseacres of yesteryear when pioneers were talking of the four-cylinder engine, gear drive, electric ignition and the other radical ideas of the early days in automobiledom. Today a new crop of wiseacres is greeting the industry's latest attempts at progress with exactly the same cry, and a motoring public, unfamiliar with automotive history, is in danger of helping to step on the brakes instead of the accelerator.

The prediction that cars will shortly appear without carburetors gears, brake pedals and clutches has brought forth the usual jeers from those who profess to read the future more accurately. "It can't be done," say thousands of practical-minded folk. Meanwhile the industry, born to defy convention, goes right ahead doing what can't be done.

A carburetor-less system of fueling modern cars is being offered by one of the largest accessory and parts makers in the industry. The elimination of gears, at least the manual shifting process as it is known today, is being seriously considered as the next step beyond the present trend toward four speeds forward. The brake pedal may be combined with the accelerator if electric brakes, which are already in actual use, are found to be superior to present systems. Elimination of the clutch is forecast by those who believe that electric drive, either of the type now utilized in bus design or the magnetic coupling form tried and discarded in a car made some 15 years ago, will supersede the present method of mechanical transmission of power.

When Charles F. Kettering proposed cranking an automobile engine on the energy from a storage battery he was told: "It won't work." Contemporaries were looking for power sources with which to spin the early engines and were utilizing compressed air, spring tension and acetylene gas to pinch hit for human muscle. But Kettering demonstrated that it could be done in precisely the fashion indicated in his original plans, and the automobile forged ahead to a magnificent place in the modern scheme of things.

"It can't be done" was the popular reaction to proposals for low pressure tires. Motordom had been schooled to believe that high pressure was essential to tire life and that unless side walls were reasonably erect excessive tire depreciation would result, including the risk of blowouts. But even the earliest of the balloons which were more extreme in their pressure than the type used today demonstrated that the idea was entirely feasible.

St. Louis Woman Tells of Auto Trip to Los Angeles by Herself

Miss Ruth M. Calkins Had Never Been Further West Than Kirkwood, Mo., Had Never Seen Mountains or Desert.

By Ruth M. Calkins.

FOR several years I had planned a trip to the Coast, but for various reasons it was always postponed. Then the happy day arrived when I knew I was to go; nothing would deter me from this long and thrilling journey in my humble 1926 Ford roadster. I had never been further West than Kirkwood, and I had never seen a mountain or desert in my life. My thirst for adventure, for conquest of parts unknown—to me, at least—is partially gratified. I have completed a 2500-mile trip over good roads and bad, with as little trouble and as much of adventure, I believe, as is humanly possible. In two happy, carefree weeks, I enjoyed more of adventure and travel than I had known for some years before. The sum total of my car troubles was a set of burnt-out transmission bands and two punctures. I was told that I would need at least two new tires and three inner tubes, but I could not believe that my car would fail me to that extent, and it did not. Dear little car! A stanch and loyal friend.

I started out with all the courage and confidence born of ignorance. I imagined that to drive two-thirds the distance across the continent would be as sweet and leisurely as an afternoon drive through the parks. I had visualized, in my mind's eye, the beautiful white paved road, running like a ribbon from St. Louis to the coast. How glorious it would be, hour after hour, day after day, and week after week, riding gaily along with the cool, gentle breezes blowing about me caressingly. A beautiful dream that too soon was to be shattered.

The ride from St. Louis to Kansas City was very pleasant. I completed the trip from noon to 9 p. m., which in a Ford is record time. It seemed that night as though I were at least 1000 miles from St. Louis—the radio in my room was very welcome. A slight realization of the distance yet to be traveled began to dawn upon me.

I remained until evening of the following day, when I started for Topeka, Kan., arriving there about 8 p. m. Topeka impressed me as a clean, live city, where one could be very happy.

The roads are not paved in Kansas. They are good traveling unless it happens to rain. Fortunately, it did not rain one drop the entire two days it took me to go through the State. On one occasion a black cloud hung over me. I watched it closely and stepped on the gas—a few drops of rain fell on me and I left the cloud behind. About sunset one begins to think of a hotel room, a hot bath and a good dinner. When these thoughts begin to surge through the mind, one may be 40 miles from a town, or 60 or 100. I remember in Kansas I passed up a nice town because I felt that I had to make a longer stretch before stopping anywhere.

So I rode through miles and miles of rolling hills and when I finally struck a village I could not have gone further. Unfortunately, the town was one which might be described as "jerk-water." I inquired for a room at a private residence because the only hotel did not look promising. A woman came to the door and led me into a dark sitting room where she was conversing with several other elderly persons. She then showed me a dark room on the main floor just off the porch. I was glad to return to the hotel, which at least didn't seem funereal.

The next morning I was only too glad to leave and started at 7 a. m., hoping to make Denver the same day. The roads were good and so was the weather. I sped along the road and at sunset I had passed the Colorado line. I experienced a thrill at the realization that I was in the State famous for its beautiful scenery. My first stop for gas in Colorado was at a little village which could boast about 20 inhabitants. The proprietor of the gas station remarked, "Well, you are now in the wild and wooly West!" It sounded like sarcasm to me. I inquired how far it was to the next village. "Oh, about 18 miles," he replied.

I was so weary that it seemed impossible to go further, but I went courageously on, hoping to come to an up-to-date little town. Alas, I was to be disappointed. It was a very small town and the only place to stop overnight was in a camp where the bed was of stone-like hardness. I just couldn't see it, so decided to make the next village, which was a distance of 100 miles. Thus it happened that I rode through Colorado at night on lonely, hilly roads. The clouds were pitch black. After about an hour, I looked over my shoulder to ascertain whence came the soft rays of light which shone upon me. It was a Colorado moon, rising above the black horizon! Higher and higher it traveled into the sky while I, thrilled at its beauty, frequently turned to watch its course. For many miles I watched it climb into the sky. I came to an oil station where several Mexicans were standing around. They appeared ferocious but were absolutely harmless. I then rode on through the night, the moon my only companion. The loneliness of these cross-country roads at night is quite beyond description. There is a hush, an infinite silence that penetrates to the very depths of your being.

I came to the village about 10:30 p. m. To my disgust, it was a miserable hotel and the bed on which I threw my weary body was made of straw, or worse. Again I was only too glad to arise early in the morning. I was just 100 miles from Denver; 12 miles out, I saw the mountain ranges meeting the sky on the horizon, peaked with snow. To make sure I was not mistaken, I asked a little boy if those were the mountains.

Very unconcerned and non-committal, he said "Yes." I feasted my eyes on them; it was my first glimpse of the mountains, a moment I shall never forget. I climbed my first mountain grade near Denver, not in my car, but in the car of an experienced mountain driver who advised me not to attempt the climb if I had never driven in the mountains. I am very thankful for this word of warning as I was not prepared for the dizzy heights and steep grades of the mountains. As we climbed up and I looked over the edge of the road to the wide expanse of mountain ranges, I experienced a sickening sensation.

When we finally arrived at the top of Mt. Lookout, I shivered and shook. Buffalo Bill's grave is located at the peak of Lookout Mountain. All one can see from this point is mountain ranges and snow-topped peaks. To one who has never seen a mountain, it is overwhelming. I would not attempt a detailed description of the American Rockies, which I am sure cannot be surpassed for beauty anywhere in the world.

After a few days in Denver, I went on to Colorado Springs. Just outside of Denver I had my first puncture, which a service man nearby repaired for me. Arriving at Colorado Springs, I started out to see three wonders of the world in one afternoon, the Garden of the Gods, the Cave of the Winds and the Seven Falls. Let me say that I was in no wise prepared for the miracles of nature which my eyes were to behold in the brief space of one afternoon. Nor was I prepared to climb and descend the steepest mountain roads that man ever conceived or achieved—nor was my poor, innocent little Ford prepared.

I rode out to the Garden of the Gods and as I entered through the numerous fantastic-formed rocks, I soon saw why it bore this name. A city of rocks, rising high above one. The "Kissing Camels," the Cathedral Towers" and many other forms were pointed out to me. From "Steamboat Rock" I gazed through green-colored lens all over the garden. Pike's Peak was visible from here and two young men who had just ascended to the very top, were very much excited. It had made one of them ill. The other told me that they were touring the world together, because once they were married they would have to settle down

Cord, Auburn's Front Drive Car, In Production

Public Announcement Expected Soon—Car to Sell for $3000.

AUBURN, Ind., Aug. 10.—The long awaited Cord front-drive automobile, the question mark of the industry, is in production at the Auburn plants here and a stock of cars is being built up for dealers.

From an authoritative source it was learned here today that shipments have already begun to distributers and dealers and that the new car will be announced to the public within a short time.

It was also learned that the price range of the car will be slightly more than $3000.

Maximum production on the Cord is set at around 1500 cars a month, an unusually high figure for a car in this price class.

Production schedule, it was learned, calls for around 1100 cars in August. It is expected that maximum production will be reached in September and 5000 cars will be built by Dec. 1.

A check at the factory here shows that while a considerable stock of cars has already been built up, orders for nearly 2000 cars are already on file with the factory, this without any definite price announement or solicitation of orders from dealers or the public.

Despite pressure brought to bear by dealers and distributers, the company has consistently refused to rush the model on the market without complete and adequate tests.

Probably the most remarkable testing organization ever gotten together by any automobile company is now working on the new Cords. Every Cord car that leaves the line is given an actual road test of 50 miles. In charge of this testing organization are such famous front-drive experts as Earl Cooper, Jerry Wonderlich, Reeves Dutton and Johnny Seymour.

Auburn-Graves to Display Four Models Of Cord Front Drive

Four models of the new Auburn-built Cord front drive car will be received next Sunday and shown at the display rooms of the Auburn-Graves Motor Co., Inc., it is announced by C. E. "Buzz" Graves, president.

They are the five-passenger sedan, the four-door brougham, the collapsible cabriolet with rumble seat and the five-passenger phaeton sedan.

Wire wheels are standard equipment on all lines of the Cord, according to Graves.

Tour to Old Salem State Park May Be Made in a Day

the family until 1838 when Robert Lincoln deeded it to the State of Illinois, since which time it has been preserved and opened to the public.

The National Lincoln Tomb, an imposing monument filled with mementos of the life of the Emancipator, is a short drive from the center of the city. One passes the Capitol and turns north on Sixth street. The guide, who has told the story of the relics in the tomb so often that his sentences run together almost indistinguishably, has a vast fund of information at his tongue's tip, and is not loathe to discourse before an attentive audience.

Twenty miles from Springfield the New Salem park and museum may be reached by automobile over two routes. Highway No. 24 north to Highway No. 43A, to Petersburg and thence to Salem, is somewhat longer than the other, but consists entirely of hard roads. The second is by way of Highway No. 3 and is plainly marked by New Salem signs. This road is excellent in dry weather.

Founded shortly before Lincoln took up his residence there, New Salem "winked out," as he himself described it—in other words ceased to exist—not long after his departure. Nevertheless, it was the scene of six colorful years in his life.

Drifting in after a flat boat trip to New Orleans, Lincoln became the clerk of Denton Offut, his employer on that occasion. Soon Offut's business failed and Lincoln served for a few months as a militiaman in the Black Hawk War. Returning, he set up in business for himself, only to meet failure. But he obtained the postmastership and this brought a small income, soon to be eclipsed in a new field, that of Deputy County Surveyor. This supported, he studied law.

Some years ago, the site of the almost forgotten village of New Salem was purchased and made a State park. A memorial museum has been built and several cabins have been rebuilt on their original locations.

The park, which, aside from its historical aspects, is one of the most beautiful spots in Illinois, is easily accessible and well worth a visit.

By way of variety, the return trip to St. Louis may be made by way of Jacksonville, Alton and the Lewis and Clark Bridges—a distance of 123 miles.

Incidentally, this route is somewhat less drab insofar as scenery is concerned.

Millions Tour Canada.

More than 12,000,000 American motorists, traveling in over 3,700,000 cars, are expected to tour Canada this year. It is estimated that approximately $180,000,000 will be spent by the motorists in the Dominion.

E. J. Johnson, Inc., Announces Several Personnel Changes

Changes in the personnel of E. J. Johnson, Inc., Willys-Knight distributer and Whippet dealer, are announced by Jack Mitchell, general manager.

Robert L. Kingsland has been promoted from sales manager to retail manager. He will also have charge of the service, used car and accounting departments.

Fred Vincel, a salesman, has been made sales manager, and Gus Evers, assistant sales manager of the Whippet division, has been promoted to assistant sales manager of both Whippet and Willys-Knight divisions.

De Soto Produces 80,000 Cars in First 12 Months

During the past 12 months the De Soto six has broken all existing sales records for any first-year car in the entire history of the automobile industry, according to L. G. Peed, general sales manager of the De Soto Motor Corporation of Detroit.

Riding on the crest of a wave of popularity that began when it was first introduced, De Soto completed its first year with sales of more than 80,000 cars—a new world's record for a first-year car.

"The actual figures show that 81,065 De Soto sixes had been shipped from the plant since Aug. 4," Peed declared. "All previous records for first-year cars, regardless of class or price, have been broken by De Soto, evidence of the enthusiastic manner in which the new car has been accepted by the automobile buying public.

"This first year has been a year of achievement. When it is taken into consideration that three months before the first De Soto six appeared no dealer organization had been recruited to merchandise the new car, the De Soto record is remarkable. Every effort consistent with Chrysler Motors' high standard of manufacturing practice, was made to increase production and meet the demand for cars. Plant facilities were expanded and production soon reached a point where the factory was only slightly behind the orders that continued to come in from all parts of the nation.

Willys-Knight Great Six Given Fine Reception

The public reception accorded the new Willys-Knight great six, just introduced by the Willys-Overland Co., indicates that these new models will register the greatest sales demand ever attained by the company's senior line of cars. The new great six is totally different in appearance from any previous model and is seen as setting an entirely new style trend in the quality car class.

Wherever these models have been shown they have attracted unusual attention, especially with those motorists who demand individuality of design and superior engine performance in their cars. That the designers of the new great six have brought about an entirely new creation in motor car design is admitted by experts who have carefully inspected the cars.

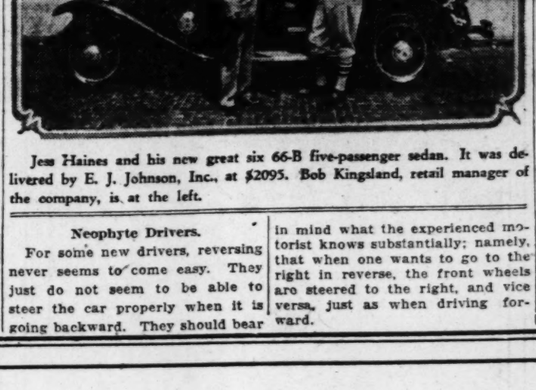
The attention of body experts has been centeerd chiefly on the entirely new treatment of the molding, this being one of the characteristic features of the new cars. An entirely new effect in body design is obtained by carrying the molding from the side of the car in a wide sweeping curve to the hood at the center of the cowl. From this point the molding is carried directly forward to the radiator. It is the new treatment of the molding that has enabled the designers to work out the artistic color combinations which also features the great six.

Interiors of these cars likewise are marked by features and design entirely new from the rich upholstery to the lighting effects obtained by amber-colored lights in the upper rear corners of the rear compartment. The deep-cushioned seats have been designed to provide utmost riding comfort and relaxation for the occupants.

Maine Has Open Door.

A modification of Maine's automobile license regulations now permits any passenger car not operated on a commercial basis to remain in the State indefinitely without a Maine license.

Cardinal Pitcher Buys Willys-Knight



Jess Haines and his new great six 66-B five-passenger sedan. It was delivered by E. J. Johnson, Inc., at $2095. Bob Kingsland, retail manager of the company, is at the left.

Neophyte Drivers.

For some new drivers, reversing never seems to come easy. They just do not seem to be able to steer the car properly when it is going backward. They should bear in mind what the experienced motorist knows substantially; namely, that when one wants to go to the right in reverse, the front wheels are steered to the right, and vice versa, just as when driving forward.

Marmon Wins Prize at Paris Exhibition

A new series Marmon 68 roadster and coupe and a Marmon-built Roosevelt Eight Collapsible coupe were awarded high prizes at the recent Elegance Show at Bois Boulogne, Paris, according to word received at the Marmon-Roosevelt factory.

The show is an annual event with all cars entered by women who own them. In the judging and awarding of prizes both the appearance of the car and the costume of its owner-driver are taken into consideration.

Out of a field of more than 250 entrants, the Marmon 68 roadster won the grand prize. This car, a sport model, was cream with maroon striping and maroon wire wheels.

Adjustable Two Ways.

If the seat is adjustable as to back angle as well as in relation to the clutch and brake pedals, the car owner should be certain that the adjustment suits him. Often it is entirely overlooked.

95 Per Cent of Auto Accidents Called Avoidable

By the Associated Press.

MACON, Mo., Aug. 10.—Ninety-five per cent of the automobile accident cases we are called upon to treat are preventable, Dr. A. L. Raines, county physician, asserts.

"Careless and incompetent driving causes them. Taking needless risks, running too fast, going to the top of a hill at full speed and meeting nother car—and lives injured in such mishaps, and I am confident the same is true in other localities. Many are injured for life and will have to use crutches or limp. They are glad to escape with their lives."

Dr. Raines said the distressing part of the increasing toll of accidents was that most of it was needless. With the right sort of judgment at the wheel, he added, accidents never would happen.

1,000,000 Sixes Built This Year By Chevrolet

Nearly Every State Had Part In Furnishing Materials for Machines.

DETROIT, Mich., Aug 10.—One million six cylinder Chevrolets have been placed on the road since the first of the year.

This announcement, indicating the great popular appeal of the new six cylinder car, was made at the central offices of the company here today as assembly plants in various parts of the country were operating on the biggest summer production schedule in history.

Never in the history of the industry has any other manufacturer equaled the achievement of placing 1,000,000 six cylinder cars on the road in less than eight months. In fact, according to observers, this is more than three times as many six cylinder cars as were ever produced by a manufacturer during a like period.

The record-making model, probably the most famous of all Chevrolet record cars, rolled off the assembly line at the huge Flint (Mich.) plant on Aug. 5. It happened to be a sedan—the new Imperial sedan, introduced a few weeks ago. The glistening record-breaker was welcomed at the end of the assembly line by W. S. Knudsen, president, and other Chevrolet officials.

Without any ceremony the car left the plant for Detroit where it will be presented as one of the interesting exhibits that are to be a part of the mammoth Chevrolet sales convention in Detroit next week. The entire Chevrolet sales supervisory force of nearly 2000 men will be on hand for the biggest convention of its kind ever held by the company.

Nearly every State in the Union had a share in the building of the 1,000,000 sixes. Pennsylvania, Ohio and Michigan furnished the steel, the South and the West supplied the wood, the South and the Northeast provided the cotton and wool, the rubber came from Ohio, Illinois and California, the glass from Pennsylvania, Ohio and Illinois and the duco and enamel from New Jersey and Michigan. More than 85,000 carloads of material were used to produce the 1,000,000 sixes.

As officials point out, the achievement is even greater than during the same period of 1927 or 1928, during which years the Chevrolet Motor Co. was the world's largest builder of automobiles. Furthermore, the change made by Chevrolet Jan. 1 from four cylinder to six cylinder production has upset all previous precedents in the low priced field by causing the production of six cylinder cars to exceed the production of four cylinder cars for the first time in automotive history.

It is also significant to note from automobile registrations, that since Jan. 1, 1927, the Chevrolet Motor Co. has built and produced to date more automobiles than any other manufacturer in the world. Also, Chevrolet sales for the first time in the history of the company were greater in July than they were in June, which still further emphasizes the constantly increasing popularity of the new six cylinder car.

Motorists Should Be Careful in Choosing Oil

With the increasing tendency toward the use of Pennsylvania motor oils, added care should be taken in the selection of a reliable brand, according to O. S. Jacobsen, manager of the St. Louis branch of the Pennzoil Co.

"That Pennsylvania crude oil is the highest grade crude in the world is universally admitted," says Jacobsen. "However, the fact that a finished motor oil is branded "100 per cent pure Pennsylvania" indicates nothing more than the fact that Pennsylvania crude oil was used in its refining. It is in no sense a guarantee of the quality of the finished product which, depending upon the care with which it has been refined, may be a very good motor oil or a very poor one.

"To assume that all "100 per cent pure Pennsylvania" motor oils are of equal quality is as ridiculous as to assume that all automobiles are equally good and reliable. Just as all cars are primarily produced from iron and steel, so are all Pennsylvania oils produced from Pennsylvania crude. The quality and efficency of the finished product, however, depends upon careful manufacturing processes with Pennsylvania oils just as they do with motor cars. The problem of the car owner, therefore, is to separate the sheep from the goats in buying oil, just as he did when he bought his car.

"Safe lubrication is the most important requirement of the modern gasoline engine. For example, when the Transcontinental Air Transport, Inc., having much more at stake than the individual motorist, selected a lubricant for the giant motors upon which the efficiency of their service depends, they selected Pennzoil, rather than blindly picking an oil as too many motorists are prone to do."

Too Old to Drive.

The State Motor Vehicle Department of New Jersey has refused to grant "Uncle Jimmy" Clark, 93-year-old Civil War veteran, a license to operate a car. He pronounced indignantly he was ready to enter into any contest to prove his mental alertness and physical capacity and claims he can see and hear better than youngsters who drive at breakneck speed.

1,000,000 Sixes Built This Year By Chevrolet

Nearly Every State Had Part In Furnishing Materials for Machines.

DETROIT, Mich., Aug 10.—One million six cylinder Chevrolets have been placed on the road since the first of the year.

This announcement, indicating the great popular appeal of the new six cylinder car, was made at the central offices of the company here today as assembly plants in various parts of the country were operating on the biggest summer production schedule in history.

Never in the history of the industry has any other manufacturer equaled the achievement of placing 1,000,000 six cylinder cars on the road in less than eight months. In fact, according to observers, this is more than three times as many six cylinder cars as were ever produced by a manufacturer during a like period.

The record-making model, probably the most famous of all Chevrolet record cars, rolled off the assembly line at the huge Flint (Mich.) plant on Aug. 5. It happened to be a sedan—the new Imperial sedan, introduced a few weeks ago. The glistening record-breaker was welcomed at the end of the assembly line by W. S. Knudsen, president, and other Chevrolet officials.

Without any ceremony the car left the plant for Detroit where it will be presented as one of the interesting exhibits that are to be a part of the mammoth Chevrolet sales convention in Detroit next week. Quiet Engine Is Goal of Engineers With Oldsmobile

"When the endurance flyers landed it was found that they had become deafened by the constant noise incident to flying day after day."

This familiar extract from practically every news story of the endurance flights which have been held this year affords striking proof of the advancements made by leading automobile engineers in eliminating noise from their product.

The noise in airplanes is chiefly created by the exhaust of the engine and the terrific rush of air caused by the propeller. Mufflers are not usually used on airplane engines as they add to the weight and slightly retard engine efficiency.

The automobile has many more potential noise sources. It, too, has the same potential engine noise and the rush of wind while traveling at 60 miles an hour or more. In addition it is operating over a solid road which creates a certain amount of tire noise. In spite of all this, it is possible to converse without difficulty in the better-made cars while rolling along at high speeds hour after hour.

In striving for an unusual degree of quietness in the Oldsmobile six, the engineers had the advantage of a device designed by General Motors engineers and used at the General Motors proving ground to "measure" noise.

This mechanism consists of two instruments which are placed in the interior of the car. They somewhat resemble early radio receiving sets. One contains a loud speaker apparatus which magnifies all sounds within the car and transmits them to an ear phone connected with the left ear of the tester. The right ear phone is connected to the other instrument in which noise is artificially created and its volume controlled by a dial.

When the noise striking both ears of the tester reaches an equal intensity, the reading of the dial on the second instrument gives a measure of the noise created by the car at that specified speed.

By means of this measuring stick, Oldsmobile engineers were enabled to try various means of reducing the noise and have a reliable test of the results in each case. Some of the changes which produce the unusual quietness found in Oldsmobile operation include specially designed rubber engine mountings; taking all instruments or accessories from the cowl dash; lining the entire front compartment with felt and rubbber; placing a layer of felt in the roof construction; using a specially designed clutch hub, and perfecting many other details which all contribute to quietness.

Goodyear Develops New Pneumatic Wheel for Planes

Development of the Goodyear air wheel Musselman type, a new departure in pneumatic casings for aircraft which is expected to greatly increase the safety factor of landings and take-offs of airplanes on rough terrain and in many cases eliminate need of auxiliary shock absorbers, is announced by P. W. Litchfield, president of the Goodyear Tire Rubber Co. of Akron, O.

The new tire is revolutionary in design and is the result of extensive study and research by A. J. Musselman, engineer and inventor, formerly of Chicago, and the Goodyear company, with which he is now associated in the development department.

Outstanding among the advantages of the Goodyear air wheel, Musselman type, are its extreme cushioning for landings, traction in snow, ice, sand and mud, possible elimination of shock absorbers, nearness to perfect streamline, elimination of ordinary ground scoping, elimination of wheel and wheel troubles, lightness of weight and increased security in cross wind and deflated tire landings.

The 22x10-inch Goodyear Air wheel, developed for the same uses now applied to the standard 30x5 tires for aircraft, when inflated to recommended pressure of 20 pounds, is designed to sustain a static load of 1600 pounds.

Busses in Germany.

Motor busses are now operated over 95 regular established routes in Germany, a total length of 1590 miles.

Tax for Bad Roads.

Motorists paid a bad roads tax equivalent to 22.3 cents on every gallon of gasoline consumed on a poor highway in the United States, according to detailed experiments recently conducted by the state colleges of Washington, Ia., and North Carolina.

Heat Is Needed.

One other thing that is handy about the motor heat indicator is the part it plays in modern carburetor adjustments. It is absolutely essential, for proper adjustment, that the temperature of the engine be that at which it normally operates. There is nothing like the indicator to tell this fact. Motorists who do their own carburetor work should bear this in mind.

CORD

By E. L. CORD

ALTHOUGH we have released no advertisements the general public is aware of this new car's approach, has diversified ideas about it, and has built up extreme expectations. Auburn appreciates the widespread interest in this original type of automobile, but feels we have a responsibility unique in all automobile history. No other manufacturer has ever been in this same position. Auburn has the industry's first production car of its kind, has a favorably expectant world wide audience, and has the exclusive opportunity to truthfully make claims never before possible for any other motor car.

Therefore this earnest attempt to clarify the situation.

We will not introduce the new Cord front-drive car as a "radical revolution."

It creates an entirely new place never before occupied by any other car. We will offer it as an addition to our other products, being priced between our complete line of Auburn and Duesenberg cars.

It is Auburn's contribution to automotive progress; it is leadership in the latest automotive development; it is a hitherto unavailable type of car that creates a new place of its own.

But we will not promote it as "marvelous," "sensational" or as, "at last the perfect automobile."

In one respect the Cord is like every other automobile ever built—it is a mechanical vehicle. It differs basicly in the application of power to the front wheels instead of the rear wheels.

Although we have no apologies to make for its design, structural strength and efficiency, neither do we claim infallibility, which everyone knows is impossible in any mechanism.

We do assure you it is extraordinarily well built. It is not an untried experiment. It can render you a quarter of a million miles of safer, easier and more economical service. And it has many exclusive advantages that have a decisive appeal to more people than we even anticipated. But, do not expect a miracle!

It is a certainty that the front-drive type of car has come to stay. It is equally certain that other progressive manufacturers must follow Auburn's leadership. And it is also certain that the manufacture of rear-drive cars will continue.

Auburn enjoys priceless advantages through being first, through having a free field in which to try and select all methods, the pick of all engineers such as Harry A. Miller, and unhurried years for exhaustive research and development. The result is a product that is attracting unprecedented orders before it is even put on the market.

Therefore, we hope this advanced statement will counteract exaggerated rumors. The Cord car is not built for speed. It can not do the impossible. It is not "the coming of the millennium." It is a man-made machine with many exclusive advantages that may or may not appeal to you.

We invite you to find out for yourself when this new Cord Front Drive is soon introduced.

Chrysler Brings Out Three New Improved Sixes

Four Speeds Forward, Bigger Engines and Many Other Improvements.

The introduction of three new lines of six-cylinder cars bearing his name is announced by Walter P. Chrysler.

The three new Chryslers have been christened the "77," the "70" and the "66." The "77" has a price range from $1595 to $1795; the "70" from $1245 to $1395, and the "66," the first six under $1000 to bear the Chrysler name, from $985 to $1065.

Many noteworthy engineering advancements have been embodied in the new cars. Among the wholly original features introduced by the "77" and "70" are these:

The multi-range gear shift, an entirely new principle in power control; the synchronized power system, engineered as a unit from radiator to rear axle; downdraft fuellization, a scientific advancement in carburetion; larger and more powerful engines, for increased speed and wider performance possibilities; paraflex spring suspension and chimney-type rubber shock insulators, affording the last word in comfort; architonic bodies, new in the science of their design and construction; new smartness and style that transcend all existing ideals and new interior luxury and elegance with true Chrysler finesse. These outstanding features are in every sense of the word original and make their appearance for the first time in the new "77" and "70."

The "architonic" principle of body construction is an exclusive Chrysler development that revolutionizes the science of body building. This structure, braced and rebraced with pillars and joints of welded steel, possesses immeasurably increased safety. Longitudinal and lateral shifting action of the body have been reduced to a minimum, and the elimination of metal contacts and the use of hardwood throughout disposes of all annoying squeaks, rattles and rumbles.

The new synchronized power system, completely balanced and engineered as a unit from the radiator to the rear axle, attains the effect of one scientifically unified mechanism. All models are powered with engines of the famous Chrysler silver dome principle, which gives high compression power with ordinary fuel. In the "77" and the "70", the large crankshafts are fully counterweighted and supported by seven interchangeable main bearings of generous size. They have aluminum alloy pistons with Invar-struts and tongue-and-groove piston rings, a rigidly webbed crankcase, full-force feed lubrication, impulse neutralizer, oil filter and scores of other refinements.

The "77" develops a maximum of 93 horsepower at the brake. It has a bore of three and three-eighths, a stroke of five inches and displacement of 268.4 cubic inches. The "70" has a bore of three and one-eighth, a stroke of four and three-quarters inches and displacement at 218.6 cubic inches. It develops 75 horsepower.

An important element of the synchronized power system, the exclusive Chrysler-built multi-range gear shift, unlike any other gear shift in use today, Chrysler engineers say, renders the control of a car far more simple, more effective and safer than ever before. It has four forward speed ranges: heavy duty—starting—accelerating and driving range. The accelerating range permits unequalled pick-up and hill climbing, while the driving range is a direct drive and allows high car speed with comparably slow engine speed. The shifting arrangement is standard, the starting, accelerating and driving range positions being located the same as first, second and high of the ordinary transmission. The heavy duty range is intended solely for very hard pulling, in deep mud or sand. It is latched out of the shifting quadrant by a strong spring and is located to the left of the starting range.

Chrysler presents the revolutionary downdraft carburetion, a principle of fuelization new in automobile engineering. Airplanes have had a somewhat similar system. The carburetor is mounted above the engine instead of at the side, permitting the fuel to flow downward, aided by the force of gravity. In the updraft type the fuel mixture must always be lifted against gravity. This simple, fundamental difference produces an amazing gain in horsepower. The fuel is brought to the carburetor by means of a fuel pump which has been developed to a remarkable degree by Chrysler engineers. A fuel pump, equipped with a strainer, operates in unison with the engine, insuring a positive, adequate and uniform supply under all engine loads and speeds and under all operating conditions, particularly noticeable in hilly and mountainous regions. The Chrysler downdraft carburetion is not to be confused, its designers say, with downdraft manifolding, a substitute for the system now introduced by Chrysler.

In the "77" and the "70" the Chrysler decarbonizer employs a new fluid "Carbosolve," which eliminates the deposits that cause carbon "ping" in the engine.

Contributing to the greater riding comfort of Chrysler cars, is another striking advance—the paraflex spring suspension, designed to absorb torsional strains, control rebounds at the cars' extremities by checking the impulses of unsprung weight, and deaden road impacts before they can be imparted to the car body. An added feature are chimney-type rubber shock insulators in place of metal shackles, doing away with all need of lubrication and adjustment.

Externally, the new Chrysler models have no counterpart in present day design. A higher and wider radiator makes the frontal area more impressive than ever. Beautifully molded "air wing" fenders have arcs that are in perfect accord with the arched tie rod, curved bumper and graceful slender-profile radiator shell. The large headlamps are of new design. Attractive sconce-type lamps are located on the front pillars just below the windshield visor. All bright work is chromium plated.

Viewed from the side, the design is equally individualistic. Pennon louvers, entirely new and modern in conception and a refreshing and spirited decorative touch to the side of the hood. In outline, they adhere to the general contour of the fenders, contributing further to the harmony of the assembly. The attractive appearance of the hood is further enhanced by an embossed V-shaped section, painted to contrast with the surrounding portions of the hood. No cowl band is used on the "77" and "70" bodies in order that the full "streamline" effect may be maintained. On the town and crown sedans a dashing touch is added by a chromium-plated girdle band extending completely around the bodies, parallel to the belt molding. Chromium plating also appears in another new feature—the architraves—just inside the "77" window reveals and also in the rims of the wheels and along the edge of the running boards. Over the arched tie-rods are chrome numerals designating the model number, —"66", "70", or "77."

On the "77" and "70" roadsters, the rear deck has an attractive sweep based on the contour of the rear fenders. On the "77" roadster and phaeton, a special depressed molding, flanked on each side by delicate striping, emphasizes the long, rakish appearance of these bodies.

A feature of all models is the new, scientifically tilted and internally operated non-glare windshield, of the ventilating type.

The body types available in the new "77" include three sedan models—the royal, town and crown sedan. There are four coupes—royal, crown, business and convertible, and the open models are the five-passenger phaeton and roadster with rumble seat. The "70" model has six body styles—royal and business coupes, royal sedan, brougham, phaeton and roadster. A variety of colors, with upholstery to match, are available.

Thrilling Trip to Los Angeles Described by St. Louis Woman and there could be no more traveling.

After absorbing as much of its beauty as possible, I traveled on, determined to go through the Cave of the Winds. I did not know that it was located at the summit of a very high mountain and cliff. Before I knew it, I was in Williams Canyon. The road was narrow and steep and I was very much in the mood to turn around and go back. A sign on the road informed me that I must "Keep on Going—This Is a One-way Road—You will not meet cars from the opposite direction—It is a violation of the law to turn on this road." My mind was made up. I went up and up, and up, around right-angle curves, and more curves, on a narrow road that had no ending. One dare not lose their nerve at a time like this—it would mean certain death.

About every 20 feet another sign would inform one "Keep On Going"—it is a violation of the law to turn around on this road." I gasped for breath as I looked over the edge of the cliff, at the depth below, and the high mountains around me. I finally reached the summit and the entrance to the "Cave of the Winds." A guide stepped up and informed me he was just taking a party and would be glad to make me one of them. I paid my dollar and went through the cave.

A wonderful formation of underground passages of solid rock, twisting and winding through many miles, the ceiling a mass of icicle formations from the dripping of water, which, because of its lime and other chemical properties had become a solid rock formation resembling crystal. The cave had two levels—the upper and lower. The guide turned off the electric lights which left us in impenetrable darkness. The scientist and chemist would find it very interesting indeed, although any one can appreciate it. The entire time spent in the cave I was wondering how I would ever descend that almost perpendicular road, the "Serpentine Drive"—a very suitable name, as it turned at right angles about every 10 feet, and was as steep an incline as can be imagined.

I started down bravely but I had not gone far before I had to put on the emergency brake as well as the clutch and the regular brake. With all this precautionary treatment I could not control the car, which plunged ahead at a faster rate of speed than was wise or necessary. I became badly frightened and jumped out of the car, having enough foresight to turn the wheels of the car inward so that the car in rolling would attempt to climb the mountainside, whereas had I turned the wheels in the opposite direction, or left them straight, it would have plunged over the brink—my little Ford, with all my worldly goods endowed!

I was so nervous that I trembled all over. I walked down a stretch to see how far I had to go. I could not see the end, just more and more serpentine turns ahead of me. To make things worse, the road slanted downward on the inner side, probably to prevent cars tumbling over the side of the cliff. I decided I could not desert my little ship and climbed in again. Finally, we made another turn, the car beyond my control and seemingly as nervous and upset as I was. The right angle curve, together with the road sloping downward, almost turned the car over. I got out again. I did not know what to do. I was completely unnerved.

After an eternity, as it seemed, a large Packard machine driven by a cowboy and filled with women sightseers came down the road and saw my plight. One woman said, "Are you from Missouri?" and I said, "You bet I am!" She said, "Well, I am, too." The driver volunteered to drive very slowly in front of me so that if my car started to roll down the hill it would strike them in the back. In this fashion, I completed the trip down the hill, a distance of five miles, at least, I should judge. When I reached flat, solid ground again no one will ever realize my emotions. I thanked the cowboy heartily and apologized profusely to the Ford which saw me triumphantly through!

From here, we went to the Seven Falls. I took every precaution against entering another canyon as innocently as I had entered the treacherous Williams Canyon. I passed through a beautiful canyon bordered on both sides by rocks called the "Herculean Rocks" because of their height and width. It was a beautiful, winding thoroughfare leading to the falls. The falls, one above the other, fall down the mountainside of solid rock. It is quite a climb to the top of the falls and too much for most people. I should judge the height is about 2000 feet.

After an afternoon of sightseeing and miraculous escape from death as I honestly believe, I returned to the hotel exhausted, but rejoicing that I had seen some of nature's most beautiful handiwork.

The ride from Colorado Springs was made in the face of a terrific wind that made a roaring sound about the car—a wind that almost threw my arm out of joint when I ventured to hold it out. Much of the road was upgrade and it was a long, hard pull, the radiator boiling all the time. I had my brakes tightened at Trinidad, and looked forward with no little anxiety to the ride through "Rayon Pass" which I was told would be my most hazardous mountain pass. After my experience at Williams Canyon, it was an unwholesome contemplation. However, as the knights of old, I kept up my spirits bold and bore bravely onward—remembering that I, as a Missourian, could not falter. It was not nearly so hazardous a drive as Williams Canyon and I enjoyed the beautiful sunset from the height of the mountain. I had the road to myself, practically, which was also a blessing, as it is the meeting of cars from the opposite direction just as one is turning an abrupt curve, that is somewhat jarring. As I came down the pass, I smelt something burning which, as I mused, resembled the odor of the delicious fudge I used to make in the days of old, ere I had ever seen a mountain or climbed a mountain pass. At the end of the pass, I was told by a mechanic that my brakes were burnt up.

I started through the prairieland of New Mexico at dusk. Not a car in sight nor a human being anywhere. I rode on until about 10 p. m., when I saw the lights of a village in the distance—joy of joys—and knew that I would soon be within its friendly portals. I put up for the night at Springer, N. M., at a friendly hotel owned by a woman. She was amazed that I, a lone woman, was driving to the coast and gave me the best room she had. A cozy fire crackled in the grate (the night was chill), and a group of traveling men sat in the living room exchanging yarns about Indians.

The next day I passed through my first genuine Mexican village, the houses made of mud bricks, crude affairs. I passed through Mexican and Indian villages where life is in the most primitive stage of civilization. One can hardly realize that such extremes of civilization exist within the distance of a day's travel. I was delighted when I reached Santa Fe, after traveling all day over rough roads, through mountains and deserts. This most unique and historic town caught my fancy completely. I visited the Fred Harvey house, which is a beautiful piece of architecture, built in Spanish style. I parked by a curb and an old lady asked me if I would like for her to show me the interesting sights and I said I would be delighted. She proudly boasted that she had lived in Santa Fe for 21 years and that she thought it the finest place in the world. She guided me through narrow winding streets, resembling alleys, to the oldest church in America, where an old "Brother" greeted us and showed us through.

We went to the artists' colony, which consists of a dirty, crooked street bearing the beautiful name of "The Street of the Mountain Sun." Here were the modest dwellings of some of the world's most noted writers, painters and sculptors — Mary Austin one of them. Their homes are built on the old style of one-story Spanish architecture which my companion told me was being preserved. None of them boasted any yard to speak of.

The next morning I left El Paso and started over the deserts of Arizona. There was sand, sand, hills of sand, mountains of sand. The road was bumpy and I could hardly hold the car on it—a Ford is most too light for these roads. The hot wind blew continuously causing the radiator to sputter and boil. I traveled through Arizona, up hill and down, through sand and clay, until I came to the "Painted Desert," a beautiful desert of many shades of buff and orange, gray and green; one looks down from a high bluff at the panorama of various colors.

From there I traveled a short distance to the Petrified Forest, which is some distance from the main road. This barren and desolate region seems to be hundreds of years old. The ground is an ash color, and there are hills of this same ash-colored substance. On this surface stumps of petrified trees stand upright or lie flat. Some are the entire trunks of trees and others just a small branch or stump. All are solid rock and the inside of the trunks and stumps are many-hued—green, red, emerald, yellow, resembling precious stones. A very interesting and mystifying sight—barren waste and lifeless soil.

I drove through many miles of Arizona desert where the ground was a red clay color and the bluffs of solid rock of the same shade. The green shrubbery which sprung up in spots against this red background, made a very beautiful landscape. That night I arrived at Williams, Ariz., which can boast only one good hotel; it seems incongruous that this forsaken town should stand at the gateway of one of the greatest wonders of the world, the Grand Canyon. The next morning I started out bright and early for the Grand Canyon. It is 60 miles north of Williams and the roads are not good.

About 30 miles from Williams my engine began to smoke to an alarming degree. I had to stop, as I was afraid the car would burn up. I discovered that there wasn't a drop of water in my radiator, and I had none with me. The realization of why is a desert came upon me—no water to be seen anywhere. There was nothing I could do but wait for a car to pass by. Several cars passed before one finally came which had water to spare. What a precious commodity water is in its absence! We continued our journey to the canyon. I stood at the brink of the canyon and gazed—a mighty spectacle stretched out before me. I stood in an observation tower when an Indian stepped up to me and asked if I would like to look through the telescope. I said I would. Proudly he led me to it and watched me as I looked into the abysmal depths of the canyon. Proudly, as much as to say, "It is my canyon and I am proud of it." Never will I forget my first view of the canyon. I hope to return and spend several days. Such beauty and strength, such vastness, such dignity and majesty—it is hard to comprehend and more difficult to describe. I once read that what we really are comes out at the brink of the canyon.

I left Williams about 4 p. m. and 30 miles out in the desert I developed a punctured tire. It was nearly nightfall. I was alone in the desert with a flat tire. I changed my tire, the first time I had ever done so. It took me about three-quarters of an hour. I hoped it would be fastened on tight, but I didn't know. It had grown dark and I continued on my journey. Something resembling an alligator stared up at me from the road; I do not know what it was—someone since told me it was an "ant-eater." I am skeptical.

Then I passed an Indian village and still further on a blazing campfire surrounded with gypsies who stared at me. Further along a herd of wild horses stood in the road and still further on my headlights revealed a black snake in the road, coiled like a serpentine drive, its head high above the ground. It seemed to say "Greetings from Arizona!" I fled past it at a fast rate. To my chagrin, I saw I had to go over another mountain pass. The lights of a car creeping along from the opposite direction warned me that the driving was perilous. Fortunately the tire I had put on did not roll off and I arrived safely at the next village—the friendly lights of a village in a world of unknown darkness—well, it was a happy moment.

The following day I arose at 6 a. m. and rode 300 miles over the roughest roads of the entire trip, to San Bernardino, Cal. At Oatman, Ariz., a large, cruel sign tells the weary traveler that he is about to climb the steepest mountain pass on "U. S. 66." I groaned. After all I had been through! It was true. Barring Williams Canyon it was the worst yet. About 8000 feet high—and then one must come down again. With front wheel brakes only, it is a dreadful ordeal. Needless to say I arrived at the bottom safely or I would not be writing about it. The road was all bumps from Oatman to Victorville. I passed a flock of sheep without a shepherd. There were "mamma" sheep and "baby" sheep—the tiny sheep were adorable. I had to stop and wait for them to pass, but I was glad to extend this courtesy of the road.

The ride from Victorville to San Bernardino, Cal., was made after night and it was necessary to ride through the Long and steep Cagean Pass at night. Searchlights flash hither and thither, emphasizing the black and bottomless depths. The road winds and descends for many miles (I entered the pass at the summit). The p. s must be 10 miles long. The roads on the California Cagean Pass were paved, while the roads on other mountain passes are ungraded, and not nearly so wide.

I arrived at San Bernardino at midnight. After sleeping soundly I left for Los Angeles, arriving there at 8 p. m., Monday, June 10, having left St. Louis Monday noon, May 20.

My journey was at an end. It was a thrilling and happy experience.

A Luxurious V-Type Eight Priced for the American Family

f. o. b. factory, Lansing, Michigan. Spare Tire and Bumpers Extra.

CONSIDER THE DELIVERED PRICE

Consider the delivered price as well as the list price when comparing automobile values . . . Viking delivered prices include only reasonable charges for delivery and financing.

Now the American family has a motor car of medium price that combines the advantages of ninety-degree, V-type eight-cylinder performance—the roominess, comfort, and riding qualities that result from generous size—and the outstanding style and craftsmanship of bodies by Fisher . . . the new Viking.

The Viking is in no sense an ordinary car. It offers a principle of engineering, a type of performance, and a degree of luxury entirely new in the medium-price field.

The Viking power plant, for example, is of ninety-degree, V-type eight-cylinder design—the type employed in the very finest cars—and adds desirable advancements to the fundamental advantages of this principle.

This remarkable new engine develops 81 horsepower. The power flow is smooth, effortless and constant—more than ample for any need. Top speed goes far beyond the requirements of every day driving. Response to the throttle is incredibly swift and sure, both in getaway from a standing start and in acceleration at the higher speeds.

In addition to its remarkable efficiency, the new Viking V-eight engine is noteworthy for its simplicity, accessibility, rigidity, and compactness. The new down-draft manifolding results in equi-distant, gravity-assisted distribution of the fuel vapor—an important factor in engine efficiency. The horizontal placement of the valves is entirely new in automotive engine design, and results in exceptional simplicity, quietness, and rigidity. Advanced lubrication and cooling also contribute materially to the efficiency of the new Viking engine.

Engine performance alone would set the Viking apart from other cars in its field. But every detail of chassis and body construction shows skill in design and manufacture. The chassis incorporates every desirable factor of safety, durability and road performance. The bodies are of Fisher combination hardwood-and steel construction—assuring great strength and long life.

And the new Viking is as gratifying in appearance as it is in mechanical excellence. Beautifully proportioned, with graceful hood and sweeping full-crown fenders, it is a handsome, smartly-tailored car. Interiors are spacious, comfortable, and furnished in exquisite taste. Upholsteries are rich in quality and pleasing in texture. The wide, deep-cushioned seats are inclined at just the proper angle to afford armchair comfort. And four Lovejoy hydraulic shock absorbers, synchronized with the springs, give further assurance of the restful riding ease which is so typical of fine car luxury.

In every way, the new Viking is worthy of the most discriminating motorist. It provides brilliant performance, distinguished appearance, and travel luxury of the highest order—all at a medium price. Come in. Drive the new Viking Eight. Let us explain its engineering features. Careful examination and comparison will tell you that no other car in the medium-price field offers the American family such worthwhile advantages.

OLDSMOBILE SIX
—the Fine Car of Low Price—continues to win ever greater success throughout the nation. Companion car to the new Viking Eight, and, equally outstanding in engineering and value at its price, it offers a wide choice of body styles and equipment combinations, ranging from $875 up, f. o. b. factory, Lansing, Mich.

33 SCOUTS TO HIKE 80 MILES THIS WEEK

Charles S. Pollock, Their Leader, Will Accompany Them to Irondale.

An 80-mile hike, from St. Louis to the Irondale Reservation, the official summer camp of the Boy Scout Council, will be made this week by Scoutmaster Charles S. Pollock and 33 scouts of Troops 103 and 155. The hikers will leave early tomorrow morning, and, averaging nearly 15 miles a day, expect to reach Irondale Saturday.

The hikers will cover the entire distance on foot. Food and baggage will be carried ahead of the scouts in a small truck belonging to Troop 155. Following a schedule the truck will halt at selected camping spots each evening, and the scouts, when they arrive, will find the evening meal already prepared.

Highway 61 will be followed part of the way, with camps being made at Imperial Monday, Platten Creek Tuesday, at the intersection of Highway 21 and 25 Wednesday, Bonne Terre Thursday, and Elvira Friday. Irondale will be reached Saturday, and camp made on private property until the scouts' action at camp opens Monday. Swimming facilities are available at all but one of the camps.

This will be the fourth successive year that Troop 155 has made the hike, the idea being originated by Pollock in 1926 as something that no other troop had ever done. Pollock became scoutmaster of 155 only last winter, but immediately laid plans to take both troops on the hike this summer. So far as other troop has attempted the hike.

The scouts from Troop 155 who are planning to go are Junior Assistant Martin Sheets and Dick Pease, who will have charge of the truck; Kent Myers, William Gall, Walter Bray, John Poulos, Harry Schulz, Ted Schmidt, Baker Alexander, Gordon Pulliam, Joseph Traxler, Bland Stubblefield, Stacy Weaks, Joseph Branham, Preston Williams, Howard Williams, Dewey Nax, Stanley Dampier, Robert Lyons, Leland Lyons, Charles Maquis and Dick Briell. Troop 149 Allen Trumbull, John Veith, Theodas Kirk, Frank Kirk, Jim Johnston, Carew Sanders, Charles Hahnel, Dick Murray, Joe Pelli and Jack Schrader. Charles Burgess of Webster Groves 14 will also make the hike, while Charles Wilkie and Dick Yore of Troop 102 will join the hikers at Irondale.

Navy's Air Racer Tests Delayed

By the Associated Press.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Aug. 10.—A heat propeller blade today caused Lieut. Al Williams, navy speed flyer, to postpone a test flight in an air racer which he intends to enter in the Schneider Cup race if it proves satisfactory. Williams made the taxi test of his new craft yesterday, sending it over the water at 186 miles an hour, just four miles an hour below its taking-off speed.

Scout H. Woolberg was elected Senior Patrol Leader of Troop 3 of the Grace Church, at the last meeting. He was installed in his new office immediately. Scout Bill Miles passed the handicraft test, Scout Fred Pomeroy passed judging, and Scout Ramon Russel the use of the knife and ax test at the meeting. Most of the other Scouts worked on tests. Scoutmaster Simon gave a talk on "Scouting and Health."

A banquet to award badges and prizes for passing tests during the summer was given by Troop 69 at the St. Elizabeth's Church last week. The troop committee and drum and bugle corps were guests of honor for the evening. Scout Raymond Holly was given a prize for being first in a Campers' Saving Club contest, while Senior Patrol Leader Martin Bowles was reappointed to that office as a reward for achievement during the last months.

Scoutmaster C. E. Sampson and Assistant Scoutmaster Dixon left for New York immediately after the banquet was over. They plan to return before the next meeting of the troop.

Instruction and practice in first aid, with particular emphasis on lifts and carries, featured the last meeting of Troop 20 at the Holy Family School. Tests were worked on, and a number of games were played. Three recruits joined Troop 20 during July: Bernard Weber, Paul Weber and Joseph McMichael.

Sixteen boys attended the first meeting of a new scout troop which is being organized by Scoutmaster A. Kalinowsky at the St. Louis Methodist Church. The scoutmaster expects to put in his application for a charter within the next two weeks.

The scouts of Troop 66 took an automobile hike to their camp site near Barnhart, Mo., a week ago yesterday afternoon. Contests were held in water-boiling, wood chopping, and fire building, and scout pace. The scouts also did some swimming. A treasure hunt was held after supper, which was cooked over open fires by the scouts. Donald Urquhart is now scribe of Troop 66.

Roosevelt Record-Breaker Displayed

Roosevelt "8" Non-Stop Sedan Exhibited Here

Through special arrangement with the Marmon factory, one of the Roosevelt straight eight sedans which participated in the recent record-breaking nonstop endurance run on the Indianapolis speedway was placed on exhibition Wednesday in the showroom of the Archer-Mann Motor Co., local Marmon-Roosevelt distributer.

This Roosevelt sedan established a nonstop engine record of 392 hours and 30 minutes, having started 48 hours behind the sister sedan that made a new nonstop automotive record of 440 hours and 30 minutes.

The Roosevelt exhibited here made only one stop during its 16 days and eight and one-half hours running, tire trouble causing this break in the run. Its engine, however, continued uninterruptedly from the time of the car's official start.

The sedan was accompanied by one of the two refueling or "mother" cars used to supply fuel, oil, water and driver relief to the record-breakers.

Claude Cunard, well-known automobile race driver and one of the Marmon testers who helped the Roosevelts make their outstanding record, was on hand during the exhibit to answer questions regarding the nonstop endurance run and to relate personal experiences in the speedway test.

A moving picture showing the nonstop test and including unique "shots" of refueling, reoiling, changing drivers and other outstanding features of the run was shown in the local Marmon-Roosevelt salesroom and may be viewed without obligation.

Among other interesting features of the local exhibit will be a comparison of refueling on the ground and refueling in the air, and a display of equipment used to record the run to the split second. A complete photographic record of the test was likewise on display. The showing concludes tonight.

Charles S. Pollock, Their Leader, Will Accompany Them to Irondale.

An 80-mile hike, from St. Louis to the Irondale Reservation, the official summer camp of the Boy Scout Council, will be made this week by Scoutmaster Charles S. Pollock and 33 scouts of Troops 102 and 155. The hikers will leave early tomorrow morning, and, averaging nearly 15 miles a day, expect to reach Irondale Saturday.

The hikers will cover the entire distance on foot. Food and baggage will be carried ahead of the scouts in a small truck belonging to Troop 155. Following a schedule the truck will halt at selected camping spots each evening, and the scouts, when they arrive, will find the evening meal already prepared.

Highway 61 will be followed part of the way, with camps being made at Imperial Monday, Platten Creek Tuesday, at the intersection of Highway 21 and 25 Wednesday, Bonne Terre Thursday, and Elvins Friday. Irondale will be reached Saturday, and camp made on private property until the scouts' section at camp opens Monday. Swimming facilities are available at all but one of the camps.

This will be the fourth successive year that Troop 155 has made the hike, the idea being originated by Pollock in 1926 as something that no other troop had ever done. Pollock became scoutmaster of 102 only last winter, but immediately laid plans to take both troops on the hike this summer. So far no other troop has attempted the hike.

Navy's Air Racer Tests Delayed.

By the Associated Press.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Aug. 10.—A bent propeller blade today caused Lieut. Al Williams, navy speed flyer, to postpone a test flight of an air racer which he intends to enter in the Schneider Cup races, if it proves satisfactory. Williams made the taxi test of his bullet-like craft yesterday, sending it over the water at 106 miles an hour, just four miles an hour less than its taking-off speed.

MODEL AIRPLANE FLYING CONTEST FRIDAY AT PARK

Scouts and Leaders Between 16 and 21 Will Be Eligible to Compete.

A model airplane flying contest for Boy Scouts and leaders between the ages of 16 and 21 will be held at baseball diamond No. 6 in Forest Park next Friday evening at 6 o'clock. The contest will be held under the auspices of the St. Louis Public School Playgrounds Association, which will also conduct another contest for playground boys.

Contestants will be permitted to fly either planes of their own make or one of 150 models available at different playgrounds for the free use of entrants. The only requirement is that every scout entering must register at a playground some time this week.

Silver cups will be given to the winner and for second place. The winner also will have a chance to compete for the grand prize of both classes; a trip to Louisville, Ky., to represent St. Louis at a national model airplane flying contest the latter part of this month. The exact date for the national meet has not as yet been selected, according to local scout officials, but it is planned to have every large city in the country represented.

Scoutmaster L. John Lewis of Troop 198 will be in charge of the scouts at the Forest Park contest.

SCOUTS WANTED AS USHERS

Call for Volunteers to Serve at Playgrounds Festival.

A general call for Boy Scout volunteers to act as ushers, field police and athletic event aids at the annual Playground Festival of the Public School Playgrounds, Aug. 24, was issued by local Boy Scout headquarters last Friday. The festival will be held at the Public School Stadium, Kingshighway and St. Louis avenue, from 1 to 6 o'clock in the afternoon.

As about 25,000 persons are expected to attend the event, those in charge have asked for as many scouts as possible. All scoutmasters in the area have been asked to canvass their troops for volunteers. Scouts intending to serve should report at the stadium in uniform at noon, to be assigned to duty.

PLAYGROUND PET SHOW DRAWS MANY DOGS, CAT AND TURTLE

175 Children Bring Entries to Hamilton School Exhibit.

The pet show of the Hamilton School Playground Friday was more successful than even its promoters had expected. With 175 children in attendance, a neighborhood collection of dogs, one cat and a turtle were exhibited.

Derrell Iskiwitch, youthful judge, awarded first prize to a great Dane dog, Duke, owned by Jean Noble; second prize to Patsy, an English bull pup, the pet of Evelyn Vandenburg; third prize to another Patsy, owned by Catherine Harper; and fourth prize to Rags, the entry of Berton Iskiwitch.

Rags, either disgruntled over the awards or with just the plain longing of a dog-heart beset by an inferiority complex, started in to thrash Duke, the first prize winner, and broke up the show.

Victor McLaglen at Fox Tuesday.

Hupmobile Six In $1000 Class Is Announced

Quick Acceleration Features New Motor; Three Factories Modernized.

DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 10.—A new six-cylinder Hupmobile in the $1000 price class is announced by the Hupp Motor Car Corporation of Detroit and Cleveland. The new car marks the entry of the Hupp Corporation into this lower and more popular price field.

While thus broadening its field, after 21 years of continuous manufacture of higher priced cars only, Hupp also announces greatly expanded facilities for the production of its other models.

The new Hupmobile six in the $1000 price class, towards which the company has been working for a number of years, has been made possible through the acquisition last fall of three new plants. Two of these are in Cleveland and one is in Fostoria, O. These plants have been completely modernized and retooled so that the Ohio facilities of the corporation are adequate for the manufacture of the new model.

The new six is wholly Hupmobile-built. Some of its outstanding features include plenty of leg room, generous seat room, a power plant that is an advance even over the Century six motor, new type of controls, and that modern beauty for which Hupmobiles are noted.

The engine is not a new and untried engine, but is the same engine, redesigned and refined to provide even greater poyer and acceleration, that has created new standards of performance for thousands of owners of the Century six Hupmobile.

The performance of the new car is noteworthy. With amazing quickness it reaches and maintains 70 miles an hour. Under the most exacting timing, the car has accelerated from five to 25 miles an hour in seven seconds, and from five to 50 miles an hour in 20 seconds. Throughout the entire speed range the constancy of its acceleration rate is marked. Engineering tests of the new car, extending over a period of months, have disclosed a surprising ability to drive hour after hour at high speeds.

The engine of the new 1930 Hupmobile six is of the L-head type with certain constructional advantages which releases new floods of power and make possible its outstanding acceleration. It develops 70 horsepower from its 211.6 cubic inches of displacement.

The engine has an unusually heavy crankshaft—76½ pounds. Extensive study has evolved a system of counterweights which not only assures vibrationless operation of the statically and dynamically balanced crankshaft, but eliminates the amplification of motor noises and their transmission to occupants of the car.

All lights are controlled by an instrument panel switch. The dimmer switch is operated by the driver's left foot. The control button is located on the floor board to the left of the clutch pedal.

The instrument panel is indirectly lighted. Parking lights are mounted on the crown of the front fenders and all lamps conform in design. The rear light and stop light are combined.

Easy gear shifting is a feature of this type clutch. The demands for quick getaway in traffic are met by the ability to rapidly shift from one gear to the next higher or downward from a higher to a lower gear.

The steering wheel itself is the three-spoked safety type, to provide easy and safe handling of the car. The wheel is of hard rubber with a steel core. The horn button is located in the center of the steering wheel.

A feature of the plain tube carburetor is a new and exclusive device to provide an increased spurt of fuel for quick getaway in traffic. A small pump is actuated when the accelerater pedal is suddenly depressed, delivering an extra charge of fuel directly to the intake manifold.

The cooling system employs a cellular type radiator and a centrifugal water pump which is driven by a V-type adjustable belt. Large water jacket space is built around each cylinder, cylinder head, spark plug seat, valve seat, and valve stem to enable these units to quickly dissipate their heat. Water temperature is regulated by a thermostat.

The electrical system of the new 1930 Hupmobile six is of exceptionally large capacity. The 100-ampere hour battery is well insulated.

The distributer is driven by a transverse shaft from the cam shaft. It is notably simple and compact and is fitted with a semi-automatic and manual spark control. The ignition lock is conveniently located on the instrument panel. Shutting off the engine automatically locks the switch.

The starting motor is oversized. The starter switch is conveniently located on the left side of the dash.

The bodies of the new 1930 six are built in the company's Cleveland plants. They are of the composite wood and steel type. The lumber is thoroughly seasoned hardwood. It is reinforced at every point of stress and strain. The rear panel of the new Hupmobile body is a single unit. Water cannot enter the body at the belt line and rust open the seams.

Due to the type of frame and body used, the latter has been lowered and decreased overall height obtained. Yet neither interior headroom nor road clearance has been sacrificed. The interior room of this new car is even greater than its immediate predecessor.

Narrow steel corner posts and long windows increase the range of vision. The smart French r of is a characteristic safety feature.

The new nonglare, tilt-type windshield is used on the new Hupmobile. It is easily opened or closed by the convenient mono-control crank. Glare from the lights of approaching vehicles is eliminated by the angled position of the windshield. Ordinary ventilation for the driving compartment is provided by a cowl ventilator.

Both front and rear fenders are of the heavy one-piece "drawn" type. Front fenders are elongated in a sweeping line. Rear fenders are arched, with a slight flare at the rear skirt.

A distinctively short running board is bound with an aluminum beading. The front splash apron is smartly curved between the chassis rails to cover front spring ends. The rear sheet metal is extended in a skirted effect to conceal fuel tank, spring ends and bumper attachments.

Pierce-Arrow Announces Two De Luxe Sedans

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 10.—Two new special types of sedans are announced by Pierce-Arrow as an addition to the line of straight eights which has tripled the demand for Pierce-Arrow this year.

"In creating these special cars, we felt that something unusual was due the thousands of people who during the first six months of this year were unable to obtain delivery of our new straight eight," said George E. Willis, vice president in charge of sales. "At times our waiting list has been 2000 names long, despite the fact that we are building more than twice as many cars as we ever built before."

The two new special models are the de luxe five-passenger sedan and the de luxe club sedan. Each is of the 133-inch wheelbase group.

With new and unsual colorings, and special smart exterior equipment, the new cars present the most striking appearance of any of the straight eight group.

Wire wheels, distinguished by the large chrome Pierce-Arrow hubs, lend swank to the design. The two spares are carried in the fenders. Wood wheels are offered also at a slightly lower cost. A special design of hood with door-style ventilators add a distinctive note. At the rear a handsome trunk, containing three suitcases, provides ample luggage space. Trunk and spare tires are lacquered to match the body color. Tire rims are chrome-plated.

The sedans are being shown by the Western Automobile Co., local Pierce-Arrow distributer.

Low Power in Britain.

Over 65 per cent of all cars registered in Great Britain are less than 14 horsepower. Of all the cars in use in the United Kingdom 26 per cent have 12 horsepower engines, the next largest class being the 14 horsepower car, which constitute 12.6 per cent of the total. Nearly two per cent are seven horsepower or less.

Federal Truck Income

The Federal Motor Truck Co. reports for six months ended June 30, 1929, net income of $315,771.42 after charges, depreciation and taxes. This is equivalent to 63 cents a share for the half year on 499,543 shares of no par value stock.

Prices Reduced By Nash on Two Series "400" Cars

KENOSHA, Wis., Aug. 10.—One of the most important announcements of the current automobile year came today when C. W. Nash, president of the Nash Motors Co., revealed sweeping reductions in the retail prices of the Nash "400" series cars.

Effective Aug. 12, he declared, the motoring public will benefit by reductions on "400" models, ranging as high as $300 a car. This drastic lowering of prices will affect models in the two popular price groups—the Advanced six and the Special six series. The exact reductions on each model will be announced locally.

This big Nash price reduction, which comes as a welcome surprise to motorists the country over following the brilliant success of these new type twin-ignition and advanced design cars, is made primarily to clear the manufacturing decks for the introduction of new Nash models later this year, according to company officials. The new cars, they declare, will carry prices higher than those prevailing before the present reduction. Thus the buying public is offered triple benefits in securing new Nash cars before the arrival of the 1930 models.

Concerning Climbing.

Auburn Reports 100 Per Cent Sales Gain

AUBURN, Ind., Aug. 10.—Showing an increase of nearly 100 per cent over the same month in 1928, Auburn sales totaled [illegible] cars in July, N. E. McDaniel, director of sales, announced. Sales in July, 1928, were 1014.

Total sales of Auburn in the first seven months of 1929 are 14,681 as compared with 9135 in the first six months of 1928.

While the industry as a whole showed an increase of approximately 40 per cent in registrations for the first six months of 1929 over the same period for 1928, Auburn shipments showed an increase of 61.3 per cent, McDaniel pointed out.

Exclusive of Ford, who was not in production in the early months of 1928, the industry's increase was 2.3 per cent.

3,411,151 Autos Manufactured in Last Six Months

Increase of 47 Per Cent Over Same Period in 1928.

By FRED KINGSBURY.

DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 10.—Competition in the automobile industry, as the third quarter of the year gets under way, is very keen and manufacturers and dealers alike are doing their utmost to sell more cars. Indications point to the best third quarter ever experienced in this highly competitive business.

Reports from various sections of the country, received today, point to the fact that sales are much stronger than last year at this time.

During the last six months automobile factories in the United States and Canada manufactured 3,411,151 units. During the same period last year 2,326,509 were built. This is an increase for the present year of 47 per cent.

Manufacturers have been keeping a very close watch of stocks of cars on hand throughout the country and at no time during 1929 have they been excessive. General prosperity has had a great deal to do with automobile purchases and, with farmers throughout the United States and Canada now coming into this market, sales are expected to set a high figure especially during the present month and September. New models which are being introduced also are expected to act as a stimulus to sales.

Sales in foreign countries also must be considered. Latest reports show that the foreign markets have taken about 17 per cent of the motor car output of this country. This, of course, is far ahead of the figures of last year. Experts estimate that by the end of the year total sales of American cars abroad will reach the million mark.

Federal highway signs marking the routes of U. S. highways numbered 40, 50, 61 and 66 through St. Louis will be replaced with new markers within the next three weeks by the Automobile Club of Missouri. The change involves approximately 500 signs.

The change is being made on account of the rusted and worn condition of most of the Federal signs that have been in place for the last three years. Many of the signs have faded to an extent that makes them hard to see.

The old signs will be recurned to the State Highway Department for repainting and reconditioning for use on other sections of the highways involved.

The auto club is also preparing to erect signs on several roads in St. Louis County in the area lying between Kirkwood and Pacific and between the Manchester and Gravois roads. County roads in this area have not been adequately marked in the past

The National Motor Co. of America, with offices in the Arcade Building, will be incorporated next week to manufacture automobile accessories, it is announced by H. Randolph Mudd, attorney for the company. The company will make chiefly a new device for automobiles and airplanes, which has been patented The Ciurascope Castro, as it is called, detects and localizes any ignition or carburation troubles. It has been demonstrated successfully at Lambert Field and has the indorsement of the Cuban Department of War, according to R. Ciura De Castro, one of the inventors. The device was perfected at St. Louis University.

John Cramer, president of Cramer Brothers, Inc., 2616 North Thirteenth street, and Paul Noel, head of the brake department, have completed a study of brake testing in Kansas City, Mo., and Chicago and, as a result, are now able to offer improved brake service.

Several hundred General Motors truck salesmen have been enrolled in the G. M. T. Distinguished Service Club, accord to O. H. Perkins, manager of the General Motors truck branch, 2640 Washington boulevard.

Four new salesmen have been added by the Schnure Motor Co., Buick and Marquette dealer, according to Herman L. Schnure, president. The additions are part of a sales reorganization by the company in line with increased demand for the new Buicks and Marquettes. The salesmen are A. [illegible] Pinnick, F. M. Harris, Floyd Lock and R. F. Turison.

Among the troubles that confront owner who ilks to keep their cars looking as new as possible is the dripping of sap from trees onto the finish. This may be removed by application of cold water on a clean rag, according to Mrs. E. M. Gillham, president of the Missouri-Illinois Co., 4530 Delmar boulevard.

The reason for some drivers getting 12,000 and others only 10,000 miles out of a set of tires, lies in the way they start and stop their cars, according to J. M. Vitt, manager of the Economy Tire Service Co., 3749 Olive street, Fisk tire dealer. Smooth starting and stopping, he says, goes a long way toward saving tires.

Winners of a recent sales contest conducted by Studebaker in the St. Louis area are announced by E. [illegible] Mowry, local branch manager. H. Peters, new car salesman for the Hammond Motor Co. of St. Louis and Granite City, [illegible]

Morgan-Jones Motor Co. Organized to Handle Chryslers

Announcement of the formation of the Morgan-Jones Motor Co. at 4360 Manchester avenue, as a Chrysler dealer, is made by L. M. Stewart, president of Midwest Motors, Inc., Chrysler distributer.

Associated in the new company are J. S. Morgan, president, and E. B. Jones, vice president. Jones was formerly retail sales manager of the Kingchester Motor Co., with which Morgan was also connected.

The complete Chrysler line will be sold, including the Imperial "80," and the new "66," "70" and "77."

A complete service plant will also be operated by the company.

Increase in Drunken Drivers.

The number of intoxicated automobile drivers in New Jersey has increased almost 2000 per cent since prohibition. In the first year that the Volstead act was in force there were 115 intoxicated drivers arrested. This year, it is reported, there will be 2000 or more.

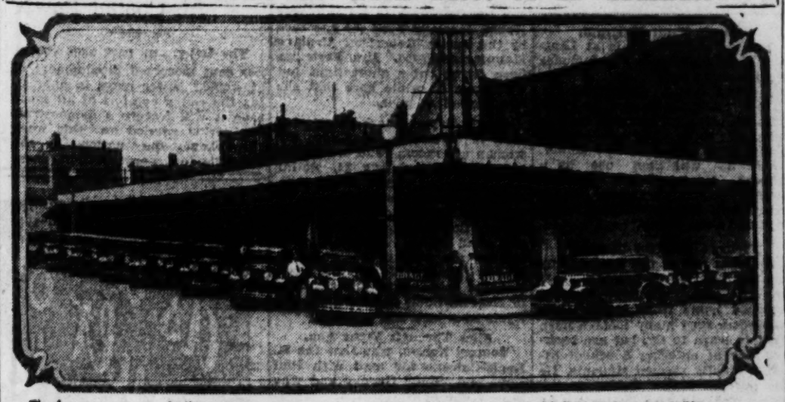
Packard Prices On Eights Are Reduced $290

Among the outstanding events of the past week in the automobile industry was the announcement of the Packard Motor Car Co. that it had reduced the prices on all its standard eight cars $290. The cut followed closely the breaking of one sales record after another by Packard this spring and summer.

In its official announcement the company stated it will introduce new models in the fall and that the price reduction was being made now for that reason. The new models will be offered at prices above those of the current models before the reduction just announced.

Packard, in all its 30 years of history, never before has reached the production and distribution of its product that has developed since the introduction of the standard eight a year ago. With the reduction of $290, the car is offered at the lowest figure Packard has ever placed on any of its eights.

Oliver Cadillac Co. Sells Fleet of 12 Cadillacs



Twelve new custom-built, seven-passenger sedans will be delivered to J. A. McFall & Son, 1900 Chestnut street, this week. This company operates a livery and rental service, featuring high-grade, chauffeur-driven machines. A. J. McMall and his son, Richard, are shown in the photo.

Silver Fleet Chief Is Traffic Expert

AKRON, O., Aug. 10.—In command of a fleet of 15 motor cars that have crammed more than 20,000 miles into a few months of touring, H. R. Schaeffer, commander of the Goodrich Silver Fleet, has become an authority on traffic regulations. Schaeffer is, perhaps, the best informed man in the country today on the variation of motor traffic regulations in relation of the various states to one another. His experience has convinced him that the solution of the traffic problem, as applied to motor cars, exists in a national code of safety regulations.

GENERATORS STARTERS CARBURETORS Repaired All Makes AUTOMOTIVE

Along Auto Row

Federal highway signs marking the routes of U. S. highways numbered 40, 50, 61 and 66 through St. Louis will be replaced with new markers within the next three weeks by the Automobile Club of Missouri. The change involves approximately 800 signs.

The change is being made on account of the rusted and worn condition of most of the Federal signs that have been in place for the last three years. Many of the signs have faded to an extent that makes them hard to see.

The old signs will be recurned to the State Highway Department for repainting and reconditioning for use on other sections of the highways involved.

The auto club is also preparing to erect signs on several roads in St. Louis County in the area lying between Kirkwood and Pacific and between the Manchester and Gravois roads. County roads in this area have not been adequately marked in the past

The National Motor Co. of America, with offices in the Arcade Building, will be incorporated next week to manufacture automobile accessories, it is announced by H. Randolph Mudd, attorney for the company. The company will make chiefly a new device for automobiles and airplanes, which has been patented The Ciurascope Castro, as it is called, detects and localizes any ignition or carburation troubles. It has been demonstrated successfully at Lambert Field and has the indorsement of the Cuban Department of War, according to R. Ciura De Castro, one of the inventors. The device was perfected at St. Louis University.

John Cramer, president of Cramer Brothers, Inc., 2616 North Thirteenth street, and Paul Noel, head of the brake department, have completed a study of brake testing in Kansas City, Mo., and Chicago, and, as a result, are now able to offer improved brake service.

Several hundred General Motors truck salesmen have been enrolled in the G. M. T. Distinguished Service Club, accord to O. H. Perkins, manager of the General Motors truck branch, 2640 Washington boulevard.

Four new salesmen have been added by the Schnure Motor Co., Buick and Marquette dealer, according to Herman L. Schnure, president. The additions are part of a sales reorganization by the company in line with increased demand for the new Buicks and Marquettes. The salesmen are A. W. Pinnick, F. M. Harris, Floyd Lotz and R. F. Turison.

Among the troubles that confront owner who like to keep their cars looking as new as possible is the dripping of sap from trees onto the finish. This may be removed by application of cold water on a clean rag, according to Mrs. E. E. Gillham, president of the Missouri Motorists Co., 4530 Delmar boulevard.

The reason for some drivers getting 12,000 and others only 10,000 miles out of a set of tires, lies in the way they start and stop their cars, according to J. M. Vitt, manager of the Economy Tire Service Co., 2749 Olive street, Fisk tire dealer. Smooth starting and stopping, he says, goes a long way toward saving tires.

Winners of a recent sales contest conducted by Studebaker in the St. Louis area are announced by R. I. Mowry, local branch manager. W. M. Peters, new car salesman for the Hammond Motor Co. of East St. Louis and Granite City, was first in sale of the greatest number of new Studebakers in July, with nine. Ray Fernandes of the Lurie Motor Car Co., distributer here, sold 15 used cars to win first place in this division. Other prizes were awarded in other divisions.

Last Tuesday the name of every salesman in the territory was placed in a box and a drawing held, under the supervision of Guy E. Yeldell, automobile advertising manager of the Post-Dispatch; Gene F. McCullom, assistant automobile advertising manager of the Globe-Democrat, and Robert L. Bradley, automobile editor of the Post-Dispatch. Prizes, awarded as the cards were drawn, were given to J. Gartner, used car salesman for the Lurie Motor Car Co.; Guy L. Woody of the Woody Motor Car Co. of Effingham, Ill.; Ray Fernandez of the Lurie company; Don F. Brown of Brown & Brown, Hillsboro, Ill., and Zed Taylor Quality Motor Co. of Springfield, Mo.

The Rhodes Electric Co., 4142 Olive street, has inaugurated an improved electrical unit service for automobile dealers and repairmen. Milton B. Rhodes, who has been in the auto service business for 18 years, has devised a plan whereby auto owners may trade in their old generators and starters on rebuilt units, which carry the guarantee of the company, at reduced prices.

Hudson-Essex Offers 276 Color Combinations

Just what significance is attached to eye and harmony appeal in the finish is exemplified in the standard production practices of the Hudson Motor Car Co., which leads the popular-priced field in offering an almost endless variety of color combinations as optional.

"There are 276 different combinations to be had without extra cost in the Hudson and Essex," said R. C. Frampton of the Hudson-Frampton Motor Car Co., local Hudson-Essex distributer.

"Obviously, this latitude in obtaining individuality without the expense heretofore associated with obtaining personal preference in color finishes, has been a decisive factor in the outstanding success of the Hudson-Essex line. Hudson, for the first time in the history of the industry, has made it possible for individuality to be coupled with volume prices.

"An amazing feature of this innovation is the fact that it has not retarded production. In fact, the Hudson-Essex output for the first quarter of 1929 set a new record for the company. The second quarter did the same and the first seven months set a new all-time record for sales production.

Durant Sales in Toronto Increase

Durant's hold on the favor of Canadian motorists was further attested during June by sales at Toronto. The Durant maintained its position as runner-up to Ford in the four cylinder field and climbed from the fourth place it had occupied in April and May to third place in the six cylinder field.

The total sales of Durant in June in Toronto were 282, of which 150 were six cylinder cars.

REMARKS..... All-time record for first-year cars

De Soto Six—one year old—August 4, 1929. During the past twelve months, 81,065 De Soto Sixes were sold—breaking all records for a first-year car in the entire history of the industry.

It is not surprising that a car so handsome, so comfortable and responsive—and so safe and easy to drive as De Soto Six—should find a ready market. But it is significant that even such a car as this should set a new sales record for the industry in the first year of its existence.

This unprecedented public acceptance is your assurance that no matter what model you may choose for your own, you will possess a car whose distinction and quality will afford you lasting pride and satisfaction—such as no other car in its price field can offer.

Test De Soto Six in any way that you desire—drive it yourself. A demonstration will enable you to confirm for yourself the popular judgment that has made De Soto Six a record-breaker in its first year.

At St. Louis Air Fields

AN inspection of the east side of Lambert-St. Louis Field discloses that the drainage projects under way at the airport are of major extent, a fact not appreciated when viewed from the opposite side of the field.

Steam shovels, aided by electric "mules" as well as the braying Missouri variety, are making three great clefts in the earth, two for sewers and the largest for the diversion of Cold Water Creek, which now crosses the airport. The diversion ditch resembles in a small way the Rives des Peres project in Forest Park, while the sewers appear more than adequate for the drainage of the airport. Smaller feeder sewers lead into the main drains. Graders are leveling the hillside and spreading the earth over the area to the bank of the present creek, which will be filled.

On the west side of the field the concrete apron is progressing and, with favorable weather, should be completed in several weeks.

515 Robins Leave the Nest.

A year ago last Wednesday the first Robin left the Curtiss-Robertson plant and was test flown by Dan Robertson. Since then 515 Robins have left the nest and one of them, the St. Louis Robin No. 1, has made aviation history. The company celebrated its first anniversary with a record week of production of 19 planes. All planes produced by the company are taken over by Curtiss Flying Service under a five-year distribution agreement.

"Woolaroc's" Last Trip.

Art Goebel, flying the "Woolaroc," the plane in which he won the Dole prize in the California-Hawaii race, arrived at Lambert Field Friday afternoon on a final exhibition tour before the plane is placed in the museum of the Phillips Petroleum Corporation at Bartlesville, Ok. Goebel departed Saturday for Springfield, Mo.

Today's Stunt Program.

The air show program at Lambert Field this afternoon includes several stunts reminiscent of "flying circus days." Robert Grubb, flying student and parachute jumper, plans to transfer from a speeding automobile to an airplane by means of a rope ladder, which he will then use as a trapeze. He later will make a double parachute jump. Other events will include "balloon busting" and stunt flying.

Flying School for Women.

A flying school for women only has been started at Lambert Field by Dan Robertson, who recently returned home from Mexico City. Robertson says many local women want to learn to fly, but are backward about entering a school catering chiefly to men students. He has purchased two Robin monoplanes and will give instruction by appointment at an hourly fee of $40. Headquarters for the school will be at the Robertson Airplane Service Co.

12,908 Pounds of Air Mail.

Air mail to and from St. Louis totaled 12,908 pounds in July. The Universal Aviation Corporation, air mail contractors between St. Louis, Chicago, Kansas City and Omaha, also carried 523 passengers over their lines and had an efficiency rating of 100 per cent for trips completed. The distance covered was approximately 65,000 miles and an average speed of 100 miles an hour was maintained.

Woman Racers Stop Off.

Two entrants in the Women's National Air Derby visited Lambert Field during the week. Ruth Elder, passenger of George Haldeman in a spectacular but unsuccessful attempt to cross the Atlantic in 1927, stopped over last Monday on the way to Santa Monica, Cal., in a Whirlwind-Swallow biplane that she will pilot in the race. Although accompanied by a pilot, Miss Elder handled the controls of the plane. Mrs. Neva Paris, Curtiss Flying Service entrant in the race, took off yesterday for California in a Challenger Robin, specially built for the race by the Curtiss-Robertson Airplane Manufacturing Co. Mrs. Paris has been flying but a short time, but demonstrated while here that she is an excellent pilot.

Parks Airport has been selected as a night control stop for the woman air racers, who are scheduled to reach here Aug. 24. So far 17 women have entered the race, which ends at the national air races at Cleveland. Lady Mary Heath, Bobbie Trout, Louise Thaden and Bebe Daniels, movie actress, are among the entrants. Elinor Smith, 17-year-old flyer, may also enter. Civic organizations of East St. Louis will entertain the flyers at a banquet.

Flies Through Night Fog.

Tommy Nelson, who flew the St. Louis-Chicago air mail with Phil Love and "Bud" Gurney and who is now one of National Air Transport's mail pilots between Cleveland and New York, is the hero of a "blind flying" story in a recent issue of the Air Commerce Bulletin. "Nellie" flew his Liberty-Douglas from Bellefonte, Pa., to Hadley Field, N. J., through one of the worst night fogs ever seen over the eastern airways, relying on the radio beacon and his instruments.

Guatemalans Visit St. Louis.

The week's visitors included Col Miguel Garcia Granados and Lieut. Carlos Merlen, Guatemala army flyers, who were on their way home in a Ryan brougham after returning Col. Lindbergh's visit to Central America. The aviators left Scott Field Tuesday morning to fly to Lambert Field, but returned to the army airport 30 minutes later and explained to Col. Paegelow that they had been unable to locate Lambert Field due to haze. They reached the field later in the day.

Stowaway at Flying School.

"Red" Terhune, former caddie and original stowaway on the Graf Zeppelin, has become an office employe at the Von Hoffman Flying School. Terhune, following a brief period on the stage, took flying lessons with a view to becoming a pilot, but quit when informed that an eye defect would prevent him from receiving a license.

Radios for Universal Planes.

Passenger and mail planes of the Universal Aviation Corporation are to be equipped with radio receiving sets prior to the beginning of the bad weather flying period. E. M. Russell, meteorologist for the company, is perfecting a system of weather reports which he expects will be of great assistance to pilots.

Parks Air College Graduate.

Alex Brun, of Copenhagen, Denmark, nephew of the Danish Ambassador to the United States and son of a Copenhagen bank president, was one of eight Parks Air College graduates to qualify as limited commercial pilots during last week. Others in his class who qualified were: Raliegh V. Tanner of Little Falls, Minn.; Richard J. Wright of Youngstown, O.; John E. Foresman of Williamsport, Pa.; Edward J. Krajca of Albany, N. Y.; Carigene Mosley of Hannibal, Mo.; Melvin E. Weaver of Casey, Ill., and Earl A. Murphy, of Enid, Ok.

"Casey" Lambert Buys Plane.

"Casey" Lambert, nephew of Maj. Albert Bond Lambert, purchased a new Ryan brougham last week and departed in the ship for a vacation trip to Minnesota. The plane has gray fuselage, red wing and red leather upholstery.

Stewart, president of the Midwest Motors, Inc., Chrysler distributer, and also of the Optimist Club, in behalf of which he welcomed the flyer, is on the right, placing a new Chrysler "77" roadster at the pilot's disposal.

Franklin Dealers To Demonstrate Air-Cooled Power

The important part that the 40 per cent increased development of air-cooled power plays in enhancing the riding comfort at all speed ranges, will feature a demonstrating period carried on this week throughout the nation by the Franklin dealer organization. These dealers have provided every facility to demonstrate to the public that the modern motor car is the one that embraces not only power and speed but also smooth, safe, comfortable riding qualities which make power and speed usable.

During next week's demonstrations Franklin cars will be analyzed to show the many ingenious mechanical advancements and methods used to provide the utmost comfort. The car will be driven at high speeds over rough roads, around curves and up and down steep hills to show the comfort of air-cooled power. Quicker acceleration of the Franklin car at high speeds, due to the 40 per cent increase in power over any previous model, will be emphasized, as will the quietness of decelerating when its hydraulic brakes are applied.

Demonstrators will be seen steering the car with a single finger on the steering wheel and they will take curves with the palm of the hand resting lightly on the wheel to prove the ease of control. Its ease in parking, roominess of body and seats, convenient accessories for every comfort, foot control of headlights, reverse light in rear, ease and quietness of operating the second gear even at 50 miles an hour and many other features will receive special attention.

Should Hire a Hall.

WEPS and its more powerful successor, WHDH of Gloucester, are among the few stations in the world operated principally for the benefit of fishermen.

Cut off from other means of communication, the fishermen on the great banks of the North Atlantic rely upon radio to give them news of the day, weather, fish market prices and word from their loved ones at home. Thus the radio broadcast becomes to these men of the sea what the newspaper is to the citizen ashore. The market news alone may play an important share in the time of departure for port and in the prices received for the catch.

Not long ago WEPS broadcast that the daughter of one of the men aboard a fishing schooner was dying and urged him to hurry home. The father arrived in time to see his child before she died.

Reception Better Under Reallocation, Amateurs Declare

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10. — According to the radio amateurs reception conditions are much better than they were prior to the reallocation of last November. This fact was brought to light by a recent survey of the Federal Radio Commission.

During the early spring the commission sent out questionnaires to nearly 10,000 amateurs throughout the country. The questionnaires asked that the amateurs furnish the commission with information with regard to the present set-up of stations in their locality. Were things in better shape than they were last year? How about distant reception? How about chain programs? These and many more questions were asked.

The amateurs are practically unanimous in agreeing that conditions are much better than they were prior to Nov. 11 last. A great majority of them felt that there was too much duplication of chain programs.

Philadelphia Symphony To Make Radio Debut

Orchestra, Under Direction of Leopold Stokowski, Will Be Sponsored by Philco in Three Concerts Over NBC Red Network.

LEOPOLD STOKOWSKI.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 10.—The Philadelphia Orchestra Association announced today that it had signed a contract with the Philadelphia Storage Battery Co., sponsors of the Philco radio, for a series of three broadcasts by the orchestra, under direction of Leopold Stokowski, Oct. 6, Nov. 3 and Dec. 8. The broadcasts will cover the entire red network of the National Broadcasting Co., and will originate from the Academy of Music here between 4:30 and 5:30 p. m. St. Louis time.

Announcement that this world-famous orchestra, after several years of refusals, would go on the air under the auspices of Philco, followed a week's exchange of cables between the orchestra association's offices here and Leopold Stokowski, who is now in Europe. It has not been found wise up to the present time to broadcast the orchestra due to the fact that its leaders felt that radio reception was not sufficiently good to bring in such an organization as this. Stokowski, always interested in broadcasting because of the enormous audiences it reaches, is said to be most enthusiastic about the programs planned under the auspices of Philco.

At each broadcast a short introductory talk will be made by Edward Davis, president of the Philco organization, and it is hoped that Stokowski also will talk.

Stokowski is the third to direct the orchestra since it was founded in 1900, Fritz Scheel being its conductor from 1900 to 1936; and Carl Pohlig from 1907 to 1912. Stokowski, born of a Polish father and an Irish mother, and educated in Queen's College, Oxford, has had a large part in the success of the orchestra in recent years. His first musical work in the United States was that of organist and choirmaster at St. Bartholomew's Church in New York City.

The regular Philco Hour will be heard as usual every Friday evening.

Germany Seeks Restitution for Seized Patents

Hearing Before War Claims Arbiter Next Month Expected to Settle Tuned Frequency Row.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10. — Germany is seeking restitution for the valuable radio patents seized from her by the United States at the outset of the World War, and now used by the Government as well as by radio set manufacturers having licensing agreements with the Government.

Through the Telefunken Co., its official communications agency, the German Government has requested the War Claims Arbiter, Judge Edwin B. Parker, to adjudicate its claims on some 100 radio patents, as well as the Sayville (L. I.) radio station, used during the war as one of America's central radio terminals, and now operated by the Mackay Radio and Telegraph Co.

Included among the patents seized is the celebrated Schloemilch von Bronk tuned radio frequency device, the circuit that makes possible radio reception and which is necessary in every receiving set. This device, however, is contested by the Radio Corporation of America, which holds the Alexanderson patent for the same circuit, and claims that its own patent anticipated the Von Bronk patent. The War Claims Arbiter himself must decide the priority in this case before he can adjudicate the German claims.

Hearing in September.

Judge Parker has set the German radio patents case for hearing in September. He must determine whether the Telefunken claim is proper and the amount of restitution that should be made. These patents and the Sayville Station were seized by the Alien Property Custodian at the beginning of America's entry into the World War.

After seizure of the patents they were sold to the Navy Department for $1690. This was merely a gesture for their payment, however, since these holdings are considered among the most valuable of the art. The Telefunken Co., in the case of the patents, asks for "just and reasonable compensation" for them, without a specific request for the amount of damages it thinks it should be accorded.

For the Sayville station, however, the German Government seeks payment of $9,500,000, on the basis that it was a "going concern" when seized. At the time of seizure it was Germany's transoceanic radio station in the United States. The Alien Property Custodian, when he seized the station, estimated its value at but $46,000.

Will Settle Controversy.

It is likely that the Telefunken claims will involve a protracted investigation. Besides the navy, several of the leading radio set manufacturers of the country have been using the German patents through their cross-licensing agreements with the navy. Included among these are Atwater Kent, Zenith, Pathe Radio and Phonograph, Wired Radio, Inc., and others.

Under congressional legislation making possible adjudication of German claims for patents and properties received by the custodian a fund of $100,000,000 is available. This sum must be used in settlement for all claims involving seizure of patents, ships and property. Consequently only a portion of it will be available for the settlement of the radio claims. It is understood that approximately one-half of the amount already is pledged for the settlement of the Chemical Foundation dyestuff case.

The most important feature of the case will be the settlement of the Von Bronk-Alexanderson tuned radio frequency controversy. The Supreme Court of Canada recently ruled that the German device was the original one, and that the Alexanderson patent was invalid. But in previous cases before the District courts in New York, decisions in favor of the Alexanderson patent were rendered.

Mentioned in Congress.

It was pointed out that the arbiter is not bound by court decisions in the settlement of foreign claims. This being true, he must decide for himself, whether the Von Bronk claim is authentic, and make restitution accordingly.

The Von Bronk-Alexanderson controversy has come to the attention of one of the committees of Congress. The Senate Interstate Commerce Committee in hearings last May in connection with the Couzens bill for the creation of a Federal Communications Commission, inquired into the reason why the navy, holding title to the Von Bronk and other former German radio patents, has never defended them in the courts against patents owned by the so-called radio trust.

The Justice Department, at the request of the committee, is looking into the case, to ascertain why the navy has never asserted its patent rights. The committee itself, led by Senator Couzens of Michigan, its chairman, and Senator Dill of Washington, known as the "father of radio," plans to reopen its inquiry into this phase of its investigation when Congress reconvenes next December.

Circuits for Screen-Grid Tubes.

Especially designed circuits are necessary to take full advantage of the high radio-frequency amplification possible with the new A. C. screen-grid tubes. Those circuits differ considerably from the coupling circuits employed with the lower amplification tubes. Existing receivers cannot be efficiently rewired for the screen-grid valve without so great a change in the circuit design that it becomes impractical and uneconomical.

Only One Zone Has Proper Number of Cleared Channels

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—According to a recent survey, there is only one of the five radio zones which has the proper number of cleared channels. By the "proper number" is meant the number that was determined on by the Federal Radio Commission in its General Order No. 40.

General Order No. 40 is the one that was responsible for the reallocation of last November. Under the terms of this order each of the five radio zones is entitled to eight cleared channels. These eight channels were to be divided among the states within the zones according to their population.

A cleared channel is defined as a channel on which but one station operates during the evening hours. In other words, it is a channel that is set aside for interference-free, long-distance transmission. At the present time the First zone, consisting of the New England States, New York, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland and the District of Columbia, is the only one using exactly eight cleared channels.

The Fifth Zone, made up of the West coast and mountain states, has only seven cleared channels. Under the reallocation plan it received eight. One of these channels was to be used by KGO, Oakland, Cal., and WGY, Schenectady, N. Y.; the former operating full time and the latter signing off at sunset. WGY was dissatisfied with this arrangement and took the matter to court. The court ordered that the two stations operate simultaneously. The commission has appealed the matter to the Supreme Court, and the case still is in litigation, but both stations continue to operate on full time of channels.

Up until about a month ago, the Third Zone, consisting of the Southern states, had its full share.

The Fourth Zone, made up of the Northern Central states, has eight and one-half cleared channels. The Second Zone consisting of Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan, Kentucky and the two Virginias, has only seven and one-half cleared channels. The commission explains this difference by referring to the following clause of the radio act: "If and when there is a lack of applications for the proportionate share of wave lengths to which any such zone is entitled, the licensing authority may issue licenses for the balance of the proportion not applied for from any zone, to applicants from other zones."

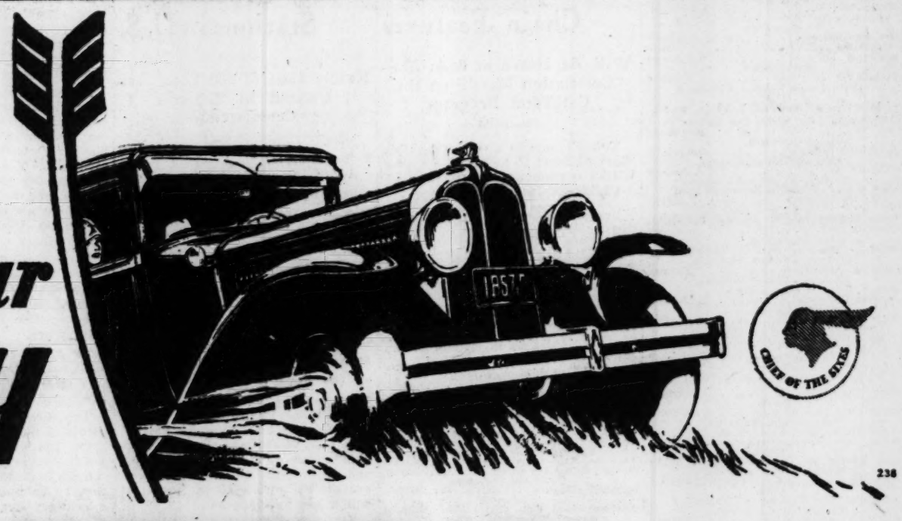
more for your money in the PONTIAC BIG 6 at $745



PRODUCT OF GENERAL MOTORS

Here is a statement that will stand any kind of comparison you want to make: You get more for your money in the Pontiac Big Six than you can possibly obtain in any car listing at or near $745! No other car of Pontiac's price can give you so much big car performance, appearance, luxury and convenience—for Pontiac is the only six of its field originally designed with the big car idea in mind. And the whole big car idea is based on giving more in every phase of motor car value than existing standards led buyers to expect in a low-priced six! So when we urge you to make comparisons before you buy—we know in advance what the answer will be. We know that you will reach the same conclusion as the thousands of careful buyers who have made 1929 to date Pontiac's most successful year—buyers who disregard empty claims and base their decision on the fact that in Pontiac Big Six their money buys more!

Stations Are Checked On Playing of Records

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Aug. 10.—When a radio announcer tells his listeners that a famous opera star will sing or a great orchestra will play and it proves to be a phonograph record, an irate fan may be making a record of the announcement.

"One of the Federal Radio Commission rules," Commissioner Harold A. Lafount said here, "is that broadcasters must announce phonograph records as such instead of trying to fool the public. My office in Washington has informed me that 35 listening device records have been received there from Los Angeles, where interested persons are keeping watch."

To Obtain a Better Ground.

A better ground means better contact with ground water, and this can generally be obtained with a large metal body buried in the earth in a moist place or a place which can be watered to keep it damp. If charcoal is placed around the metal when it is buried it will draw and hold the ground water.

The number of sets owned in Canada is increasing at the rate of about 50,000 a year. More radios are sold to farmers in Western Canada than to any other class of citizens.

Charged Battery Means Clear Reception.

The power supply of battery-operated sets should be checked at frequent intervals. There is always a drain on the batteries, and if they are allowed to run down the effect is an inconvenient silence until the batteries can be replaced. When conditions like this arise, owners often jump to false conclusions and start tampering with sets. In any event, the power equipment should not be allowed to drop below a certain level. If it does, the inevitable result is inefficient reception. A batteri-operated set that is in good condition gives clear, smooth and even results.

National Standard For Radio Tube Bases Approved

A national standard for radio tube bases has been approved by the American Standards Association following the preparation of the standard by a technical committee under the chairmanship of Dr. Alfred N. Goldsmith, vice president of the Radio Corporation of America. This is the first authoritative national standard for radio equipment. The Institute of Radio Engineers and the American Institute of Electrical Engineers are playing a leading part in the standardization work.

The standard provides that the large pins of the tube bases shall be .156 inches in diameter, and the small pins .125 inches in diameter. This applies to both the large and small types of tubes. The standard also provides that the diameters of the pins must not be more than .002 inches larger or smaller than the normal. Standards are also set up for the dimensions of the bases and the position of the pins. The large pins, it is stipulated, shall connect with the filament. The standard states which small pin shall connect with the plate, and which with the grid.

Nineteen national organizations are represented on the radio committee which is preparing unified national standards for radio apparatus under the auspices of the American Standards Association. In addition to standards for vacuum tubes, the committee is working on standards for transmitting and receiving sets, and installations, component parts and wiring, electro-acoustic devices, and power supply and outside plant.

Merchants Own 139 Broadcast Stations in U. S.

Nearly Half of 600 Total Are Classed as 'General Commercial.'

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON. — The village vulcanizing station, the metropolitan department store, the society resort hotel, the Boy Scout Council and theological seminaries are among enterprises which operate broadcasting stations.

Two hundred thirty-eight of the 600 stations in the United States, which broadcast programs to about 50,000,000 listeners, are classified by the Federal Radio Commision as general commercial stations. Educational institutions, ranging from high school to state university, own 68 stations. Religious organizations broadcast the gospel and music from 46, and 32 are operated by publications, most of which are newspapers.

One hundred and thirty-nine merchants, 19 manufacturers, six insurance companies, nine hotels and three banks maintain stations. Ten public utility companies, seven civic organizations such as chambers of commerce and four state departments are in the broadcasting game. Eleven cities and towns boast municipal stations.

A large percentage of the commercial stations are property of radio or electrical companies. The manufacturers include makers of biscuits, batteries and stock medicine. The oil industry is represented by three refining companies and broadcasting is a sideline with an investment company, a mining concern and a building contractor.

Three stations are run in connection with theaters, two with moving picture producing and one with a dance studio. The Pennsylvania state police have a station at Harrisburg.

There is one political station, WEVD, the Debs Memorial station, at Woodhaven, N. Y., sponsored by the socialist party.

The Boy Scouts of Pueblo, Colo., own and operate KGDP.

On the educational station list are liberal arts colleges, three high schools, agricultural colleges, missionary schools, technical schools, a military academy and a school of chiropractic.

Radio Trade Notes

The Sonora Phonograph & Radio Co. of New York has purchased the Federal Radio Corporation of Buffalo. The new company will be known as the Sonora Radio Corporation, with E. Herman as president. L. E. Noble, former president of the Federal, will be general manager of the new company; W. R. McAllister, former sales manager of Federal, will be Eastern sales manager; S. D. Doak, formerly of Federal, will be Western sales manager with offices in Chicago.

Sets will be manufactured at the Federal plant in Buffalo, then shipped to the Sonora plant at Saginaw, Mich., where they will be mounted in cabinets before being distributed. The same standard will prevail and the sets will carry the name of Sonora. A new set to be introduced shortly will have three screen grid tubes in three types of cabinets.

The W. E. Fuetterer Supply Co., 2135 Locust street, has been assigned the eastern half of Missouri and Southern Illinois. W. E. Fuetterer is president, F. C. Clark sales manager and William H. Hirsch Jr., radio manager.

The Twelth street Radio Sales Co. has opened a store at 1563 South Twelth street. W. H. Nettle is manager.

The St. Louis Radio Co., formerly of 1234 Franklin avenue, has moved to larger quarters at 4656 Shenandoah avenue.

The F. Tiemann Stove & Hardware Co., 210 Walnut street, has been appointed distributer of the Duovac tube. Duovac claims the last word in accuracy of manufacture. It is said to have one of the two nucrometer filament cutters in existence. Duovac grids are automatically wound and welded while on the winding machine. "Duovac's rigid method of element suspension prevents the expansion caused by the intense heat necessary in bombarding tubes from altering the spacing of the tube elements," says an announcement. "Complete degassing in addition to complete air evacuation keeps Duovac tubes as good after months of use as when new."

A new seven-tube radio receiving set, console model, designated as Graybar No. 600, employing an improved Super-Heterodyne AC circuit, has just been introduced by the Graybar Electric Co., according to announcement today by George Corrao, St. Louis manager.

This new receiver includes the new UX-245 pwer audio tube. This tube provides similar volume to new UX-245 power audio tube. This loud signal received from the power detector a much improved tone quality results. Because of this new tube, only one stage of audio amplification is employed. Such a strong signal is obtained from the second power detector that the usual successive stages of audio amplification are unnecessary.

The circuit includes an antenna coupling circuit, one stage of tuned radio frequency, a power detector, oscillator, two stages of intermediate frequency (175KC), a second power detector and one power output stage.

Tubes employed are: Six AC. UY-227 raditrons; one UX-245 raditorn, and one UX-280, radiotron for rectification.

Alfred Marchev, president and general manager of the Temple Corporation, has ordered the production department to set machinery in motion that will double production of radio receivers in the clearing industrial district plant at Chicago during August. This means an increase in production of approximately 6,600 per cent since March 1, just five months.

Marchev announced that shipping orders call for production of an average of 1000 sets per day during the month. The highest previous production mark was set during July when an average of 500 receivers were turned out each day.

A new receiver, employing an improved A. C. superheterodyne circuit, and inclosed in a console cabinet with an electro-dynamic loudspeaker, is announced by E. A. Nicholas, vice president of the Radio-Victor Corporation of America.

The superheterodyne circuit used in the new receiver, Radiola 66, includes a tuned antenna coupling circuit, one stage of radio frequency amplification, oscillator, first detector, two stages of intermediate frequency amplification, second (power) detector, and one stage of audio frequency amplification. The elimination of one stage of audio frequency amplification materially increases the tone fidelity and reduces the possibility of distortion present when successive stages of amplification are used, the announcement states.

Six A. C. Radiotrons UY-227 and one power amplifier tube UX-245 are used in the circuit. Radiotron UX-280 is employed in the power unit to rectify the A. C. current for the plate and grid supply of all the tubes and, also, to provide current for the loudspeaker field supply.

Plans are under way to form a new tube organization with the Sonatron Tube Co. of Newark, N. J., and Chicago as the nucleus. A special meeting of stockholders has been called for August 16 to vote on the proposed merger, which will include the Sonatron Co., the Televocal Corporation, of West New York, N. J.; and the Magnatron Corporation of Hoboken, N. J. The new company will have an authorized capital of 1,000,000 common shares of no par value of which about $25,000 shares will be outtsanding.

The Radio Corporation of America has granted the new company a license and has agreed to loan it $2,000,000 for five years. The R. C. A. will be granted an option to purchase within that period 50,000 shares of stock of the new company with provision against dilution.

As a result of a formal request by the National Better Business Bureau to the National Electrical Manufacturers' Association, a definition of "screen grid radio receivers" has been worked out for its use in maintaining watch against the unethical or misleading advertising.

R. H. Manson, chairman of the N. E. N. A. Radio Engineering Council; W. E. Holland, director of the engineering division of the Radio Manufacturers' Association, and B. F. Raycroft, N. E. M. A. vice president, formulated the following tentative definition: "A radio receiver designed to utilize not less than two screen grid tubes in tuned radio frequency circuits may be properly classified as a screen grid receiver."

SERVICE THAT COUNTS

For the Notebook.

A poor tube or tubes in a set, leaking by-pass condenser, or a defective filter condenser in a power-pack, defective rectifier tube, or defective joint in the set wiring, will cause annoying buzzes.

A "soaking" charge of a battery calls for charging until the specific gravity of every cell will rise no higher.

The ROYALTY of RADIO

THE "ROYALTY OF RADIO" IS HERE! ...New Kennedy Models that challenge the most critical inspection and comparison! In presenting them, it is unnecessary to resort to confusing superlatives—because each Kennedy speaks for itself in the full TONE and color of LIFE!

Kennedy is truly "The Royalty of Radio"—the sum total of 17 years of Kennedy Radio achievement—surpassing even the previous high standards of Kennedy—recognized by engineers, connoisseurs, music lovers and critics alike.

Always styled with the finer things of life—always emphasizing that "pride of ownership" associated only with those personal possessions reflecting the par excellence of good taste, Kennedy prices are in distinct contrast with their value: Model 210 . . . $152. Model 310 . . . $182.

Hear the LIFE TONE of Kennedy for the revelation of radio! Dealers are now showing the Kennedy Royal Line... If you do not know the address of your local Kennedy dealer, please phone your local distributor.

Kennedy is a perfectly synchronized, high-powered, high-gain receiver of great selectivity—combining power detection, push-pull power amplifier, phonograph jack and switch, electro dynamic speaker with extra large full floating cone, and rugged "battleship" construction to maintain absolute rigidity and hair-line uni-balance . . . Housed in exquisite two-tone cabinets that add elegance to their surroundings. Colin B. Kennedy Corporation, South Bend, Indiana.

And its safety and handling ease are so outstanding that it's a sheer delight to sit at the wheel and drive. In fact, the new Chevrolet Six has completely changed every previous idea as to what the buyer of a low-priced car has a right to expect for his money.

LOOSE-WILES CO. BUYS AT REAR OF AUDITORIUM SITE

UP TO $1000 A FOOT PAID FOR FRONTAGE.

Vacation of Johnson Street Planned — Announcement and Building Program Withheld.

By Berry Moore.

Records disclose that the Loose-Wiles Biscuit Co. has purchased approximately three-quarters of a block on South Fourteenth street, opposite the Municipal Courts building. The property has 175 feet on Fourteenth street, 150 feet on Clark avenue and 175 feet on Johnson street, including both the northwest corner of Fourteenth street and Clark avenue and the northeast corner of Fifteenth and Johnson streets. Negotiations for the property were handled by Elmore Cave & Co.

Just west of the purchase is the six-story plant with finished basement of the Loose-Wiles Biscuit Co., occupying a site with 175 feet on Johnson street, 150 feet on Clark avenue and 175 feet on Fifteenth street. Hanford Main, general manager of the Loose-Wiles plant in St. Louis, said that the Fourteenth street property had been acquired to provide for the ultimate expansion of the present plant but that the company had no immediate building plans. It is understood, however, that the company has made the purchase with ambitious building plans which soon will materialize, probably in a tall structure with a tower proclaiming its "Sunshine" products in view of the nearby Memorial Plaza.

Opposite Auditorium Site.

The site includes 50x145 feet at the northwest corner of Fourteenth street and Clark avenue, owned by Charles Gietner; 100x150 feet adjoining on Fourteenth street, owned by the Maxine Realty Co., and 25x150 feet adjoining on the north, owned by David and Barteria O'Niel. Close to $1000 a foot on a basis of the Fourteenth street frontage, is said to have been paid for the northwest corner of Fourteenth street and Clark avenue, and around $500 a foot for the adjoining ground of 100 feet frontage on Fourteenth street, owned by the Maxine Realty Co. A total of $12,500, or $500 a foot, was paid the O'Niel estate for the adjoining 25 feet. Record valuations were established in each instance.

All the parcels acquired extend through to Johnson street, on which they have a second frontage, and which forms the west line of the purchase. Old buildings of negligible value, with one or two exceptions, occupy the premises. These include that of the Columbia Terminals Company, a three-story building embracing the O'Neil lot and adjoining property formerly owned by the O'Neils.

Just north of and adjoining the Loose-Wiles purchase is the site to be taken by the city by private purchase or by condemnation for the proposed Municipal Auditorium, which will occupy a Market street frontage extending from Fourteenth to Fifteenth street. The auditorium site has an extensive depth on both Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets, including part of the ground occupying the Columbia Terminals Company, which the city has purchased from the O'Neil family. Plans for the auditorium contemplate the vacation of Johnson street, a narrow thoroughfare hardly performing the functions of a street.

Property Consolidated.

The elimination of Johnson street will enhance materially the value of the property of the Loose-Wiles Co., now practically in two different blocks, by consolidating it. Exclusive of Johnson street, the Loose-Wiles holdings, including the recent acquisition, will have a total frontage on Clark avenue, Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets, of 650 feet or more. The property just purchased was assembled in the name of the Title Guaranty Trust Co., pending its transfer to the Loose-Wiles Co.

The Loose-Wiles Biscuit Co. is the second largest manufacturer of biscuits and fancy crackers in the United States. Its products under the trade name of "Sunshine Biscuits" are universally known. The main plants of the company are in Long Island City, N. Y., Chicago, St. Louis, Minneapolis, Kansas City, Omaha, Dallas, Pittsburgh, Boston and Cheltenham, Md. Branches of the company have been established in more than 1[illegible] cities.

By THOMAS B. SHERMAN.

THE premier St. Louis performance of George Gershwin's jazz tone poem, "An American in Paris," which will be given during the entr'acte at the Garden Theater next Sunday night, during the performance of the "Five O'Clock Girl," has an importance for local music lovers that may not be immediately apparent. It is not the best piece of music ever written by an American nor is it likely to be considered the most popular one. But it has several very significant virtues.

But though Gershwin has demonstrated that he is at home, at last, in scoring for a symphony orchestra, and though this particular score reveals his indebtedness to classic and romantic writers, with occasional direct derivations from Brahms, Debussy and—God help us—Massenet, "An American in Paris" is unmistakably modern. It makes free use of bold, modern harmonies and it has the restless modern spirit. It differs, however, from the works of such modern composers as Stravinsky and Schoenberg in that it has a much stronger emotional urge.

ANOTHER attribute of "An American in Paris" which commends it very strongly to this writer is the depth and richness of its "blues" section. For the first time a typical "blues" theme has been properly glorified. The bare theme is itself a strikingly original musical invention and its treatment, with its sudden changes from minor to major and its soaring modulations, makes one feel that the soul of the "blues" singer has at last been completely articulated.

An amusing analysis of "An American in Paris" was written by Deems Taylor, the composer and critic, and published with the program when it was played for the first time last year in New York.

"Babes in Toyland" Will Be Municipal Opera's Offering for the Eleventh Week Beginning Monday and "Hit the Deck" Is Being Held Over at the Garden Theater.

VICTOR HERBERT'S "Babes in Toyland" will be the eleventh week offering of the Municipal Opera. It will be the third time that this extravaganza in a toy shop has been heard on the Forest Park stage. An augmented cast and chorus are announced.

At the Garden Theater "Hit the Deck" has fared so well that the management announces it will be held over a second week by popular demand, with the same cast, starring Stella Mayhew and Roger Gray. Miss Mayhew's "Hallelujah" has regularly been a high point of the show at the Garden and Gray has renewed his old hold on St. Louis audiences. Both were starred in the original production of "Hit the Deck."

Invading the field of the legitimate stage for its headliners, the St. Louis Theater announces an unusual bill that includes Glenn Hunter, star of "Young Woodley," Alice Mackenzie, until her recent resignation ingenue soprano of the Municipal Opera company, and Harland Dixon, dancing comedian and musical comedy favorite.

Joyce White, formerly with Ziegfeld productions, will make her first appearance with the Municipal Opera in "Babes in Toyland." She will have the role of "Jane." The leading role of "Contrary Mary" goes to Carolyn Thomson. And Pierre White, who announced his resignation last week as a result of dissension with the stage director, will make his final appearance in the part of "Grumio."

The familiar plot of "Babes in Toyland" serves to introduce such well-known Herbert melodies as "The Toy Soldiers' March," "My Castle in Spain," "Mary, Mary" and others. The characters, most of them drawn from the nursery, go through a series of adventures that are finally resolved in a happy marriage.

There will be a chorus of 120 and 80 specialty players in the production. Tonight "The Vagabond King" will be seen for the last time. For the twelfth and final week of the Municipal Opera will do "Golden Dawn," a musical play with a score by Emmerich Kalman and Herbert Stothart, one of the composers of "Rose Marie" and "Song of the Flame." The regular cast will be augmented by Marguerita Sylva, a member of the original company, and Greek Evans, baritone, who appeared at the Municipal Theater in a gala production of "Il Trovatore" in 1926.

The complete cast of "Babes in Toyland," which was first seen on the Municipal Opera stage in 1920 and again in 1926, is as follows:

Uncle Barnaby..David Andrada
Allan ..... Truman Stanley
Jane ..... Joyce White
Hilda .....Clara Schlief
Roderigo ..William J. McCarthy
Gonzorgo .....Florenz Ames
Widow Piper .....Sara Andrada
Tom Tom .....Sibylla Bowhan
Contrary Mary..Carolyn Thomson
Bo Peep .....Grace Yeager
Jill .....Luise Heimueller
The Toymaker..Wm. C. Gordon
Grumio .....Pierre White
Helen .....Verna Geske

Tonight will mark the eighth week of the Garden's announced ten weeks' season and thereby a record is established. The longest season at the Garden Theater for strictly legitimate attractions previously was six weeks. It is also the first time in the history of the al fresco theater in St. Louis that an attraction has played for two consecutive weeks. There will be no changes in the cast, which includes Virginia Smith and Sam Critcherson, Garden favorites, in leading roles.

"Peggy Anne" has been of necessity dropped from the Garden schedule and next Sunday will see the opening of "The Five O'clock Girl." A special feature of the production will be a ballet staged under the direction of Tamara Darialova, St. Louis dancer, who was formerly with Pavlowa. The Garden Theater management has also announced that George Gershwin's jazz tone poem, "An American in Paris," will be played by an augmented orchestra during the entire act. This performance will be prepared by Adolphe Kornspan.

Glenn Hunter, who tops the bill at the St. Louis this week, was last seen here in John Van Druten's drama of adolescence, "Young Woodley." Hunter is seen in a comedy sketch, "His First Dress Suit," in which he again has the role of an abashed adolescent. At the close of his vaudeville tour Hunter will open in "Second Sight," one of the new plays announced for early revelation on Broadway.

Miss Mackenzie, also on the St. Louis bill, assisted by Edith Gordon, pianist of St. Louis, who besides accompanying Miss Mackenzie, gives several piano solos.

At the Fox Theater another Municipal Opera star who also left the cast, Miss Eva Clark, offers a cycle of popular songs with Dan Casler at the piano.

Geddes to Direct Hamlet.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—Norman Bell Geddes will design and direct the production of "Hamlet" planned by the Lakewood Players of Skowhegan, Me., for the week of Aug. 26. It is said the designment will be done in the radical manner of Mr. Geddes' Paris production, "Jeanne d'Arc."

New York Theater Season Opens With Brady Play

By ALISON SMITH.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.

IN so far as any season can be said to open at a definite point, William A. Brady opened this one last week with a piece called "Now-A-Days." It is, we are told, the first play with any coherent intentions that has reached Broadway for many stifling weeks and certainly the first to be heralded as "a serious American drama."

The announcement need not be taken too literally for Mr. Brady, with admirable concern for the baked and sweltering brains of his audiences, has not permitted his author, Mr. Brash, to tax their mental powers too seriously. What he has done is to present a fairly exciting melodrama set for some inexplicable reason in an American university. And the effect of all this blood and thunder in these presumably sedate shades, is much like finding a copy of the Police Gazette in the library of one of its Greek professors.

Not that anything couldn't happen on a campus—and frequently does. We still want to protest, however, that it doesn't happen in quite that way. The action starts with three co-eds wagering that they would win a blond and god-like senior, who in addition to his Greek aspect, was a Phi Beta Kappa, the team's fullback and hadn't had a single drink for two semesters. In the feminine scramble that ensures, one of the girls fights foully; she induces our hero to take a drink, drags him into a disreputable rooming house and in a drunken brawl murders an intruder whose death is blamed on the young undergraduate.

This single incident is uncommonly interesting and exciting for with it the stilted characters of the preceding act, suddenly spring into life and violent action. Except for this, however, the actors were handicapped for dialogue which suggested that these young folks had been reading Walter Pater and trying, with lamentable lack of success, to talk that way.

Mr. Brash's name is new to us, but even this far from perfect work has established his obvious sense of swift and stirring melodrama. Only we hope that in his next play (we hear he has one) the plot, by way of sparing the sensibilities of all our dear old grads, will be laid in a speakeasy.

WHEN the curtain rises on a revue in any foreign land (and we are beginning to believe that there are few spots where such a curtain does not rise) your first impression is that this form of entertainment is exactly alike all over the world. The technique of the comedians seems much the same, the jazz beats out the old familiar rhythms and the chorus girls and spotlight beauties seem to employ with identical manner that commodities briefly characterizes by Elinor Glyn as "IT." After due consideration, however, and fragments of translation from a friendly native, you begin to realize the content of most continental shows has at least one definite point of departure from our pageants. Through all our years of elaborate and expert revue producing we have hesitated to devote them to political and social satire. The revues across the water seem to be given up to little else.

Including the Scandinavian — in fact, most particularly the Scandinavian. We saw the celebrated "Rolf's Revue" in Stockholm and the "Scala Revyen" in Copenhagen and, after due consultation with our translator, we learned that more than half the program was made up of pointed and none too gentle gibes at the comedy of their national life. A finance minister threatens to resign and immediately finds himself as the hero or villian of a Stockholm sketch. King Gustav starts to visit the Balkans and emerges before the footlights in an irreverent if affectionate anticipatory skit. Proposed legislation against bicycles that illtimed attempt to prohibit "Smorgasborg" (which nearly caused a national uprising, as well it might) the activities of Dr. Bratt with the liquor system, the adventures of Capt. Einar Lundborg in America were all embodied in a lively burlesque of the world this audience lives in. For good measure there was thrown in (in Sweden) a merciless burlesque of Greta Garbo and (in Copenhagen) some wild spoofing of the Prince of Denmark with no regard for the sensibilities of the melancholy One.

IN Stockholm also the current edition of the revue was used as the method of paying off a private grudge. It happened we are told, that Ernest Rolf, the impresario of the revue, was much incensed at a local cafe because the owner had refused admittance to a young negress on the grounds that his foreign patrons might draw the color line. Whereupon Rolf promptly introduces a skit with the cafe reproduced exactly and the owner appearing as a simpering and ladylike host who powders his nose between interviews and patrons. It was a scene in which in this country would have brought hosts of lawyers scampering to the aid of the injured proprietor with an air-tight libel suit; a scene as preposterous as the spectacle of Mr. Ziegfeld becoming annoyed with Childs restaurants and introducing an attack on the owners in one of his shows. At Rolf's, however, no one seemed to mind—the audience roared with delight and even the cafe owner seemed mildly amused, probably on the ground that publicity was publicity even when abusive.

As far as we can gather from our limited attendance, the Germans and French use their revues

Critic Who Predicted That the Sound Films Were Doomed to Drown in a Sea of Noisy Hokum Feels in a Chastened Mood—But It's Different With Signor Luigi Pirandello.

By Jack Alexander.

IN VIEW of the astounding innovations in science that occur almost between the editions of a newspaper, it is amazing how writers and critics rush into print with their views on things when they know that before their article is set in type, its contents may be old stuff.

The writer had his experience. Last year, at approximately this time, he got a mad on the then new talking films and bloomed forth with a learned essay showing, with smothering logic, just why the talkie was doomed to failure. It would never make the grade, it squeaked, its sound was just an additional medium for hokum which would be smeared on with a table knife. All that rot.

The effect was magical. The talkie became successful overnight. And today one of the persons who spoils the dialogue that follows the side-splitting crash of a barrel over the traffic cop's thick skull, by uncontrolled laughter, is none other than this occasional reviewer. Look for the long, white beard.

Evidently, Signor Luigi Pirandello, the Italian dramatist, has not been so chastened. However, he will live to rue his article in the Illustrated London News entitled "The Cinema Is Digging Its Own Grave."

SIGNOR PIRANDELLO thinks that the movies, instead of adopting dialogue as an additional medium of expression should turn to music. He argues that even if they should succeed in reproducing the stage so that the characters would not look like spirits and their dialogue would not sound as if it had been rolling around in a rain barrel, they would only be apeing the theater. And, by that very fact, stage stars would supplant movie stars and the stage would, in effect, gobble up the movies.

The dramatist shivers, too, when he thinks of the erasing from the field of art of the silent picture. This erasure, to him, is a crime. He writes: "Forms, while alive, are a conquest of the spirit. To kill them, just for the sake of replacing them with newer forms, is to commit a crime; it is to throttle a manifestation of the spirit."

His third main contention is that talking films will have no international appeal, because of their limitations in language, and the bottom will fall out of the foreign market.

Concerning the first and third fears, no one need worry but the movie actors and the producers and they wont lose much sleep over it. But, all the recognition of our experience of last year, we cannot see that the form of the silent movie is being destroyed.

The silent picture was always short a few buttons. It was not a complete artistic form, if we may muddle around in such esoteric language. It always seemed incongruous to see a player's lips move dumbly and then have a subtitle flashed on the screen telling what was said and breaking up the continuity of the story.

Moreover, it made for cheap acting. Almost any good-looking hat salesman or winner of a bathing beauty contest could enter the movies. Their beauty, in the estimation of the producers, made up for their dull wit. This fry has been driven out of the racket by the dialogue film, except for the few who were really good. To make the grade in Hollywood now, one need not be beautiful, if one can act. Is that tough on the public?

Personally, we propose a toast to the dialogue film. It has brought the film almost to the level of the theater, it has eliminated subtitles, it has made for better acting, has, in short, brought intelligence to the movie houses, a terrified stranger. Give the little fellow a hand.

TO TEST the truth of the frequent plaint that the movie houses should show only movies, the Missouri dispensed with its stage show last week and according to the management, suffered not a bit at the box office. This will be good news for the man with the phobia for masters of ceremonies.

The Skouras organization has contracted for more than 100 one and two reel subjects to go with the feature pictures to come.

If the Missouri experiment continues successful, many other theaters of the Publix chain will probably swing into line.

"The Mysterious Dr. Fu Manchu" is the main attraction at the Missouri this week with Eddie Cantor furnishing the comedy in a short subject.

A St. Louis boy who has made good in Hollywood is Dave Silverman, once a piano thumper in a nickel show, more recently leader of the Ambassador Theater orchestra and now chief musical scorer for the Warner Brothers and First National Studios.

Silverman's first effort in his new line is to be seen at the Ambassador this week where "The Careless Age," starring Douglas Fairbanks Jr., is being shown. Silverman will be recalled somewhat tearfully by some as a leader who had none of the silly eccentricities so often associated with the profession.

In scoring "The Careless Age" he was assisted by Leonid Leonardi, former leader of the Missouri orchestra, who has also gone Hollywood.

And, if you're wondering what became of the Missouri Rockets, three of them are in the employ of Hollywood studios in chorus roles.

News and Notes on the New York Theaters

Two Openings Last Week —Dorothy Stone Takes Ruby Keeler's Role in the New Version of "Show Girl"—"Jerry for Short" Opens Monday.

By ALPHONSE TONIETTI.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—Favored by cool weather, Broadway courtseyed to the new theatrical season with unwonted cheer and its magic lure attracted stage devotees in fair numbers to the 20 odd plays which have graced its fame during the summer months. Thus the first week of August proved quite heartening to theatrical producers, so that a number of the season's successes were pronounced complete sell-outs while other Broadway features had little to complain about in regard to box office returns. It is true this first August week saw but two openings of no high merit, but the demand voiced on every hand that better plays be put on has tended to galvanize producers into feverish activity in the quest of worthier plays.

"Now-a-days," featuring Peggy Shannon, Mayo Methot, Irene Blair, Duncan Penwarden and Beverly Sitgreaves, were last Monday's opening at the Forest Theater, while "It's a Wise Child," starring Mildred McCoy, Olga Krolow, Minor Watson and George Walcott, opened last Tuesday. The latter play has been pronounced by most critics as containing a number of entertaining episodes and full of deft characterization, but "Now-a-days," which draw on the life of co-eds for its dramatic motif, received scant consideration.

To the list of August openings thus far might be added two musical comedies—"Whoopee" and "Show Girl." The first reopened after three weeks intermission and "Show Girl" underwent a drastic change when Dorothy Stone was called from Hollywood to take the role of Ruby Keeler (Mrs. Al Jolson) as Dixie Dugan. Both comedies have been playing to overcrowded houses. Besides adding a new scene entitled "Mississippi" there are several interesting facts about Ziegfeld's "Show Girl" which have escaped notice. In the minstrel scene, for instance, Mr. Ziegfeld uses for the first time the additional stage with entrances that flank the main proscenium. Here the Jubilee Singers, who formerly featured "Show Boat," appear and heighten the dramatic effect of the drama behind the footlights.

The Almanac Theatrical Corporation will present Murray Anderson's "Almanac" at the Erlanger Theater, Aug. 14. This is to be the first of a series of musical comedies featuring Trixie Friganza, Jimmie Salvo, Eleanor Shaler, William Griffith, Fred Keating, Billie Gerber, Frances Mann, Jack Powell, Frederick Carpenter and Eleanor Terry. There are to be 12 Murray Anderson's models of beauty, the famous six-foot dancing chorus and the 24 Murray Anderson specialty dancers. The music is by Milton Ager and Henry Sullivan, while the lyrics are by Jack Yellen, John Murray Anderson and Edward Elliscu.

"Jerry For Short," a comedy by William A. Grew, with Fiske and Patricia Quinn, will open at the Waldorf Theater Monday; while George "Lefty" Millers' first production of the season will be "Dinner Is Served," an English comedy by Allan Mowbray, which will open next Thursday.

"The Wall Between," the drama by Frank Wilson, who played the title of "Porgy," started rehearsal last week. It is expected on Broadway the second week of September. Immediately following the opening of this piece in Philadelphia on the 26th, Frank Wilson will return to England where he plans to reopen "In Abraham's Bosom," in the British capital. Wilson just closed a highly successful engagement of "All God's Chillun's Got Wings" there.

GEORGE GERSHWIN'S "AMERICAN IN PARIS" PLAYED NEXT WEEK

This analysis makes any further explanation from this writer unnecessary. It is appended herewith:

YOU are to imagine an American, visiting Paris, swinging down the Champs Elysees, on a mild, sunny morning in May or June. Being what he is, he starts without preliminaries, and is off at full speed at once, to the tune of The First Walking Theme, a straightforward, diatonic air designed to convey an impression of Gallic freedom and gaiety.

Our American's ears being open, as well as his eyes, he notes with pleasure the sounds of the city. The French taxicabs seem to amuse him particularly, a fact that the orchestra points out in a brief episode introducing four real Paris taxi horns (imported at great expense for the occasion). These have a special theme allotted to them (the driver, possibly?) which is announced by the strings whenever they appear in the score.

Having safely eluded the taxis, our American apparently passes the open door of a cafe, where, if one is to believe the trombones, La Sorella is still popular. Exhilarated by this reminder of the gay nineteen-hundreds, he resumes his stroll through the medium of the Second Walking Theme, which is announced by the clarinet, in French with a strong American accent.

Both themes are now discussed at some length by the instruments until our tourist happens to pass—something. The composer thought it might be a church, while the commentator held out for the Grand Palais — where the Salon holds forth. At all events, our hero does not go in. Instead, as revealed by the English horn, he respectfully slackens his pace until he is safely past.

At this point the American's itinerary becomes somewhat obscured. It may be that he continues on down the Champs Elysees; it may be that he has turned off—the composer retains an open mind on the subject. However, since what immediately ensues is technically known as a bridge-passage, one is reasonably justified in assuming that the Gershwin pen guided by an unseen hand, has perpetrated a musical pun, and that when the Third Walking Theme makes its eventual appearance our American has crossed the Seine, and is somewhere on the left bank. Certainly it is distinctly less Gallic than its predecessors, speaking American with a French intonation, as befits that region of the city where so many Americans foregather. "Walking" may be a misnomer, for despite its vitality, the theme is slightly sedentary in character, and it becomes progressively more so. Indeed, the end of this section of the work is couched in terms so unmistakably albeit pleasantly blurred as to suggest that the American is on the terrasse of a cafe, exploring the mysteries of an Anise de Lozo.

AND now the orchestra introduces an unhallowed episode. Suffice it to say that a solo violin approaches our hero in the soprano register and addresses him in the most charming broken English; and, his response being inaudible—or at least unintelligible—repeats the remark. This one-sided conversation continues for some little time.

Of course, one hastens to add, it is possible that a grave injustice is being done to both author and protagonist, and that the whole episode is simply a musical transition. The latter interpretation may well be true, for otherwise it is difficult to believe what ensues: Our hero becomes homesick. He has the blues; and if the behavior of the orchestra be any criterion, he has them very thoroughly. He realizes suddenly, overwhelmingly, that he does not belong to this place, that he is that most wretched creature in all the world, a foreigner. The cool, blue Paris sky, the distant upward sweep of the Eiffel Tower, the book stalls on the Quai, the pattern of horse chestnut leaves on the white, sun-flecked street—what avails all this alien beauty? He is no Baudelaire, longing to be "anywhere out of the world." The world is just what he longs for, the world that he knows best; a world less lovely—sentimental and a little vulgar perhaps—but for all that, home.

However, nostalgia is not a fatal disease—nor, in this instance, of overlong duration. Just in the nick of time the compassion of the orchestra rushes another theme to the rescue, two trumpets performing the ceremony of introduction. It is apparent that our hero must have met a compatriot; for this last theme is a noisy, cheerful, self-confident Charleston, without a drop of Gallic blood in its veins.

For the moment, Paris is no more; and a voluble, gusty, wise-cracking orchestra proceeds to demonstrate at some length that it's always fair weather when two Americans get together, no matter where. Walking Theme number two enters, soon thereafter enthusiastically abetted by number three. Paris isn't such a bad place, after all; as a matter of fact, it's a grand place. Nice weather, nothing to do till tomorrow, nice girls—and, by the way, whatever became of that lad Volstead? The blues return, but mitigated by the second Walking Theme—a happy reminiscence rather than a homesick yearning—and the orchestra, in a riotous finale, decides to make a night of it. It will be great to get home; but meanwhile, this is Paris!

as a safety valve in much the same manner. Berlin has fun with the Reichstag and Paris jeers the falling franc with equal hilarity. These local touches, when well presented as they almost always are, are uncommonly amusing even to the foreigner who has the vaguest idea of what political farce is presented. It seems a pity that the art is lost to us. Occasionally you find touches of it in our own revues—we remember a devastating study of the Teapot Dome situation in the Grand Street Follies and a "Strange Interlude" burlesque of the Hoover regime in the same revue last year. But apart from these and that irrepressible and inviolate court jester, Will Rogers, the substance of our average revue is composed of the same moonlight serenades and skits devoted to the relatively impersonal topic of infidelity. Which brings us back to the hopeless but irresistible desire that our revues might produce some local Gilbert and Sullivan who would do their worst with the prohibition situation.

Cosmo Hamilton on Talkies.

LONDON, Aug. 10.—Cosmo Hamilton, author and dramatist, told at a luncheon of the English Speaking Union that Hollywood, instead of starting talkies off on the plane reached by silent films, has "gone back to Sally, the chewing gum queen, and her 6-year-old brother." Nevertheless, he saw a great future for the sound films.

Bebe Daniels Is Now A Colonel or Something in Flying

BEHIND THE SCREENS

By Helen Hurd

Several Studios Working on Pictures To Show on Big Screens

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 10.

IT seems as though a streak of economy has hit the studios. Maybe it is because there is so little doing these days. Everyone seems to be "between" pictures. William Powell is working hard on his starring picture, "Behind the Make-Up" and Hal Skelly is in a clown make-up, totally miserable with a summer cold, and says that all the paint on his face doesn't help matters one bit—Dropped in to see Neil Hamilton, who has been waiting for three weeks for work to start on "Darkened Rooms," He says he's about to give up, and go back to the beach, or get on his new boat—Bebe Daniels can be more places at once than any one I ever saw. She flits about, never leaving any destination date or phone number, until her studio is tearing it's hair. And Bebe does the nicest things for publicity without ever telling anyone about them, which makes her press agent very disgruntled because he is caught without any pictures of her. More than that, half the time, he doesn't even know what it is all about. For instance, the other day, she flew down to Santa Monica, where she was made an honorary colonel of a flying squad which was quartering there. Great stuff for publicity, but Bebe wasn't bothered with that. She was really interested in the occasion, having many solo hours to her credit, and is an ardent flying fan. "What a girl," they wail gleefully at RKO where she has just finished "Rio Rita." John Boles, who has forged ahead faster probably than any star in many a day, and who played with Bebe in "Rio Rita" is moving his make-up over to Universal where he will make an outdoor Peter B. Kyne story, "Three Godfathers." This is the kind of thing John Boles really loves to do, coming from the land of ten gallon hats and whipcord breeches—Colleen Moore has dismissed her staff of secretaries, publicity agents, etc., with the intention of making a trip around the world, but when I talked to Colleen, she was thinking of nothing but her new house, and said she hoped never to leave it. I wouldn't be a bit surprised if she and her husband, John McCormick didn't make the trip via radio in their own living room. Or perhaps in the motion picture theater she has built in her house. It has not been decided where she will hang her hat when she does decide to go back into pictures. Wherever it is, it won't be for a song for they say out here she is the highest salaried woman in the world.

BEBE DANIELS.

TIFFANY-STAHL started on "The Lost Zeppelin" which has to do with two men and a woman. The men get marooned on an iceberg in the far North; womanlike, the gal stays in Washington, D. C., in comfort and ease while poor Conway Tearle and Ricardo get down to their last can of beans on the ice-berg. In the far-famed California weather, which is two degrees cooler than a cook-stove, they sit contemplating this last bit of food in aviators' togs and wooling mittings.

BETTY COMPSON.

"For art's sake," says Conway Tearle.

"Art, my eye, money, boy, money!" says Ricardo.

Conway Tearle has made two talking pictures, his last being the "Gold-digger of Broadway" for Warners. For three years and two months he was out of pictures. Thought he'd play around and have a time.

"And in two months, I got to the point where I wished they had square golf balls to break the monotony," he says.

Ricardo Cortez has a bit of information to report, and that is he will be in St. Louis next winter on a vaudeville tour. Baclanova, by the way, is out on a tour now and having the time of her life. . . . . Back in the "Lost Zep" picture, Virginia Valli, who is a very clever actress, plays the girl. The picture is to be an all talker, and will be one of the most important films of the year from that studio. . . . Others scheduled are "Little Jessee James" in sound and "The Enchanting Melody" in sound and all-color. This studio, rumor has it, is planning to surprise everyone with a Third Dimension film. They have been working on it for about a year, and now announce its perfection. Warners, who have been first in talking and all-color, were reported to be working on a similar arrangement, along with the 40-foot screen. Paramount has already shown some shorts on the double-sized screen. . . . Betty Compson has signed with Tiffany-Stahl to do "Woman to Woman," remade from the silent version. Dorothy Jordan, New York to Hollywood via musical comedy, is only 20 years old and has a new five-year contract with MGM. She has just completed the role of Bianca in Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks' "Taming of the Shrew." One of her outstanding roles was in "Funny Face." . . . Ruth Chatterton is at last going to do the part she has longed to do for so long—"Zaza." Gloria Swanson did it once.

HOLLYWOOD does have its opportunities that aren't press agent hokum. I happen to know of one girl, Marion Dix, who at Washington State University was campus queen two years in succession, and a leader in student activities and who, when she graduated, came to Hollywood and took a job as a stenographer in one of the studios. She wanted to write senarios, and studied screen author's craft assiduously, and in her spare moments worked out a plot. The studio manager listened to her story, and appointed her script clerk, where, on the set, she could learn picture possibilities first hand. One day she was pulled off her job and put to work writing the continuity for "Kibitzer," which features Harry Green, Mary Brian and Neil Hamilton. With this elevation to the ranks of the writers, her ambition has been realized. For those who can produce, there are advantages in Hollywood.

AT the Marion Davies benefit, which is a revival showing of all the old favorites for the benefit of the orphans' clinic, there was a long line in waiting to see Wallace Reid in "Across the Continent." We saw the old Mary Pickford in "Rebecca of Sunny Brook Farm," and she was probably appreciated more than ever after having seen "Coquette." Mrs. Wallace Reid is planning to film a talking picture with an all-Equity cast. Joe E. Brown being selected for the lead. . . .Dick Arlen is all burnt up because uncertain weather conditions which make sea locations unsatisfactory have caused the postponement of his first starring film, "The Lost God." During the short vacation during which another story will be prepared for him, he and his wife, Jobyna Ralston, are planning to head a group of movie people who are leaving Saturday to dedicate various airports of the T. A. T. Nick Stuart and Sue Carol, Lina Basquette and her husband, Peverell Marley, and Olive Borden are in the party. They will leave for Tucson, El Paso and Albuquerque, dedicating each site, and returning immediately, because most of the members of the party are working. . . . Lon Chaney selected Wallace Beery to take his place in the new picture, "Bugle Sounds," which Chaney will not be able to take due to a throat infection. Although the picture was not to be made in sound as Chaney still refuses to speak, Beery does not have same aversion to conversation, the film will be a talkie.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Aug. 11.

FROM E. D., Philadelphia: "Nothing is so annoying or unthoughtful as to insist upon teetotalers drinking at parties where liquor is served. After all the teetotaler would be happier if nobody took a drink. But he does not beef about it."

There's a sermon in a paragraph. And that spec in the air is my hat.

From T. K., Hollywood: "I saw John Gilbert try to crash through a cafe rope while a fellow performer was singing on the floor some time recently. And to everybody's secret delight a headwaiter did not let him get away with it."

Once an actor, always something or other!

From S. D. Y., Boston: "You frequently speak of visits to the dentists. In these days, a man who fools around with dental annoyances is silly. I had both my uppers and lowers yanked two years ago and can eat better and have more comfort than I have had in years."

Move over. I'll be with you soon.

From R. E., New Rochelle: "I am a barber and in 12 years have bought and paid for a modest home and have seven one thousand first-class bonds. I have also sent a son through a technical school. Give the barbers a cheer in your column now and then. There are many who have done the same thing and remember none of us as highly paid."

You deserve not only one cheer but a flock of them. And I hope they are.

From T. T. W., Cincinnati: "I note you have been interviewing every radio columnist is just around the corner. Does that mean, by Allah, you will have to go to work and do something worth while?"

And do you, you scamp, enjoy the outburst of silence?

From "Two Hollywood Readers": "Why do public singers have to interpolate their songs with such piffle as vo-deo-do, poo-pee-doo and such?"

You have to do that to make money.

From Lumberjack, Tacoma, Wash.: "Do you care to comment on the simile: 'As inactive as the Republican administration'?"

I don't. But I've been hearing complaints.

From R. E. R., Washington, D. C.: "My daughter arises every day at 11 a. m., reads your column while she breakfasts, spends an hour in a beauty parlor, plays bridge all afternoon, comes home to dinner full of cocktails and is off again until all hours to jazz dancing. And that is the younger generation you have been cheering?"

Well, anyway, she does one thing worth while every day.

U.S. POWER BOARD CUTS DOWN CAPITALIZATION

Disallows $500,000 Kentucky Firm Had Listed Under That Heading.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—The Federal Power Commission's first step in its program to safeguard public interest by controlling the capitalization of hydro-electric power projects has been taken with the rejection of two items totaling $500,000 in the capitalization of the Cumberland Hydro-Electric Power Co., which is seeking to develop a project at Cumberland Falls, Ky.

The auditor of the commission, it was disclosed today at the commission, refused to approve these items on the basis of opinions from the commission's solicitor.

The opinions dealt with what items should be included in the captalization of any water power projects and listed types of claims which are considered illegitimate.

The two rejected items are $250,000 for the purchase of stock of a company which initiated the development, and $250,000 which the company offered to the State of Kentucky for the creation of a park on land surrounding Cumberland Falls.

The commission's solicitor also has before him $500,000,000 in similar claims by power companies on which opinions are to be given. The commission's former executive secretary, O. C. Merrill, testified before a House appropriations subcommittee early this year that a total of $1,000,000,000 in claims would eventually be involved in connection with projects already under license by the commission.

The Cumberland Falls concern, which has not yet obtained a license, has the right to appeal from the decision of the solicitor and auditor and ask for a hearing before the commission.

UNINCORPORATED AREAS OF COUNTY TO BE IMPROVED

Millions Will Be Spent as Result of Supreme Court Decision, Says Rohan.

As a result of a decision by the Supreme Court of Missouri last week upholding the law for special taxing districts for public improvements in the unincorporated sections of St. Louis County, "millions of dollars" will be spent in the next two years for improvements in these areas, James A. Rohan, president of the County Chamber of Commerce, predicted in a statement yesterday.

Projects that would have come under this law have been delayed for about a year, since the law was held unconstitutional in Circuit Court at Clayton, Rohan pointed out. The law was upheld on appeal. Now it will be possible, he said, to build many needed sidewalks and miles of "side" streets and residential district thoroughfares.

The chamber for some time has been urging the construction of sidewalks as a safety measure, particularly along the more important highways, where there has been suburban population development without the requisite public works. Chamber committees on this subject will resume their activity, the president announced, and will launch a campaign to show the value of making improveemnts.

FREDERICK DAAB DIES; IN BELLEVILLE 50 YEARS

Formerly in Cement and Building Supply Business; Was Native of Germany.

Frederick Daab, a resident of Belleville for more than 50 years, died yesterday of infirmities of age at his home, 623 South High street. He was 85 years old.

A native of Germany, he came to this country as a youth. After his marriage in 1868 he became connected with the St. Louis, Alton & Terre Haute Railroad at New Athens, being transferred to Belleville about 10 years later. In 1880 he established a cement and building supply business, which he conducted until his retirement in 1919. Deeply interested in the history of the first part of the nineteenth century, he often referred to his acquaintance with men who served under Napoleon I in the Russian campaign of 1812, in the Battle of New Orleans, the Mexican War and the Baden Revolution.

Surviving are four daughters, a sister and a granddaughter. Funeral services will be held at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow from the residence, with burial in Walnut Hill Cemetery.

SHOT BY BROTHER-IN-LAW WHEN HE CALLS TO SEE WIFE

Laborer Says He Had Quarreled With Her and Was Seeking a Reconciliation.

David Smith, a laborer of 1922 La Salle street, was shot in the left left shoulder by his brother-in-law, Gerald Parks, yesterday afternoon when he went to the Parks home at 191-8 La Salle street to effect a reconciliation with his wife, Lillian, with whom he had quarreled earlier in the day.

Lieut. Lang of the Soulard Street Police Station arrested Smith after a chase of several blocks and Parks was taken in custody at his home. Smith was taken to city hospital, where physicians said he had been drinking.

Smith denied he had fired a shot.

Fair Winds, Good Forecasts And Skillful Handling Made Zeppelin's Record Possible

Sir Hubert Wilkins Praises, Too, the Attention to Creature Comforts on Air Voyage to Friedrichshafen.

By SIR HUBERT WILKINS.
Explorer who is sailing around the world on the Graf Zeppelin and is writing the story of the journey.

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Aug. 10.—Heartfelt joy was expressed in the faces of the Graf Zeppelin's home town as the noble ship swung once again in triumph over its birthplace. But the joy was no greater than that felt by the international group aboard. The local satisfaction was the knowledge that their faithful work had been rewarded, ours was the reflected glory of their accomplishment.

During the just-completed first quarter of our globe-circling flight, the honors were divided four ways; good Providence provided fair weather on the course; the skilled divination years ago of the possibilities of air travel provided the means which today forestalls nature, affording mankind not only a free choice but a fore-knowledge of the weather, yet the information, to be serviceable, must be skilfully interpreted; Dr. Eckener and his officers and the scientists aboard did well. Thus three goals were secured.

The fourth, not conspicuous, but equally responsible for our success, was the faultless mechanism and the painstaking men who minded it.

Not Forgetting the Steward.

When considering these, one must not overlook the satisfactory catering to creature comfort, administered courteously by the steward.

From the time we rose above the searchlighted shadows at Lakehurst until our landing 55 hours later at Friedrichshafen, there have been continuous thrills, satisfying all varieties of tastes. Some tastes were inclined to food, wines and creature comforts. They were fully satisfied, though the Rhine wines gave out and the champagne dwindled to almost the last bottle.

Others hankered for ultra-modern ragtime and the low comedian laughs. These were proved by Leed's gramophone records.

The American officers were keenly alert to every situation, temporarily escaping the full responsibility for a flight, and they enjoyed the game from the bleacher seats, noting with no small appreciation the clever points exhibited, especially those meteorological.

Avoiding the temptation to push out over the shortest course in the matter of mileage, Dr. Eckener skilfully felt his way eastward from New York until dependable information afforded his exercise of judgment.

Harnessing the Winds.

Then experience counted. Through Dr. Eckener, the selection of air streams was conquered and harnessed. Once we were over the European coast, there was no more need for haste and the commander rested one engine. The course was slightly altered to bring the rising sun before our bow, and Paris dead ahead. We watched and waited, moving from clear sky to cloudy canopies. Forty-eight hours from New York to Paris is almost airplane time, it was scarcely comprehensible that the Zeppelin did it until the Eiffel Tower, spiking the eastern sky at sunrise, awakened the full consciousness quickly for us. The beautiful city slipped from its coverlet of gray mist and many people could be seen gazing upward from their windows as we swung over the city.

Then the passengers sought a little rest and relaxation before landing. Some looked forward to meeting friends. Others were anxious to continue onward to see the lean brown oriental people of Siberia and Fujiyama's snow capped volcanic craters. In a few days, we hope that dream will materialize.

The Zeppelin apparently suffered little. The fabric on three sections of the tail and two sections of the bow are now rather loose, but are easily tightened. The airship was hardly in the hangar before the engineers were busy inspecting the engines, which worked splendidly all the way.

Her Parents and Pilot Seriously Hurt in Los Angeles Crash.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Aug. 10.—A 5-year-old child was killed and three other persons, among them her parents, were seriously injured today when the plane in which they were riding crashed in an outlying section of this city.

Barbara Leedom died shortly after being taken to a hospital. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Webber Leedom, and the pilot, Elwood Thompson, were said to be in a grave condition. The plane, of English type, took off from an airport at Moneta, a suburb, and was gaining altitude when it suddenly went into a nose dive.

"DUKE" SCHILLER AND PARTY MISSING NEAR ARCTIC CIRCLE

Pilot of "Bremen" Fame, Left in Plane Two Weeks Ago From Point Near Hudson Bay.

By the Associated Press.

TORONTO, Aug. 10.—"Duke" Schiller, the first pilot to fly to Greenly Island to the rescue of the Bremen flyers a year ago last spring, is missing in the Canadian wilderness almost up in the Arctic Circle, a special dispatch to the Star stated today.

Schiller and a party consisting of Jack Humble, his mechanic, Tom Creighton and an unnamed prospector have been missing for two weeks, the dispatch stated, and searchers who have been flying over the district on an airplane for several days have seen no sign of them nor their plane.

They set out in an airplane from Baker Lake on a prospecting trip in the vicinity of Wager Bay, on the Northwestern side of Hudson Bay. The district into which they vanished is within 300 miles of the Arctic Circle.

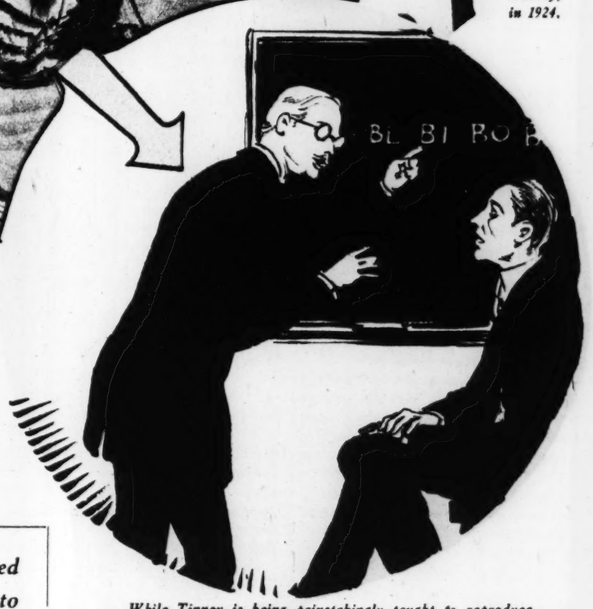
Imogene "Bubbles" Wilson as she looked in 1924.

Bubbles came out of the fracas with a black eye which she credited to Frank Tinney.

Frank Tinney, in 1924.

"Bubbles" ultimately reached a certain eminence in the movies under the name of Mary Nolan—



While Tinney is being painstakingly taught to reproduce the elementary sounds of speech.

One-Time Broadway Star Being Taught—Like a Child—to Speak Again

HOW the Destinies of Frank Tinney and "Bubbles" Wilson Led One to Poverty and Shattered Health and the Other to Affluence in Hollywood, After a Famous "Rough-House" Episode That Shocked and Amused New York.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

PHILADELPHIA.

THEY are teaching Frank Tinney to speak again. Like a child, he repeats over and over the exercises he is given, the vowel sounds combined with various consonants. The Frank Tinney of today is so shattered, still so altered, that it is difficult to realize that less than five years ago he was a headliner, a $4000-a-week comedian in a class with Al Jolson and Leon Errol. There was a mis-step that got into the newspapers, a dizzying downward fall and now he sits at the bottom trying to build up some semblance of the personality on which his success of old was built.

His companion when he started on this swift trip toward oblivion, Imogene "Bubbles" Wilson, has fared much better. Under the name of Mary Nolan she has achieved considerable success in the movies. But she is lovely and blonde and young.

It is different with Tinney. He fell so fast and so hard that he was left pretty much broken up. His health was seriously impaired, his mind shattered and the fortune he had accumulated melted away almost overnight. His wife divorced him, obtaining custody of their son, and as a kind of last reminder that his luck had turned his $75,000 home at Oceanside, Long Island, burned down with all its furnishings.

TODAY he is virtually a pensioner in the modest home of his father, Hugh Tinney, a printer. The house is one of a long row of identical brick structures on South Sixteenth street of this city. All day long children play noisily in the street and at night housewives take the air in littered doorways. There is a narrow iron bed, with a crucifix above it, two or three chairs and some religious prints on the wall. It is here that he is struggling to retain the simplest elements that go to make up a normal human being. He is learning to talk, learning to co-ordinate his movements. This is the man who was known as the foremost black-face comedian in the world.

Recently he tried in a small way to come back. Through a friend of the old days, Dave Roth, a theatrical producer, a personal appearance was arranged for Tinney in the revue at La Victorie, an Atlantic City night club. He was able to come out and make a little talk, announcing the acts to follow. His name in lights attracted the crowds and there was again the almost forgotten sound of applause. All this seemed to bring back something of Tinney's old confidence. But the act closed after a week's run because of a row between Roth and the owner of the night club over the closing hour. Visibly distressed, Tinney came back to Philadelphia, realizing that it will be a long time before he gets another chance. Perhaps it will never come.

Broadway got a big laugh when Tinney and Bubbles Wilson took a tumble. Bubbles was in the chorus of the Follies and Tinney had just ended a long run in the Music Box Revue. This was in 1924. It was Bubbles who started all the trouble. She walked into a police station one day and charged Tinney with beating her up, kicking her and knocking her down. She may really have been peeved but there were those who said she had an eye on the publicity.

Plenty of publicity followed and apparently even Tinney and Imogene thought at first that it was all just a big joke. The courtroom scenes went over big, with broad comic relief afforded by Carrie, Miss Wilson's Negro maid. It developed that Carrie had taken part in the battle of the Wilson apartment. Tinney claimed that Bubbles had advanced on him with an ice-pick and that when he had tried to defend himself Carrie, of Herculean proportions, had landed on him. But Bubbles told how when she had rushed forward to kiss Tinney, whom she found waiting in her apartment, he had knocked her down and then in a very ungentlemanly fashion had proceeded to beat her up.

All this was interspersed with wisecracks and a little narrative of how Tinney made an appearance in Bubbles' kimona and Carrie's earrings. There was a capacity house for every sitting of the court and it was all uproariously funny.

But after a while it developed that there were certain phases of the case rather less amusing. For one thing, Florenz Ziegfeld couldn't see the joke. He declined to glorify Miss Wilson further and fired her from the chorus of the Follies. Too, Tinney's wife, Edna Davenport Tinney, demonstrated that she was strangely lacking in a sense of humor. Hardly had Imogene's charges been dismissed, toward the end of June, when Mrs. Tinney announced that she intended to file suit for separation.

Frank Tinney—today.

While process-servers were seeking Tinney on the boat on which he was about to sail for London, Mrs. Tinney spoke caustic words about life with Frank. "I've had all I can stand," she said. "I've tried to play on the level and be a good fellow and a regular pal. But you can only use a postage stamp once and I guess that about describes me."

Things grew sterner and colder in England even though Bubbles came over in a few months to liven up the scene. Mrs. Tinney's lawyer, according to papers filed later in the suit, said he found Tinney at the Royal Turk's Head Hotel, Newcastle-on-Tyne, registered with a woman whom, employes said, the comedian called Bubbles.

It was not long after this that Bubbles left for Paris and later for Germany, where she first entered the movies. Tinney was literally down to bedrock. Engagements in the London music halls had become scarcer and scarcer and a reporter found him in April, 1925, living in an obscure, shabby hotel, devoid of even the convenience of running water. He was living on canned beans and crackers and cheese. Everything he owned back in the United States had been tied up by Mrs. Tinney's lawyers in a quest for alimony and counsel fees.

A friend loaned him enough money to get back to New York. Earl Carroll gave him a place in the then current Vanities and for a time it looked as though Tinney might win his old place on Broadway. At least he was holding down a job fairly creditably. And this despite his wife's threat that she would have him put in jail if he did not pay the $1400 in alimony he had allowed to accumulate. Even this little matter was somehow adjusted and Tinney went on tour with the Vanities company.

It was in Detroit that the crash came. He played until the moment when it was no longer physically possible, and then collapsed. For days he hung between life and death. He was suffering, according to physicians, from pleurisy, nervous exhaustion and an infection from two fractured ribs, all augmented by acute alcoholism.

He recovered sufficiently to return to Philadelphia, late in 1926, but almost immediately was again taken seriously ill. For several months he lay in the Navy Yard Hospital here, too ill to know where he was, or to care.

On the day that he was discharged from the hospital there were few who would have recognized him as the dapper, ingratiating comedian whose swift patter had won a nation's laughter. He weighed only 95 pounds. His face had lost its round, babyish contours and the horn-rimmed spectacles that he wore gave him an almost spectral look. His black hair was flecked with white. He had lost the power of speech and could only partially make himself understood by means of vague sounds. It was difficult for him to walk or to perform any of the ordinary functions of existence.

LIVING in a shadowy world, he could scarcely comprehend the depths of his ruin. His wife had won a final decree. She had obtained the custody of their son, Frank Tinney Jr., who was then seven years old. The court had awarded her $200 a week alimony and the Tinney estate on Long Island and other properties were being sold to realize this sum.

In the two years that have followed Tinney has been sustained by two things—the loyalty of an old friend and the impersonal effort of a distinguished scientist who hopes to rehabilitate him. To these two should be added a third, the care and affection of his father.

The friend is Eddie Cassady, a partner of Tinney's earlier days with the Dumont Minstrels here in Philadelphia. Cassady has been content with a more modest success. Though he has never approached the pinnacle that Tinney reached, he has always made a good living and seldom has been without work on the stage.

He has come almost every day during the past 27 months to the brick

The COUNTESS who STOLE for LOVE

Though Helga Von Monroy Escaped the Penalties of the Court a More Terrible Punishment Followed Her Revelation That She Had Been Giving Money to a Spendthrift Lover.

Countess Helga von Monroy with her attorney.

BERLIN.

THE law did not punish the beautiful Countess Helga von Monroy for her crime, and the throng of curious that was thrilled by the recent trial of her case was more than a little disappointed by its unexpected outcome. In fact, the trial was a mere formality. The Countess Hermesberger, who had accused Helga of having robbed her safe, told the Court that in view of the defendant's motives she was willing to drop the charge; the counsel for the defense moved that the case be dismissed, and the Court ordered the immediate release of the prisoner. Countess von Monroy was free.

This brief trial, however, was not the final act in the strange society drama of the German capital, and Helga von Monroy had yet to face another trial, less merciful and forbearing than court justice had been to her. Shortly after she left the courtroom, she learned that her fiance, for whose love she became a thief, had committed suicide. It was the cruel revenge of fate and the tragic climax of her romance of love and crime.

Countess Helga von Monroy belongs to one of those titled German families who lost their fortunes in the war. Fifteen years ago her father was wealthy; he had a large estate in Prussia and played rather a prominent role in the life of the Prussian capital, despite the fact that he had married a woman of no social standing.

THE mother of Helga von Monroy was an equestrienne, the star performer of a circus, which toured the Continent. She and her sister, a rope walker, were the chief attractions of the circus. Both were beautiful, and it was no wonder that every night an army of admirers applauded their daring feats. Suitors surrounded the two sisters, and finally both married far above their social status.

The equestrienne became the wife of Count Monroy. The rope walker married Count Hermesberger. For a time neither of them was received in exclusive German society, but eventually their tact, charm and beauty broke down the barriers of prejudice and they became full-fledged members of the inner circle of the elect. Shortly before the outbreak of the war they were received at the imperial court of William II.

The fortunes of the two sisters, which ran parallel up to about 10 years ago, diverged after the war. Count Monroy died, leaving his family almost penniless; while Count Hermesberger succeeded in conserving his property and, upon his death, left a fortune to his widow. Countess Hermesberger had no children, and she gave every kind of assistance to Countess Helga and her mother. She paid their rents, gave a monthly allowance to her sister and was liberal in gifts to her niece. Helga worked for a time as a stenographer and was able to support herself.

The complications in the life of Countess Helga began about a year ago when she made the acquaintance of a young army Lieutenant named Otto von Wedel. He also was of an old family left penniless by the war, and he was forced to make his way in life without family assistance. He was a handsome, well-educated young man—just the type Countess Helga had always sought for a husband. Wedel, on his part, found Helga charming, and before long their acquaintance developed into mutual love. One day Wedel proposed to Helga, telling her frankly that he was poor and for a few years it would be necessary for them to depend on the dowry of Countess Helga.

Had Helga been courageous enough to tell him she had no dowry, that she was as poor as he, her name would never have been dragged before the public in connection with the most sensational society scandal of recent years. But she had not the firmness to be frank. She was afraid of losing the man she loved—and so she lied. She told him everything would be all right, and the only thing she had to do was to talk over the practical matters with her mother and her aunt, and to break down their possible opposition.

THE opposition of Aunt Hermesberger, however, was not to be removed so easily. When Helga made a cautious hint at the possibility of her marriage to young Wedel, the aunt positively refused to consider the nonsense of her marrying a poor man.

"You know well," she said, "that you haven't a cent. You must marry a rich man—if you don't, you cannot count on me. No beggar is going to live in luxury on my money. Forget this silly affair with Wedel."

But Helga could not forget. She met Wedel secretly almost every day and found that she loved him too much to give him up. Thus she kept on deceiving him about her supposed dowry, and young Wedel had no misgivings. He believed her so implicitly as to tell her about his own financial difficulties. Yes, he had debts, serious debts, amounting to thousands of dollars. And these debts had to be paid. He couldn't see any other way out of the mess than to pay or to commit suicide. Helga promised to help him.

A few days later Helga gave 20,000 marks to Lieutenant Wedel. The same day the Countess Hermesberger employed one of the ablest detectives in Berlin to find out how a number of negotiable securities could have disappeared from her safe, the combination of which was known to no one but herself.

The detective began a secret investigation. There were only four persons living in the house of the Countess herself, Countess Helga, who for the time was staying with her aunt, a maid and a cook.

Two weeks later the detective told Countess Hermesberger he suspected some one, but had no proofs. For three months Countess Hermesberger kept her counsel, and nothing unusual transpired in her home. Finally, the day after Helga had ended her stay, she found that her jewels had disappeared. She telephoned to the detective, who obtained a detailed description of the jewels and said that probably he soon would be able to make an arrest.

The detective questioned a number of Berlin jewelers. One of them showed a diamond bracelet he had brought the day before. A very well-dressed and pretty young woman had sold it, he said. The detective recognized the bracelet as having been among the stolen jewels of Countess Hermesberger. Now there could be little doubt as to the identity of the thief. Still, the detective took no chances but shadowed his suspect. She was the Countess Helga von Monroy.

IT SOON appeared that Helga was having secret meetings with Lieutenant Wedel. Yet this in itself was no proof of her guilt and did not establish a possible motive for the theft. The detective also learned that Helga bought nothing for herself, so she could not have spent the money she received from the jeweler who bought the bracelet, and possibly from other jewelers. Besides, she did not know the combination of Countess Hermesberger's safe. But in case she was the thief, the detective decided, the only other person who had anything to do with the affair must be the Lieutenant.

Thereupon the detective investigated the affairs of Lieutenant Wedel. He found that the young man had debts and lived above his means. He had made payments on his debts within two days. Several months previously he had made payments to two of his creditors. That was only 48 hours after the first theft in the apartment of Countess Hermesberger.

Nothing remained, then, but to arrest Helga.

She broke down and confessed she had robbed the safe and given the money realized to her fiance. She knew the combination, because she saw her aunt open the safe several times and observed closely. She did not want to steal, she said. She hadn't spent a cent on herself. All the money went to Lieutenant Wedel. She did not want him to know she was a poor girl, and she tried to help him, even at the cost of committing a disgraceful crime.

Lieutenant Wedel, when questioned by the police, could only say that he had accepted the money from Helga in good faith. They released him. Two hours later his butler found him shot dead, his service revolver lying beside him. He left a note on the table, saying:

"I did not commit any crime and yet I am dishonored."

A Cowboy uses Rope for Mashie

Rodeo Champion and Landscape Painter, He Finds Long Island Lawns Too Tame, After Arizona Deserts.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

NEW YORK.

"I MUST have my thirty-six holes of golf every day! And this is how I get it!"

With a mocking grin, Jack Van Ryder leaned out of the saddle of his Mexican pony to express a cowpuncher's contempt for the favorite pastime of Eastern dudes. To the cowboy-artist from Arizona, the practice of chasing a little white ball around, when the world is full of calves to be roped, seems the height of idiocy. Van Ryder straightened up, touched Kitty's gray nose lightly with the bridle and galloped madly off across the meadow—a virile figure in a decadent setting. For the scene is not desert Arizona, but an estate in a fashionable colony near the old Long Island town of Easthampton.

A year ago, Jack Van Ryder came out of the West with a rope and some pictures. Arrived in New York, he entered the rodeo lists at Madison Square Garden, exhibited his 32 paintings of Western landscapes at the Montross Galleries, and met Margaret Swain.

The stranger from Arizona carried off rodeo honors for bareback-riding and bulldogging; won acclaim in the art world for the form, action and color on his canvases, and fell in love at first sight with Margaret Swain. She was a member of an old New York family, and Jack Van Ryder was a new type of man among her acquaintances. In him she found the curious combination of primitive strength and artistic sensitiveness. The fact that she herself was a sculptress and painter created an added bond between these two, who were socially as separate as the parts of the country they came from. Besides, Mrs. Swain had bought "Solito," the artist's own favorite among his paintings. After a whirlwind courtship, they were married in the West.

"You see, I had to marry her to get that painting back," Mr. Van Ryder declared, grinning.

Transplanting those Arizona cactuses which seem to thrive in New York apartments is a simple matter compared to removing Jack Van Ryder. When he came East with his paintings, having definitely decided on slinging the paint brush instead of the rope professionally, Mr. Van Ryder sold his Spiked Box Ranch near the little desert town of Continental, Ariz., keeping only his two favorite ponies, Kitty and Badger.

The first thing that Jack Van Ryder did when he and his bride reached their Long Island home was to turn Kitty and Badger loose in such clover as had never colored their simple Arizona dreams. Then, to further make East seem West, he built a big corral adjoining their four-acre pasture. At one end of the inclosure, he constructed a miniature Western chute. Except that it holds only four calves instead of 400, every detail is a perfect copy of the big Western chutes, made to hold cattle ready for the branding-iron. And here Mr. Van Ryder comes daily to get his equivalent of the scorned 36 holes of golf, and keep his hand in training.

SITTING in the little room that Mrs. Van Ryder has remodeled into a studio-workshop for her husband, he stared out of the ivy-bound window into a smug flower garden—a cooped-up Arizona Olympian, full of nostalgia for his own country, where gigantic pink and orange mountains, and strange shrubs, fade into grotesque shadows in the purple sunsets.

"No," he said, "I can't paint this country. I don't see any color in it. It's all monotonous."

Enough adventure to fill 10 dime novels is crowded into Jack Van Ryder's life. In more ways than one, he has pulled himself up by his Mexican bootstraps since the day 35 years ago when a son was born in the Arizona desert to a hard-bitten Boer Dutchman and his wife. The long trek from Africa had not softened father Van Ryder's nature, nor humanized his manners. For his children he had only hard looks and hard knocks.

Young Jack's A B C's were a rope, a branding-iron and a milk pail. To mention school was to invite another lashing. But if he didn't talk about education, he thought about it. Thought about it so much that he ran away from home to get it. At the age of 15 he laid down his father's saddle and rope one day and walked out of the loveless Van Ryder nest.

In the following years, he worked with nearly every cow outfit in the West. After the first two years of wrangling horses in Montana he was promoted to the job of nighthawk. This honor meant that he had to stay up all night with the horses and corral them at daybreak.

"Many a stormy night, I'd lose half my horses," Mr. Van Ryder said. "And you know the foreman won't accept an excuse. In the spring when it rains continually, I'd go for days without a dry stitch of clothes. Wet and chilled to the bone, I'd say to myself, 'I'll quit in the morning.' But I always stuck it out."

In the fall, the young rancher packed up his saddle and moved on to Nevada, where he got a job running mustangs in the Owyhee desert. When the day's run was over, the cowboy was through and for the first time, Jack found time hanging on his hands.

"I found an old pencil," Mr. Van Ryder said. "And it was then that I made my first sketch, a drawing of the boss pulling his hair and cussing about lost horses. It made a hit with everybody but him, and I expected to get fired. But I found out later that he really was tickled, and the sketch is still hanging in his home."

From that time on, Jack Van Ryder sketched everything. However light he traveled, he managed to pack some canvas-boards and tubes of paint. The winter he was snowed in, he broke his leg. That served to turn the course of his paintbrush from oils to water colors. Painfully, he would drag a bucket of water to a place beside his chair. And there, sitting day after day, he painted the first of his interesting water colors.

In 1916 the border was a dangerous place and cowboys got big wages. The prospect of gold and excitement drew Van Ryder to New Mexico. And when Pancho Villa raided Columbus, he was one of the band that followed and surrounded the bandits.

The World War interrupted his roping activity for a time. He entered it as a doughboy and came out a Captain. Back again in civilian life, a friend staked him to an outfit, and he started all over again, wrangling and roping and bulldogging.

Jack Van Ryder.

The lure of Hollywood gets cowboys as well as bathing beauties. Several years ago, Jack Van Ryder tried his rope in the silent celluloids. Movie life soon bored him, and when a producer offered him a contract for 12 Western pictures he turned it down and went back to the range.

Neck and neck in his affection are two prized possessions: a reproduction of a Western drawing by Charles N. Russell, the artist who first looked at Van Ryder's work, and said, "That's fine painting! Stick to it!"; and a wide leather belt with a huge gold buckle bearing the engraved likeness of a cowboy on a bucking horse. Below the gold bas-relief is the inscription, "Jack Van Ryder, North American Champion Bareback Rider, Calgary, Alberta, Canada, 1927."

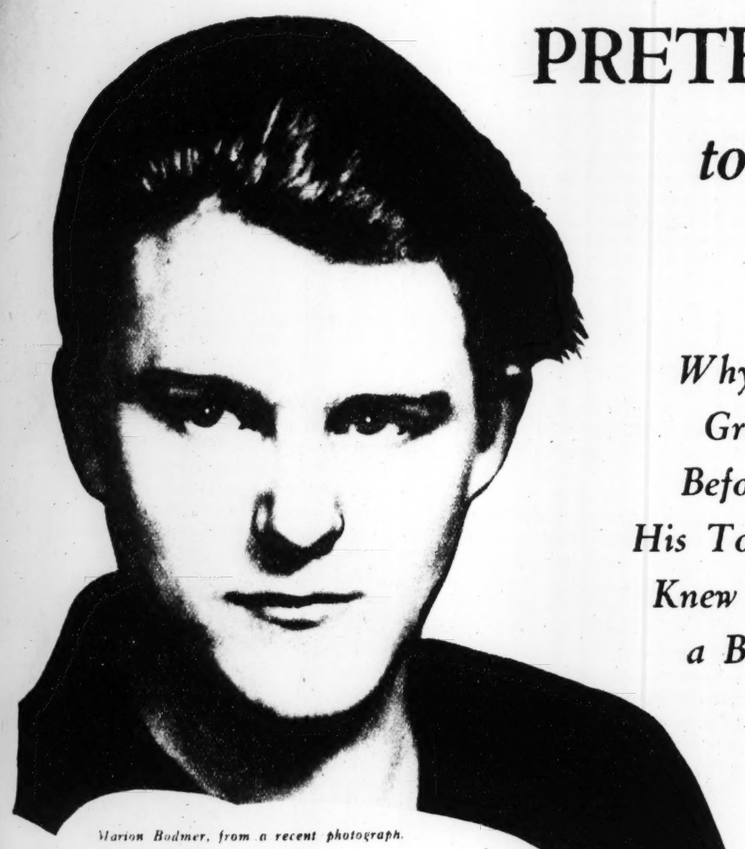
Why Marion Bodmer Grew to Manhood Before Any of His Townspeople Knew He Was a Boy.



Marion Bodmer, from a recent photograph.

By M. W. CHILDS
Of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine Staff

SELINSGROVE, Pennsylvania.

IN THAT uncertain moment that immediately follows upon the birth of a child, the destiny of Marion Bodmer was badly bungled. There was a mistake. A mistake that Marion's parents have tried for 19 years to rectify.

That, at least, is their version of the strange unmasking that took place here the other day. A certain crucial time had come and Mr. and Mrs. Bodmer mustered up the courage they have been striving to find for years and simply announced that the Marion Bodmer who has always been accepted as a wiry and athletic girl is not really a girl at all but a boy. The effect on this small town can be imagined.

The burden of blame for the initial error that has caused so much unhappiness the Bodmers place upon the physician who brought Marion into the world. The child was born some weeks in advance of schedule, and, as is sometimes said to be true in such instances, the sex was indeterminate. After a period of 10 days, the doctor pronounced Marion a girl. Less than a week afterward the doctor sailed to do missionary work in Turkey, leaving the Bodmers to face what was soon to become a tragic anomaly, a fact that they vigilantly kept secret until a short time ago.

The town, of course, has a slightly different version. The townsfolk, most of whom are descended from Pennsylvania-Dutch stock, are inclined to put part of the blame on the parents. The mistake, they say, may have had its origin with the doctor, but, they ask, why couldn't Mr. and Mrs. Bodmer have spoken out long ago? It is intimated that Mrs. Bodmer wanted Marion to be a girl, fought strenuously to make him play his part in keeping the secret.

The Bodmers have an answer to this. They say they were ashamed to confess the mistake. Fear of humiliation and ridicule kept them silent. They have had their share of both in the widespread publicity that has followed the unmasking. Mrs. Bodmer has taken to the consolation of tears and a darkened room, Bodmer and an older son, Eugene, to a blustering hostility. But with the first sense of relief that the truth was at last out, the father disclosed what it has meant to keep such a secret. The boy was sent off to a preparatory school at Allentown, four hours away by train.

WHATEVER the origin of the mistake, it has made Marion Bodmer's life a torture of painful distortions, subterfuges and concealments that are part of his earliest memories.

During the first few months of the child's life, the parents tried to force themselves to tell their friends there had been a mistake, Bodmer relates. "But the longer we kept the secret the more difficult it became for us even to think of telling. After a while came the time for Marion to discard baby clothes, and then we had to decide whether to buy him skirts or breeches, but we didn't have the strength of will to make the revelation just then and we found ourselves taking the easiest way out, dressing him as a girl. He went to public school as soon as he was old enough."

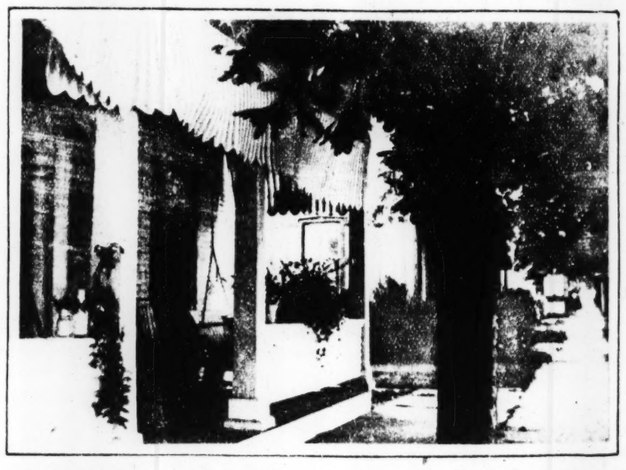
In those first years, when differences of taste and temperament do not markedly set apart the sexes, the strangeness of the situation was minimized. There were times when Mr. and Mrs. Bodmer almost forgot that Marion wasn't a girl.

Then an incident occurred that brought the fact before them all so forcibly that they could never slip into easy forgetfulness again.

Marion, at 9 years of age, discovered an approximation of the truth. He had always wanted to play with boys, but his mother would never let him and the boys themselves seldom tolerated him. One day he hid in some bushes along the shore of the Susquehanna River and watched the boys in swimming. It was hot weather, they wore no bathing suits, Marion's powers of observation were unimpaired. These were boys, he was like them, therefore he was not a girl, but a boy. He ran home to report this startling discovery, and as a reward was severely punished.

His mother and father both assured him again and again that he was a girl, that he must never question that fact, that he mustn't think about such things at all. They succeeded only in confirming his suspicion. The logic, based on the evidence he had seen with his own eyes, was too conclusive. But for a long time his parents would not permit him to bring up the subject.

"The next 10 years were a horrible nightmare," Bodmer says. "To add to our own grief and uncertainty was the pain of watching Marion try to play the game."



The Bodmer home at Selinsgrove, Pa.

THE boy accepted the role because he had to, but in secret he rebelled. He acquired the reputation of being something of a tomboy among the mothers of the town. He grew gangling and awkward. All this time the secret was kept even from Eugene, the older brother.

"As time passed," the father tells, "he began to shun girls and wanted to play with boys. But they wouldn't have him. He used to cry because he had to wear dresses. He never had the chance to play as other boys and girls do because he found he was so far apart from them.

"Meanwhile, the masquerade had been kept up so long that merely the thought of revealing it was too horrifying for his mother and I to think of. The three of us used to talk it over when we were alone, and our older child, Eugene, was out of the house, but talking and crying was as far as we ever got with it."

There was, however, one activity in which Marion found a comparatively normal outlet. Once in high school he developed into a fine basket-ball player, and for three years held a place as forward on the girls' team. He could throw all his rapidly-developing masculine strength into the game. But here, too, subterfuge was necessary. It was noticed that Marion always dressed at home and left the high-school gymnasium immediately after the game. The girls with whom he was thrown put him down as queer.

How he managed to conceal his identity when games were played with high schools in other towns his father does not yet know. Questions so embarrassing that they could not even be put into words were continually confronting the three who shared this secret.

Marion was developing into a wiry, athletic type. His voice was a little coarse, he was a little clumsy, his hair was cut short like a boy's, but this was scarcely commented on. He wore rather boyish clothes, knickers frequently, and a leather sport coat, but neither was there anything uncommon about this. What chiefly marked him was his isolation. He rarely took part in any activities of the school other than the sports. He had only two or three close friends among the girls, and left the boys almost entirely alone. Everyone liked him well enough in school, apparently, but there was a tendency to set him apart.

"In June of last year came his graduation night from the high school," his father continues. "We bought him an orchid georgette dress and all the other clothes that go with such an occasion, and he made a mighty handsome appearance. His hair was trimly bobbed and he did look well at that commencement if I do say it myself. We were so proud, and yet we were sad. We realized the impossibility of the situation."

BUT for still another year any decisive action was delayed. The boy, beginning to emerge from adolescence, had by this time become more painfully self-conscious of his position. He says now that he could hardly endure to walk down the main street of the town before the people who knew him best. More and more he became a solitary, going on long fishing and hunting expeditions alone. Sometimes he was away all day.

By way of trying to make up to him for what he suffered, his father bought him an expensive car. He usually drove slumped down at the wheel, hatless, and startled neighbors often had a glimpse of that "odd Bodmer girl" tearing by at 50 or 60 miles an hour. "He could drive as well as any man when he was only 18," his father says.

Too, the father provided a tutor at home, for the boy's ambition would not be stifled. He was determined that he was going to be a lawyer some day.

All during this year he had private lessons in various subjects preparatory to college. This was a heavy financial burden, but somehow it was managed.

Virtually his only companion at this time was a high-school teacher, a young woman who had graduated from Susquehanna University, a Lutheran college situated here, some two or three years before. These two were often seen together. Otherwise, Marion was almost friendless.

Then one day came a showdown. A long-pent-up rebellion broke out. Whether any specific incident brought it about, neither father nor son will disclose. But it broke, and a violent scene followed. The parents finally realized that the pretense could be kept up no longer, and they yielded.

Still, they hoped the whole thing could be quietly done. They took Marion to Harrisburg and invested $100 in a masculine wardrobe. These were the first clothes, the boy says, that he really wanted to wear. Then they took him to Allentown, where he enrolled in the boys' preparatory school there as though it were the most matter of course thing in the world.

But inevitably word got back to this pleasant old town that lies along the Susquehanna. It didn't take long, either. It was then that the father confirmed the fact that Marion is a boy. As might have been expected in a community of this size, a number of rumors followed. It was even said that the Bodmer family had reached an open break over the question of whether or not the boy should continue the masquerade. It was then that Marion did a very courageous thing. He left school to come home for two days, so that the family might present a united front. It meant enduring the frank stares of his fellow townsmen, but it was, perhaps, even a little proudly that he displayed his masculine attire.

HIS appearance has markedly changed, those who knew him best say. Clothes in this instance have, indeed, made the man. A certain shyness that was once characteristic is now missing. A slight stubble of beard, much darker than his light, blond hair, can be seen.

He has received several offers to tour vaudeville circuits, but has ignored them, although the monetary rewards are tempting, in view of the long and expensive law course. His appearance today is such that he would pass unnoticed among any crowd of normal boys. On the playgrounds and tennis courts of the Allentown school he is rapidly losing all traces that the immediate past may have left. He will complete the first term at Allentown on August 8, and then probably return here until school opens in the fall.

A neighbor who saw him changing a tire once and heard him swearing says now she suspected the truth.

ALMOST everyone in town is now saying, I told you so. Scarcely anyone but who professes to have seen early evidences of Marion's masculinity. One neighbor recalls having seen him change a tire, watching him stamp it on the rim, even hearing him swear a little under his breath. "I just thought at the time, that certainly is a strong girl," she says. Another can remember remarking that his prowess at basket ball was far above that of the average girl.

Uniformly, Marion's former schoolmates remain loyal to him. They have little to say about the affair. They become confused over their pronouns, alternately using "he" and "she," stumble and stammer, blush and conclude with an expression of friendship. Almost everyone to whom I talked expressed sympathy for the boy, and, correspondingly, criticism of the parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Bodmer feel their "disgrace" keenly, but it will be forgotten, for they are a highly respected family. He is Chief Burgess of the town, an office corresponding to that of Mayor. A Democrat, he was elected on a wet platform. Before prohibition he was a wholesale liquor dealer. Now he is a master baker, going each day to work at the Sunbury Baking Company, in the town just above and across the river. His salary, which is modest, has to be stretched a long way to cover the expenses of Marion's school at Allentown. But the father feels that this is a slight sacrifice.

"Nothing I can do now will ever make it up to him. I'm afraid," he says. "But I'm going to try and do everything I can."

AS FOR Marion, he is gradually adjusting himself to his true identity. The publicity that followed at first made it difficult. But the whole affair is gradually being forgotten in the routine of school. He hopes to have sufficient credits to enter the Dickinson School of Law at Carlisle in the fall, although he is doubtful that he will be able to achieve this. Even with the handicap that he has had, he has invariably done excellent work in school.

"I want to forget the whole thing," he says. "I want to put it out of my mind altogether. It's the future that counts. I didn't do anything to bring all this about."

Some day he hopes to go away, perhaps to California, and make his career. He wants to escape his past. Because, as he himself has said, it is not his past but the past of an unhappy person who no longer exists.

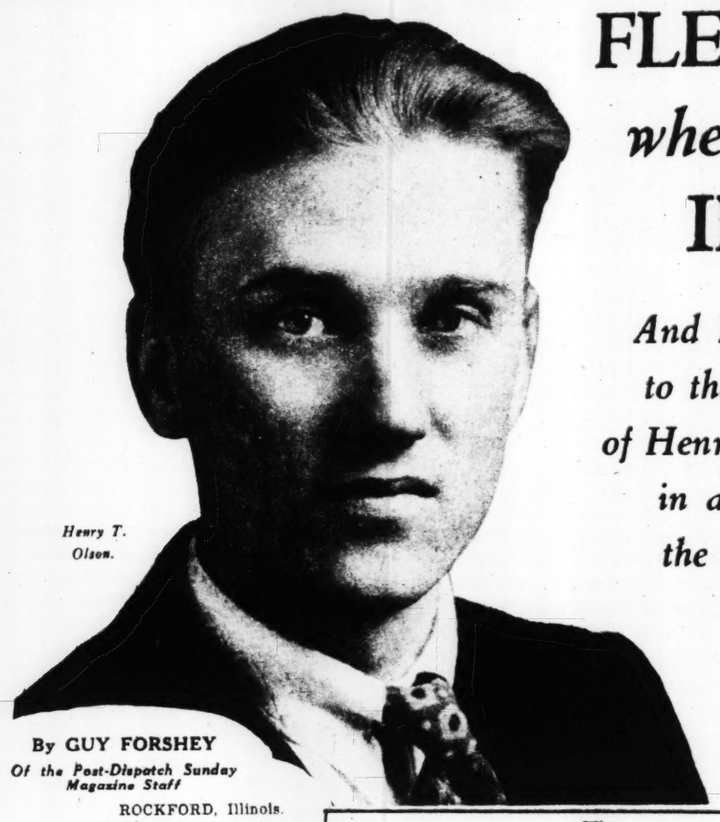
And Now the Sequel to the Strange Case of Henry Olson Develops in a Suit Against the Lawyer Who Defended Him.



Henry T. Olson.

Olson and his former attorney, Harry North, from a photograph when they were still friendly.

By GUY FORSHEY

ROCKFORD, Illinois.

HIDING away in an obscure New Orleans rooming house a year and a half ago, Henry T. Olson was a fugitive from justice, with a price on his head. A jury had found him guilty of the murder of a Rockford filling-station attendant and a Judge had sentenced him to life imprisonment. At liberty on bail pending appeal, he had jumped his $10,000 bond and, with his wife, had fled by a circuitous route to lower Louisiana, where he was dodging furtively about, hoping against hope to remain unobserved until affairs should take a different turn at home. The turn for which he hoped most desperately was that the real murderer would be apprehended. For Henry T. Olson was innocent of the crime of which he had been accused and found guilty. His defense had been conducted ably enough by Harry B. North, Rockford attorney, but certain peculiar incriminating circumstances had combined to fasten guilt upon him.

Keeping as far away from Rockford as possible, Olson had one chance of escaping prison. It lay in the slender possibility that before he should be recaptured, North or somebody else would ferret out the real murderer and get a confession. It was almost too much to expect in real life. It was the sort of thing likely to happen only in fiction. But in the case of Henry Olson this fictionesque denouement actually occurred. North did ferret out the criminal, or helped to do so, at any rate. So it happened that after 10 days in exile, Olson picked up a New Orleans newspaper one afternoon and read a happy and incredible story. It told him that he might now return home, for the real murderers of the filling-station attendant had confessed. He was a free man. The cloud had been lifted and he could walk through the streets again instead of through the alleys. He expressed himself as very happy and very grateful to Attorney North when he returned to Rockford a few days later and heard himself formally vindicated by the court.

He has remained a free man since then, but that feeling of gratitude to his attorney, it appears, was not destined to endure long. It may be argued that gratitude is at best a short-lived sentiment and seldom endures long in any case, but in the case of Henry Olson it actually turned to a feeling of bitter resentment. It grew and festered until, a short time ago, Olson astonished followers of the case by filing a $50,000 damage suit against the attorney who had defended him.

THE suit is based upon Olson's contention that North, while defending him, had knowledge of the guilt of the real slayers and was "careless and negligent in arranging a proper and sufficient defense."

As a result of this "carelessness," he alleges, he was compelled to suffer the agony and humiliation of false arrest, of two trials, of ultimate conviction on a charge of which he was innocent, and of exile as a fugitive. Not only this, he adds, but he had to pay North $4250 in fees for defending him and $3000 to detectives in an effort to uncover facts to prove his innocence. He intends to get some measure of compensation for all the trouble and money this murder case cost him, he declares, and, since the State does not compensate falsely-convicted persons, he is going to try and get it from the man most responsible for his misfortune. That man, he says, is Harry B. North.

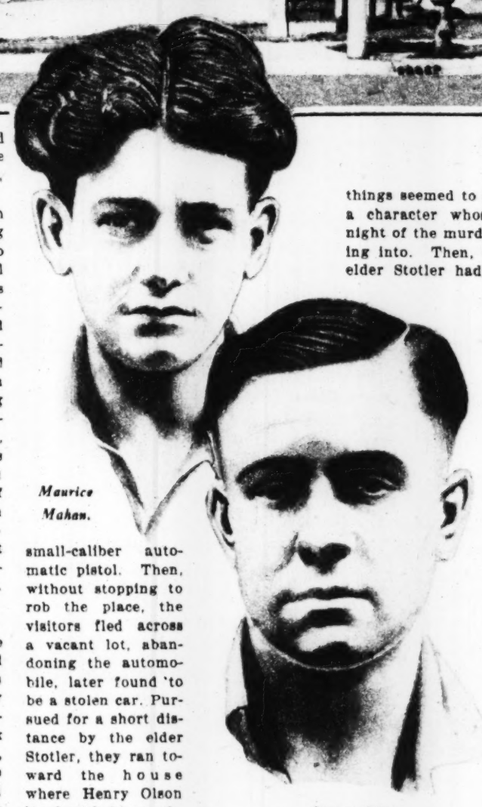
Against this contention that North was "responsible" for his suffering and expense there is much, it seems, to be said, and North has said it in a full statement of his side of the case. His reaction, apparently, is that of amazement that the very factors which led to solution of the mystery, and therefore to Olson's exoneration, should now be turned against him by the man who was benefited most. According to Olson's version of the circumstances, North, while defending him, also was retained to defend two youths on a concealed-weapons charge, and by that means gained knowledge of their guilt in the crime of which Olson was accused; that he failed to produce this evidence in court because it affected other clients, and thus permitted Olson to take a life sentence.

NORTH now points out—and produces the record to prove it—that he did not defend the youths on a concealed-weapons charge at all, but that after they had pleaded guilty and had been sentenced by the County Court to six months at the Vandalia State Farm, he was retained to test the point as to whether or not the County Court had jurisdiction to sentence prisoners to the State Farm. The matter with which he was concerned, he explains, had nothing to do with the prisoners personally or with their guilt or innocence on any charge. It was merely a question of a Court's jurisdiction and did not involve a conference with the prisoners. He remarks, with some show of amusement, that whoever investigated the situation with a view to filing suit for Olson did a choice bit of blundering. However that may be, here is the chronology of the queer case from the beginning:

On the night of September 6, 1927, Floyd Stotler, 26 years old, was on duty as an attendant at a filling station of the Hart Oil Company, at Broadway and Kishwaukee streets, in a residence section of the city. It was about 9:30 o'clock and the young man's father, Orville Stotler, had dropped in for a visit. While the two were conversing an automobile drew up and two young men, one of them masked, entered the place and ordered, "Stick 'em up."

Mistaking the intruders for friends playing a joke, Floyd Stotler seized one of them by the arm, whereupon the unmasked man, described as having light hair and a long face, shot him twice through the abdomen with a small-caliber automatic pistol. Then, without stopping to rob the place, the visitors fled across a vacant lot, abandoning the automobile, later found to be a stolen car. Pursued for a short distance by the elder Stotler, they ran toward the house where Henry Olson lived with his mother and father. Somewhere in the vicinity of that house, which is 200 feet from the filling station, they disappeared, and Stotler turned back to aid his son. The young man was taken to a hospital, and died there a few hours later. Meanwhile, the police were combing the city and bringing in suspects. One of these was Henry Olson. The father readily identified him as the unmasked man who had shot his son.



Maurice Mahan.

George Bliss.

Until he had been identified as the slayer, there was little real evidence to connect Olson with the crime. But there were several circumstances, trivial though some of them were, that caused him to fall under suspicion. In the first place, his record was not what it might have been. A year or two before he had been arrested in connection with the shooting of a street-car conductor in a holdup. He was released in this case, but the affair left his name on the police records. He had no regular employment, and had associated with youths who got in trouble with the police. Moreover, the description of the slayer, given by the elder Stotler, fitted him, and there was the further fact that the slayers disappeared in the shadows near the Olson home. All of these things seemed to point toward him as a character whose activities on the night of the murder would stand looking into. Then, upon his arrest, the elder Stotler had faced him and declared: "That is the man who shot my boy." The case against him seemed ironclad.

Olson was brought to trial late in October of the same year. His chief defense was an alibi, supported by his young wife, whom he had married three weeks before his arrest, and his parents. They all said he was at home on the night of the murder. Then his identification by the elder Stotler was attacked and Attorney North tried to show how absurd it was to suppose that a man would attempt to hold up a filling station half a block from his home. The trial dragged on for several days and finally ended in a deadlock, when the jury, after 27 hours of deliberation, voted seven to five for his conviction.

The second trial was in February, 1928. Hundreds thronged the courtroom daily, and the case was widely discussed, the whole city standing divided against itself as to his guilt or innocence. The evidence presented was about the same as before, but this time the jury brought in a verdict of "guilty," and sentence of life imprisonment was pronounced. A few hours later began Olson's strange odyssey as a fugitive which was to end in New Orleans some time afterward, when Mrs. Olson chanced to buy a newspaper.

Fleeing from Rockford in an automobile, Olson and his bride drove first to Chicago, following little-traveled roads as far as possible. In Chicago they abandoned their car, stayed one night at separate hotels and then took a train for Memphis. After a stop of one night in Memphis, during which they took care not to be seen together, they continued their flight to New Orleans. Though they traveled on the same train, Olson related, they kept apart and showed no sign of recognition, when other persons were about. Throughout the journey there was the constant, haunting fear that officers on their trail would board the train at the next station. Once, in fact, officers did come aboard looking for somebody. Both gave themselves up for lost, they said afterwards, and resigned themselves to their fate, only to discover the officers were looking for bank robbers.

Finally, after a harrowing journey, they reached New Orleans tired and despondent. They sought living quarters in an humble rooming house, and scanned the faces of all persons they met on the street, fearing to meet an acquaintance. Once, Olson says, he actually did see a man he recognized as having been a Rockford resident, and the sight unnerved him almost to the point of panic. He resolved then to get out of New Orleans on a ship bound for some foreign port, but realized he could obtain no passport and would have to go as a worker on shipboard. In the meantime, he continued to search for some kind of work in the city, for his bankroll was getting small. A few months before he had had a comfortable bank account—$8000 or more left to him by a brother, and which he had expanded somewhat by stock-market investments. But it had shrunk rapidly. His attorney's fees and the employment of detectives had taken most of it. He had left Rockford with $1200—all that remained—and now railroad fare, clothing and living expenses were whittling this away. He had to get a job.

"ONE day I was looking over a factory down on Poydras street," he related, "trying to get an idea from the men who came out what class of workers was employed. To do this I had to wait till quitting time and was late getting home. When I opened the door I saw my wife sitting on the bed with a newspaper in her hand, and she had been weeping. I had tried to look at things as brightly as possible, but finding her weeping brought back the old feeling of depression. But this time the depression didn't last long.

"She thrust the paper into my hands and asked me if I had seen it. She said she had been almost crazy with waiting. It was a copy of the New Orleans States. Across the top was a streamer line saying that two others had confessed the crime of which I had been convicted, and the headline on the right-hand column said: 'Henry Olson Pursued by Good News.'"

The news was indeed so good, said Olson, that they couldn't believe it at first. Mrs. Olson had chanced to buy a paper earlier in the afternoon, and her eye had at once caught the name "Olson" in the headline. She had been weeping for joy ever since. For awhile they wondered if it could be a trap of some kind to lure them back. Then they went out and bought another newspaper. In this they found an Associated Press dispatch from Rockford written as a personal message to the fugitive.

"Henry Olson, wherever you are, read this!" it commanded.

"Convicted of slaying Floyd Stotler, and sentenced to life imprisonment, you jumped your appeal bond, didn't you?

"But you may come back now, Henry Olson! That life sentence, though it still hangs over you, is not likely to be enforced."

They read on and learned that within a few days after their flight, two 17-year-old boys had broken down and admitted the killing of Stotler.

"You think it is too good to be true?" concluded the newspaper account. "You are wrong. It is true. Come home, Henry Olson, and see."

THE Olsons, with an overwhelming burden off their minds, went on a steamer excursion and danced that night in celebration. The next day they wired North of their whereabouts and joyfully took a train for home. They arrived smiling and happy and Olson declared he held no grudge against anybody. He said he even felt kindly toward the prosecutors and toward Orville Stotler, who had identified him as the murderer. A few days later the Court went through the formality of a third trial and officially set him free. The two 17-year-old boys who had confessed the murder of Floyd Stotler were George Bliss and Maurice Mahan, lads of good families and who but recently had embarked upon a career of robbery. While Olson was fighting for his life through two trials, they were in custody, but their connection with the Stotler case was not suspected until after Olson had fled with a life sentence hanging over him.

They were arrested about a week after the killing of the filling station attendant when Detective Jack Ott saw them tampering with an automobile on a parking lot. A few days later they pleaded guilty to a charge of carrying concealed weapons and were sentenced to six months at the State Farm at Vandalia. In pronouncing sentence, the Judge lectured them on the evil of carrying weapons. He picked up a .22-caliber automatic which had been found in the possession of Bliss.

"It was just such a gun as this that killed Stotler," he remarked by way of driving home his point.

The youths were given their liberty while a writ of error was being prosecuted to test the County Court's action in sentencing them to the State Farm instead of to the county jail. It was here that North came into the case. He prosecuted the writ and the boys remained at liberty on appeal bond. It is probable they would never have been disclosed as Stotler's murderers had it not been for the circumstance that Mahan took his sweetheart into his confidence. The girl, a 17-year-old high school student, kept the secret until after Olson had been convicted, but then the temptation to talk became too strong. She told others that she knew Henry Olson didn't kill Stotler and the word got around to Attorney North. He set about an investigation and, through the help of Assistant Chief of Police Homer Read, got Mahan's confession, in which he admitted his part in the holdup and named Bliss as the slayer. Confronted by this admission, Bliss

But When Dr. Dujarrier's Operation Resulted in Maiming His Patient for Life, the Courts Forced Him to Pay Heavy Damages.

PARIS.

A DOCTOR'S poignant dilemma, with a young woman's leg at stake, has just been unfolded before a Paris court.

A few months ago a lovely, smartly-dressed girl burst into the office of Dr. Dujarrier, one of the leading surgeons of the French capital, tense with hysteria.

"I am engaged to be married," she wept into a dainty little perfumed handkerchief, "but my fiance is becoming cold toward me, and has even postponed the date of the marriage. It breaks my heart. I know what the trouble is, it's because my calves are growing thicker all the time, and I am not chic any more. Mon Dieu! How terrible, when the mode is for slender, girlish figures and knee-high frocks, to have fat legs. No wonder my sweetheart is indifferent and my business customers sniff. I look like a milkmaid.

"You simply must trim down my legs with your knife until they are pretty and slim again. I will endure anything; I don't care how much I suffer. I would go through hell to get my line back again.

"If you refuse I shall kill myself, and you will be responsible for this tragedy."

THE young woman, Suzanne Geoffre, since Madame Le Guen, was absolutely insistent. She argued that it was not only a question of marriage, but of her livelihood. She had a dainty little dressmaking shop in the Rue de Rivoli, acting as mannequin as well as manager and designer. How could she hope to show any robe to good advantage with thick calves? A customer buys a dress not only because she likes it, but because the customer is fascinated by the illusion of youth and slimness that the mannequin creates in it. Mlle. Geoffre convinced herself that her calves—they were not excessively large at all—had become an obstacle to her success, and she pleaded with Dr. Dujarrier, who is a surgeon of great distinction and not a beauty specialist, until he was finally touched by her unhappiness and consented to perform a cutaneous resection.

As every penny of her capital was invested in her business, he even operated on her without charge. This consisted of cutting a large strip of flesh from her left calf.

In spite of his skill the wound refused to heal. Mlle. Geoffre's skin lacked suppleness, and when lifted it contracted to such an extent as to render suturing difficult. The circulation in the limb became seriously impaired by excessive constriction, with the result that gangrene set in. It became necessary to amputate the foot. The patient's general condition grew worse and worse. She developed a very high fever. Finally her life was despaired of. At this point there was a dramatic interlude. Fearing that his fiancee would die, Monsieur Le Guen, who was deeply in love with her, and had really never objected to the size of her calves, hurriedly secured permission to marry Mlle. Geoffre without the publication of banns, which requires two weeks. The ceremony was performed on what was supposed to be her deathbed. A priest read the marriage service, and two nurses in uniform acted as witnesses. Several hours later a miraculous improvement was noted in Madame Le Guen's condition. From that moment she steadily improved, and in several weeks left the hospital a well woman, but on crutches. Happily, the surgeon had not touched her other leg.

Monsieur and Madame Le Guen thereupon filed a $20,000 damage suit against Dr. Dujarrier, not only alleging that it was a grave error of judgment for him to undertake such an operation, but that it had not been skillfully performed. The case created a great sensation when it came up for trial a few days ago. Hundreds of lawyers and surgeons crowded into the courtroom to hear the evidence, this being the first time that all the legal aspects and responsibilities of beauty surgery were to be fought out before the law. The victim, still very charming, hobbled in on crutches, and wept from time to time as her lawyer painted an agonizing picture of the tragedy.

Mme. Suzanne Geoffre Le Guen.

"It's not only a question of marriage; my livelihood depends on it."

"Is it according to usage, is it the duty of a surgeon to agree to perform an operation for purely esthetic purposes, regardless of its effect on the health of the patient?" demanded Madame Le Guen's counsel, Maitre Jose Thery, in a sort of prelude to his plea. "Did Dr. Dujarrier, before the operation, explain to Madame Le Guen all the risks involved?"

Maitre Thery then plunged into a horrifying description of the young dressmaker's cruel deception when she lost her limb, of the martyrdom she suffered and how she narrowly escaped death.

"The operation—the original one—lasted an hour and a half," he continued, while many women in the courtroom shuddered. "Madame Le Guen, who had only been given a local anesthetic in the limb, was perfectly conscious. She had a clock in front of her eyes. Every minute seemed a century to her. In her left calf, Dr. Dujarrier had carved out a large chunk of flesh. Then he tried to sew the edges of the wound together, and failing to do this, had to tie a cord around her leg as though it was a sausage.

"After three weeks of suffering, Dr. Dujarrier announced that he was forced to amputate the limb. Otherwise, the gangrene would spread to the entire body. In the face of approaching death, Monsieur Le Guen married his fiancee in the hospital.

"Master of the knife, does the surgeon have all the rights on his side? Does he not have amends to make? The human body is a sacred thing. It must not be mutilated without good reasons. The surgeon can cut into the body only to heal and not for any other reason. Dr. Dujarrier should have refused to perform this unnecessary operation."

Counsel for Dr. Dujarrier simply argued that the amputation was not his fault, as he had performed the operation with unquestioned skill and with the most humane intentions. The counsel asked that a committee of surgeons be appointed to determine if the operation had been skilfully done.

In accordance with French law in such cases, the public prosecutor thereupon gave his opinion, which

His LIFE AMBITION THWARTED BECAUSE He Was COLOR BLIND

So Henry Rupp, in Desperation, Hired Another Youth to Take the Color Test Required for Entering Annapolis, in His Place.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

HENRY RUPP wanted to be a naval officer. His was not a youthful passion that had petered out about the time he entered high school. Instead, it became more fervent as he journeyed through his adolescence. So when he was old enough he joined the naval reserves of his State of California.

The more he saw of naval service the more certain he became of the correctness of his ambition. There was just one career in life he wanted: officership in the navy of the United States. He set about getting it. He worked hard. He studied well. And then came the glory. He received appointment to the Naval Academy at Annapolis from the California reserves. The boy was jubilant.

So it was that a short time ago the 18-year-old lad left the prosperous home of his parents at Long Beach and journeyed across the continent to Annapolis, his Mecca, the city where America makes its sailor officers. Ambition was as good as realized. Already he could see himself, four years hence, arrayed in his blue suit with the gold stripe of ensign-ship upon his sleeve.

He, of course, had to take the regular entrance examinations for admission to the Naval Academy. First came the mental tests. He passed them with excellent records. Then the physical. Measurement, weight, heart condition. Eyes, his ability to see at a certain distance, and tell what he saw. His ability to distinguish color. A navy physician held up a little colored card. What color? And then the great tragedy of it all come down upon him. For he realized that he was color blind, that the difference of hue meant nothing to him, that he had failed, that he was through, that all that salty future that he had hoped for and worked for and longed for was gone, gone forever, utterly, definitely, thoroughly gone.

Henry Rupp left the academy's precincts a miserable boy. No Annapolis for him, no blue uniform with its gold stripe, no standing on the bridge of a swift destroyer as it cut its way through the waves. Gone—his present, his future, his life's ambition.

Wearily he made his way to the hotel in Washington where he had been staying during his examinations. He tossed in his bed the whole night through, vainly endeavoring to discover some means by which he might stave off defeat.

Then, shortly before dawn, he thought he had found the way.

He had asked for another eye test when he had failed at the academy. It had been granted him; it was to be taken at the Navy Building in Washington. There would be different physicians there, the whole examining personnel would be different. Well, he knew what he would do.

He rose early. He called an employment agency. Did they, he wanted to know, have any applicant who could work as a helper at his gasoline filling station? Yes, certainly they had, but he would have to come to the agency's offices and choose his man.

Rupp hurried to the place and chose a boy who resembled him, a boy about his size. The boy's name was Paul Schooler. He, too, was 19, and but three days before had been released from the District of Columbia Workhouse, where he had been sent for 60 days for beating his bedridden mother.

Rupp took Schooler to lunch. Once the luncheon was finished, Rupp put his cards on the table. He told Schooler what had happened to him at Annapolis. He asked Schooler if he would substitute for him at the Washington examination. And Schooler said he would.

Rupp coached his substitute so he would make no blunder before the examining board, coached him thoroughly. Then Rupp handed him his credentials. But, Schooler wanted to know, how much was there in it for him? After some discussion $15 was agreed on as the price, the money to be paid following the examination.

So Schooler set out for the Navy Building and Rupp returned to his hotel room. Once more he was a happy boy, for he had no doubt that the ruse would work out successfully.

Schooler walked up the steps of the Navy Building and into the examination board's room. He presented his credentials to an officer and told him what he was there for. He was escorted into another room, and the small colored cards that had been Rupp's downfall were placed before him. But the new Rupp called off their colors without the least difficulty.

He did it so well, in fact, that his examiners became dubious. How had this young man's eyes improved so remarkably? The officers asked him a few questions. They asked him some more. But they got nothing out of him.

FAILING in their cross-examination, they called Police Headquarters and asked for aid. A detective sergeant answered the call. He questioned Schooler for two hours. And the substitute finally broke down and confessed. Now, to get Rupp.

Detectives found him at his hotel. At first he would not admit his guilt, but when he was confronted by his accomplice, the boy broke down, wept, related the tale of his ambitions and their defeat.

"If you had wanted anything as badly as I wanted to get into Annapolis," he told them, "you would have done the same thing. It was my one chance, my only chance. I'd have done anything in my power to get to the academy."

Rupp and Schooler were placed in jail, and held "for investigation." Rupp lay awake all night, worrying, fretting. The next morning they were taken before a United States Commissioner and arraigned on charges of conspiring to defraud their country. Rupp asked that the hearing be postponed so he might obtain a lawyer and communicate with his parents in California. His request was granted and the pair were held in lieu of $2000 bail.

Young Mr. Rupp was soon to secure aid. The story of his adventure appeared in the capital's newspapers, and he found a champion in the person of Senator Shortridge of his own State.

"I shall myself see to it that young Rupp is released from jail," the Senator declared. "I cannot see that his actions were of a criminal nature. It appears to me, instead, that his was an intense desire to pass his examinations so he might defend his country. It is certainly apparent that he is a typical patriot, and none can deny that. I have wired the boy's parents at Long Beach. Next, I am going to jail and get him out. Then, when his case comes to trial, if it ever does, I am going to be right there by his side, fighting for his acquittal, which I know any jury will give him."

Rupp's parents, in far-off California, sent a lengthy telegram to Secretary of the Navy Adams.

Senator Shortridge called at the jail. Then the Senator saw the court officials, and there was an argument, for the Senator from California contended excessive bonds had been set for the prisoners.

About that time Secretary Adams sent a message to the court officers requesting them to dismiss the case. Rupp and Schooler were brought before the Commissioner and given their freedom.

That navy, which Henry Rupp so admired, had given him more than an even break.

THE RETURN

By SHERWOOD ANDERSON

A light from the house fell on Maud's face, a rather lovely face in that light.

EIGHTEEN years. Well, he was driving a good car, an expensive roadster, he was well clad, a rather solid, fine-looking man, not too heavy. When he had left the Middle-western town to go live in New York City he was twenty-two, and now, on his way back there, he was forty. He drove toward the town from the East, stopping for lunch at another town ten miles away.

When he went away from Caxton, after his mother died, he used to write letters to friends at home, but after several months the replies began to come with less and less frequency. On the day when he sat eating his lunch at a small hotel in the town 10 miles east of Caxton he suddenly thought of the reason, and was ashamed. "Am I going back there on this visit for the same reason I wrote the letters?" he asked himself. For a moment he thought he might not go on. There was still time to turn back.

Outside, in the principal business street of the town, people were walking about. The sun shone warmly. Although he had lived for so many years in New York, he had always kept, buried away in him somewhere, a hankering for his own country. All the day before he had been driving through the eastern Ohio country, crossing many small streams, running down through small valleys, seeing the white farmhouses set back from the road, and the big red barns.

Now, however, he began thinking of something else. Shame crept over him. "When I first left Caxton, I wrote letters back to my boyhood friends there, but I wrote always of myself. When I had written a letter telling what I was doing in the city, what friends I was making, what my prospects were, I put, at the very end of the letter perhaps, a little inquiry. 'I hope you are well. How are things going with you?' Something of that sort."

THE returning native—his name was John Holden—had grown very uneasy. After eighteen years it seemed to him he could see, lying before him, one of the letters written eighteen years before when he had first come into the strange Eastern city. His mother's brother, a successful architect in the city, had given him such and such an opportunity; he had been at the theater to see Mansfield as Brutus, he had taken the night boat upriver to Albany with his aunt; there were two very handsome girls on the boat.

Everything then must have been in the same tone. His uncle had given him a rare opportunity, and he had taken advantage of it. In time he had also become a successful architect. In New York City there were certain great buildings, two or three skyscrapers, several huge industrial plants, any number of handsome and expensive residences that were the products of his brain.

When it came down to the scratch, John Holden had to admit that his uncle had not been excessively fond of him. It had just happened that his aunt and uncle had no children of their own. He did his work in the office well and carefully, had developed a certain rather striking knack for design. The aunt had liked him better. She had always tried to think of him as her own son, had treated him as a son. Sometimes she called him son. Once or twice, after his uncle died, he had a notion. His aunt was a good woman, but sometimes he thought she would rather have enjoyed having him, John Holden, go in a bit more for wickedness, go a little on the loose, now and then. He never did anything she had to forgive him for. Perhaps she hungered for the opportunity to forgive. Odd thoughts, eh? Well, what was a fellow to do? One had but the one life to live. One had to think of one's self.

BOTHERATION! John Holden had rather counted on the trip back to Caxton, had really counted on it more than he realized. He had been driving for days over the mountains of Pennsylvania, through New York State, through eastern Ohio. Gertrude, his wife, had died during the summer before, and his son, a lad of 12, had gone away for the summer to a boys' camp in Vermont.

The idea had just come to him. "I'll drive the car along slowly through the country, drinking it in. I need a rest, time to think. What I really need is to renew old acquaintances. I'll go back to Caxton and stay several days. I'll see Herman and Frank and Joe. Then I'll go call on Lillian and Kate. What a lot of fun, really!" It might just be that when he got to Caxton, the Caxton ball team would be playing a game, say with a team from Yerington. Lillian might go to the game with him. It was in his mind faintly that Lillian had never married. How did he know that? He had heard nothing from Caxton for many years. The ball game would be in Hefler's field, and he and Lillian would go out there, walking under the maple trees along Turner Street, past the old stave factory, then in the dust of the road, past where the sawmill used to stand, and on into the field itself. He would be carrying a sunshade over Lillian's head, and Bob French would be standing at the gate where you went into the field and charging the people 25 cents to see the game.

WELL, it would not be Bob; his son, perhaps. There would be something very nice in the notion of Lillian's going off to a ball game that way with an old sweetheart. A crowd of boys, women and men, going through a cattle gate into Hefler's field, tramping through the dust, young men with their sweethearts, a few gray-haired women, mothers of boys who belonged to the team, Lillian and he sitting in the old grand stand in the hot sun.

Once it had been—how they had felt, he and Lillian, sitting there together! It had been rather hard to keep the attention centered on the players in the field. One couldn't ask a neighbor, "Who's ahead now, Caxton or Yerington?" Lillian's hands lay in her lap. What white, delicate, expressive hands they were! Once—that was just before he went away to live in the city with his uncle and but a month after his mother died—he and Lillian went to the ball field together at night. His father had died when he was a young lad, and he had no relatives left in the town. Going off to the ball field at night was maybe a risky thing for Lillian to do—risky for her reputation if anyone found it out—but she had seemed willing enough. You know how small-town girls of that age are.

HER father owned a retail shoe store in Caxton and was a good, respectable man; but the Holdens—John's father had been a lawyer.

After they got back from the ball field that night—it must have been after midnight—they went to sit on the front porch before her father's house. He must have known. A daughter cavorting about half the night with a young man that way! They had clung to each other with a sort of queer, desperate feeling neither understood. She did not go into the house until after 3 o'clock, and went then only because he insisted. He hadn't wanted to ruin her reputation. Why, he might have—She was like a little frightened child at the thought of his going away. He was 22 then, and she must have been about 18.

Eighteen and twenty-two are forty. John Holden was forty on the day when he sat at lunch at the hotel in the town ten miles from Caxton.

Now, he thought, he might be able to walk through the streets of Caxton to the ball park with Lillian with a certain effect. You know how it is. One has to accept the fact that youth is gone. If there should turn out to be such a ball game and Lillian would go with him, he would leave the car in the garage and ask her to walk. One saw pictures of that sort of thing in the movies—a man coming back to his native village after twenty years; a new beauty taking the place of the beauty of youth—something like that. In the spring the leaves on maple trees are lovely, but they are even more lovely in the fall—a flame of color; manhood and womanhood.

After he had finished his lunch John lit a cigar and went for a walk, not in the streets of Caxton, but in the streets of the town ten miles away. If he got to Caxton in the evening, just at dusk, say, now—

WITH an inward pang John realized he wanted darkness, the kindliness of soft evening lights. Lillian, Joe, Herman, and the rest. It had been eighteen years for the others as well as for himself. Now he had succeeded, a little, in twisting his fear of Caxton into fear for the others, and it made him feel somewhat better; but at once he realized what he was doing and again felt uncomfortable. One had to look out for changes, new people, new buildings, middle-aged people grown old, youth grown middle-aged. At any rate, he was thinking of the others now; he wasn't, as when he wrote letters home eighteen years before, thinking only of himself. "Am I?" It was a question.

An absurd situation, really. He had sailed along so gaily through upper New York State, through western Pennsylvania, through eastern Ohio. Men were at work in the fields and in the towns, farmers drove into towns in their cars, clouds of dust arose on some distant road, seen across a valley. Once he had stopped his car near a bridge and had gone for a walk along the banks of a creek where it wound through a wood.

He was liking people. Well, he had never before given much time to people, to thinking of them and their affairs. "I hadn't time," he told himself.

TWICE he had picked up people on the road. There was a lad of 16 from some town of eastern Pennsylvania, working his way westward toward the Pacific coast by picking up rides in cars—a summer's adventure. John had carried him all of one day and had listened to his talk with keen pleasure. And so this was the younger generation. The boy had nice eyes and an eager, friendly manner. He smoked cigarettes, and once, when they had a puncture, he was very quick and eager about changing the tire. "Now, don't you soil your hands, Mister, I can do it like a flash," he said, and he did. The boy said he intended working his way overland to the Pacific coast, where he would try to get a job of some kind on an ocean freighter, and that, if he did, he would go on around the world. "But do you speak any foreign languages?" The boy did not. Across John Holden's mind flashed pictures of hot Eastern deserts, crowded Asiatic towns, wild, half-savage mountain countries. As a young architect, and before his uncle died, he had spent two years in foreign travel, studying building in many countries; but he said nothing of this thought to the boy. Vast plans entered into with eager, boyish abandon, a world tour undertaken as he, when a young man, might have undertaken to find his way from his uncle's house in East Eighty-first street downtown to the Battery. "How do I know—perhaps he will do it," John thought. The day in company with the boy had been very pleasant, and he had been on the alert to pick him up again the next morning; but the boy had gone on his way, had caught a ride with some earlier riser. Why hadn't John invited him to his hotel for the night? The notion hadn't come to him until too late.

Youth, rather wild and undisciplined, running wild, eh? "I wonder why I never did it, never wanted to do it."

IF HE had been a bit wilder, more reckless—that night, that time when he and Lillian—"It's all right being reckless with yourself, but when someone else is involved, a young girl in a small town, you yourself lighting out—" He remembered sharply that on the night, long before, as he sat with Lillian on the porch before her father's house his hand— It had seemed as though Lillian, on that evening, might not have objected to anything he wanted to do. He had thought—well, he had thought of the consequences. Women must be protected by men, all that sort of thing. Lillian had seemed rather stunned when he walked away, even though it was 3 o'clock in the morning. She had been rather like a person waiting at a railroad station for the coming of a train. There is a blackboard, and a strange man comes out and writes on it, "Train Number 287 has been discontinued"—something like that.

Well, it had been all right, everything had been all right.

Later, four years later, he had married a New York woman of good family. Even in a city like New York, where there are so many people, her family had been well known. They had connections.

After marriage, sometimes, it is true, he had wondered. Gertrude used to look at him sometimes with an odd light in her eyes. That boy he picked up in the road—once during the day when he said something to the boy, the same queer look came into his eyes. It would be rather upsetting if one knew that the boy had purposely avoided him next morning. There had been Gertrude's cousin, but, of course, he had said nothing to her. Why should he have? She was his wife. There had been, he had heard, a good deal of family objection to the cousin. He was reputed to be wild, a gambler and drinker.

Now Gertrude was dead. She had always seemed very well, but suddenly she was attacked by a baffling kind of slow fever that lasted nearly a year. Sometimes she seemed about to get better, and then suddenly the fever grew worse. It might be that she did not want to live. What a notion! John had been at the bedside with the doctor when she died. It was at night, and as the boy was asleep, he was not called. There was something of the same feeling he had that night of his youth when he went with Lillian to the ball field, an odd sense of futility, of inadequacy. There was no doubt that in some subtle way both women had accused him.

OF WHAT? There had always been, in some vague, indefinable way, a kind of accusation in the attitude toward him of his uncle, the architect, and of his aunt. They had left him their money, but— It was as though the uncle had said, as though Lillian during that night long ago had said——

Had they all said the same thing, and was Gertrude his wife saying it as she lay dying? A smile. "You have always taken such good care of yourself, haven't you, John dear? You have observed the rules. You have taken no chances for yourself or the others." She had actually said something of that sort to him once in a moment of anger.

In the small town ten miles from Caxton there wasn't any park to which a man could go to sit. If one stayed about the hotel, someone from Caxton might come in. "Hello, what are you doing here?" It would be inconvenient to explain: "I didn't want to go to Caxton in the daylight. I want the kindliness of evening light for myself and the people I may see there."

John Holden's boy—he was by twelve—one might say his character had not begun to form yet. One felt in him sometimes a sort of unconscious and casual selfishness, an unawareness of others, a rather unhealthy sharpness about getting the best of others. It was a thing that should be corrected in him and at once. John Holden had got himself into a small panic. "I must write him a letter at once. Such a habit gets fixed in a boy and then in the man, and it cannot later be shaken off. There are such a lot of people living in the world! Every man and woman has his own point of view. To be civilized, really, is to be aware of the others, their hopes, their gladnesses, their disillusionments in life."

JOHN HOLDEN was now walking along a residence street of a small Ohio town composing in fancy a letter to his son in the boys' camp up in Vermont. He was a man who wrote to his son every day. "I think a man should," he told himself. "One should remember that now the boy has no mother."

He had come to an outlying railroad station. It was neat, with grass and flowers growing in a round bed in the very center of a lawn. Some man, the station agent and telegraph operator perhaps, passed him and went inside the station. John followed him in. On the wall of the waiting-room there was a framed copy of the time-table, and he stood studying it. A train went to Caxton at 5. Another train came from Caxton and passed through the town he was now in at seven-forty-three, the seven-nineteen out of Caxton. The man in the small business section of the station opened a sliding panel and looked at him. The two men just stared at each other without speaking, and then the panel was slid shut again.

John looked at his watch. Two-twenty-eight. At about 6 he could drive over to Caxton and dine at the hotel there. After he had dined, it would be evening and people would be coming into the main street. The seven-nineteen would come in. When John was a lad, sometimes, he, Joe, Herman, and often several other lads climbed on the front of the baggage or mail car and stole a ride to the very town he was now in. What a thrill, crouched down in the gathering darkness on the platform, as the train ran the ten miles, the car rocking from side to side! When it got a little dark, in the fall or spring, the fields beside the track were lighted up when the fireman opened his firebox to throw in coal. Once John saw a rabbit running along in the glare of the light beside the track. He could have reached down and caught it with his hand.

IN THE neighboring town the boys went into saloons and played pool and drank beer. They could depend upon catching a ride back home on the local freight that got to Caxton at about 10:30. On one of the adventures John and Herman got drunk, and Joe had to help them into an empty coal car and later get them out at Caxton. Herman got sick, and when they were getting off the freight at Caxton, he stumbled and came very near falling under the wheels of the moving train. John wasn't as drunk as Herman. When the others weren't looking he had poured several of the glasses of beer into a spittoon. In Caxton he and Joe had to walk about with Herman for several hours, and when John finally got home, his mother was still awake and was worried. He had to lie to her. "I drove out into the country with Herman and a wheel broke. We had to walk home." The reason Joe could carry his beer so well was because he was German. His father owned the meat market, and the family had beer on the table at home. No wonder it did not knock him out as it did Herma and John.

There was a bench at the sid of the railroad station, in th shade, and John sat there for long time—two hours, thre hours. Why hadn't he brought book? In fancy he composed letter to his son and in it he spok of the fields lying beside the roa outside the town of Caxton, of hi greeting old friends there, o things that had happened when h was a boy. He even spoke of hi former sweetheart, of Lillian. I he now thought out just what h was going to say in the letter, h could write it in his room at th hotel over in Caxton in a few minutes, without having to sto and think what he was going t say.

IT WAS 6:20 when John drov into Caxton and went to the hotel, where he registered and was shown to a room. On the street as he drove in to town he saw Billy Baker who, when he was a young man, had a paralyzed leg tha dragged along the sidewalk whe he walked. Now he was gettin old; his face seemed wrinkled and faded, like a dried lemon, and his clothes had spots down the front. People, even sick people live a long time in small Ohio towns. It is surprising how they hang on.

John had put his car, of a rather expensive make, into a garage beside the hotel. Formerly, in his day, the building had been used as a livery barn. There used to be pictures of famous trotting and pacing horses on the walls of the little office at the front. Old Dave Grey, who owned race horses of his own, ran the livery barn then, and John occasionally hired a rig there. He hired a rig and took Lillian for a ride into the country, along moonlit roads. By a lonely farmhouse a dog barked. Sometimes they drove along a little dirt road lined with elders and stopped the horse. How still everything was! What a queer feeling they had! They couldn't talk. Sometimes they sat in silence thus, very near to each other, for a long, long time. Once they got out of the buggy, having tied the horse to the fence, and walked in a newly-cut hayfield. The cut hay lay all about in little cocks. John wanted to lie on one of the haycocks with Lillian, but did not dare suggest it.

At the hotel, John ate his dinner in silence. There wasn't even a traveling salesman in the dining room, and presently the proprietor's wife came and stood by his table to talk with him. They had a good many tourists, but this just happened to be a quiet day. Dull days come that way in the hotel business. The woman's husband was a traveling man and had bought the hotel to give his wife something to keep her interested while he was on the road. He was away from home so much. They had come to Caxton from Pittsburg.

AT 7:45 John went out for a walk on Main street, and almost at once he met Tom Ballard, who at once recognized him, a fact that pleased Tom. He bragged about it. "Once I see a face, I never forget. Well! Well! When John was 22 Tom must have been about 15. His father was the leading doctor of the town. He took John in to and walked back with him toward the hotel. He kept exclaiming: "I knew you at once. You haven't changed much, really."

Tom was in his turn a doctor and there was about him some thing—— Right away John guessed what it was. They went up into John's room, and John having in his bag a bottle of whisky, poured Tom a drink which he took somewhat too eagerly, John thought. There was talk. After Tom had taken a drink he sat on the edge of the bed, still holding the bottle John had passed to him. Herman was running a dray now. He had married Kit Small and had five kids. Joe was working for the International Harvester Company. He don't know whether he's in to now or not. He's a trouble-shooter, a swell mechanic, a good fellow," Tom said. They drank again.

As for Lillian, mentioned with an air of being casual by John, John, knew, of course, that she had been married and divorced. There was some sort of trouble about another man. Her husband married again later, and now lived with her mother, her father the shoe merchant, having died. Tom spoke somewhat guardedly as though protecting a friend.

"I guess she's all right now, living straight and all. Good thing she never had any kids. She

Her husband married again later, and now she lived with her mother, her father, the shoe merchant, having died. Tom spoke somewhat guardedly, as though protecting a friend.

"I guess she's all right now, going straight and all. Good thing she never had any kids. She's a little nervous and queer; has lost her looks a good deal."

The two men went downstairs and, walking along Main street, got into a car belonging to the doctor.

"I'll take you for a little ride," Tom said; but as he was about to pull away from the curb where the car had been parked, he turned and smiled at his passenger. "We ought to celebrate a little, account of your coming back here," he said. "What do you say to a quart?"

John handed him a $10 bill, and he disappeared into a near-by drug store. When he came back he laughed.

"I used your name, all right. They didn't recognize it. In the prescription I wrote out I said you had a general breakdown, that you needed to be built up. I recommended that you take a tablespoonful three times a day. Lord! my prescription book is getting almost empty." The drug store belonged to a man named Will Bennett. "You remember him, maybe. He's Ed Bennett's son; married Carrie Wyatt." The names were but dim things in John's mind. "This man is going to get drunk. He is going to try to get me drunk, too," he thought.

WHEN they had turned out of Main street and into Walnut street they stopped midway between two street lights and had another drink, John holding the bottle to his lips, but putting his tongue over the opening. He remembered the evenings with Joe and Herman when he had secretly poured his beer into a spittoon. He felt cold and lonely. Walnut street was one along which he used to walk, coming home late from Lillian's house. He remembered people who then lived along the street and a list of names began running through his head. Often the names remained, but did not call up images of people. They were just names. He hoped the doctor would not turn the car into the street in which the Holdens had lived. Lillian had lived over in another part of town, in what was called "the Red House District." Just why it had been called that John did not know.

They drove silently along, up a small hill, and came to the edge of town, going south. Stopping before a house that had evidently been built since John's time, Tom sounded his horn.

"Didn't the fairground used to stand about here?" John asked. The doctor turned and nodded his head.

"Yes, just here," he said. He kept on sounding his horn, and a man and woman came out of the house and stood in the road beside the car.

"Let's get Maud and Alf and all go over to Lylse's Point," Tom said. He had indeed taken John into tow. For a time John wondered if he was to be introduced. "We got some hooch. Meet John Holden; used to live here years ago." At the fairground, when John was a lad, Dave Grey, the livery man, used to work out his horses in the early morning. Herman, who was a horse enthusiast, who then dreamed of some day becoming a horseman, came often to John's house in the early morning and the two boys went off to the fairground without breakfast. Herman had got some sandwiches made of slices of bread and cold meat out of his mother's pantry. They went 'cross-lots, climbing fences and eating the sandwiches. In a meadow they had to cross there was heavy dew on the grass, and meadow larks flew up before them. Herman had at least come somewhere near expressing in his life his youthful passion: he still lived about horses; he owned a dray. With a little qualm John wondered. Perhaps Herman ran a motor truck.

THE man and woman got into the car, the woman on the back seat with John, the husband in front with Tom, and they drove away to another house. John could not keep track of the streets they passed through. Occasionally he asked the woman: "What street are we in now?" They were joined by Maud and Alf, who also crowded into the back seat. Maud was a slender woman of 28 or 30, with yellow hair and blue eyes, and at once she seemed determined to make up to John. "I don't take up more than an inch of room," she said, laughing and squeezing herself in between John and the first woman.

He rather liked Maud. When the car had been driven some 18 miles along a gravel road, they came to Lylse's farmhouse, which had been converted into a roadhouse, and got out. Maud had been silent most of the way, but she sat very close to John, and as he felt cold and lonely, he was grateful for the warmth of her slender body. Occasionally she spoke to him in a half-whisper: "Ain't the night swell? Gee, I like it out in the dark this way."

Lylse's Point was at a bend of the Samson River, a small stream to which John as a lad had occasionally gone on fishing excursions with his father. Later he went out there several times with crowds of young fellows and their girls. They drove out then in Grey's old bus, and the trip out and back took several hours. On the way home at night they had great fun singing at the top of their voices and waking the sleeping farmers along the road. Occasionally some of the party got out and walked for a ways. It was a chance for a fellow to kiss his girl when the others could not see. By hurrying a little, they could later easily enough catch up with the bus.

A rather heavy-faced Italian named Francisco owned Lylse's, and it had a dance hall and dining room. Drinks could be had if you knew the ropes, and it was evident the doctor and his friends were old acquaintances. At once they declared John should not buy anything, the declaration, in fact, being made before he had offered. "You're our guest now; don't you forget that. When we come sometime to your town, then it will be all right," Tom said. He laughed. "And that makes me think. I forgot your change," he said, handing John a $5 bill. The whisky got at the drug store had been consumed on the way out, all except John and Maud drinking heartily. "I don't like the stuff. Do you, Mr. Holden?" Maud said and giggled. Twice during the trip out her fingers had crept over and touched lightly his fingers, and each time she had apologized. "Oh, do excuse me!" she said.

After they got out of the car at Lylse's, he felt uncomfortably old and queer. "What am I doing here with these people?" he kept asking himself. When they had got into the light, he stole a look at his watch. It was not yet 9 o'clock. Several other cars, most of them, the doctor explained, from Yerington, stood before the door, and when they had taken several drinks of rather mild Italian red wine, all of the party except Maud and John went into the dance hall to dance. The doctor took John aside and whispered to him: "Lay off Maud," he said. He explained hurriedly that Alf and Maud had been having a row and that for several days they had not spoken to each other, although they lived in the same house, ate at the same table and slept in the same bed. "He thinks she gets too gay with men," Tom explained. "You better look out a little."

The woman and man sat on a bench under a tree on the lawn before the house, and when the others had danced, they came out, bringing more drinks. Tom had got some more whisky. "It's moon, but pretty good stuff," he declared.

IN THE clear sky overhead stars were shining, and when the others were dancing, John turned his head and saw across the road and between the trees that lined its banks the stars reflected in the water of the Samson. A light from the house fell on Maud's face, a rather strikingly lovely face in that light, but when looked at closely, rather petulant. "A good deal of the spoiled child in her," John thought.

She began asking him about life in the city of New York.

"I was there once, but for only three days. It was when I went to school in the East. A girl I knew lived there. She married a lawyer named Trigan, or something like that. You don't know him, I guess."

And now there was a hungry, dissatisfied look on her face.

"God! I'd like to live in a place like that, not in this hole! There hadn't no man better tempt me." When she said that she giggled again. Once during the evening they walked across the dusty road and stood for a time by the river's edge, but got back to the bench before the others had finished their dance. Maud persistently refused to dance.

AT 10:30, all of the others having got a little drunk, they drove back to town, Maud again sitting beside John. On the drive Alf went to sleep. Maud pressed her slender body against John's, and after two or three futile moves, to which he made no special response, she boldly put her hand into his. The second woman and her husband talked with Tom of people they had seen at Lylse's. "Do you think there's anything up between Fanny and Joe? No; I think she's on the square."

They got to John's hotel at 11:30 and, bidding them all goodnight, he went upstairs. Alf had awakened. When they were parting, he leaned out of the car and looked closely at John. "What did you say your name was?" he asked.

John went up a dark stairway and sat on the bed in his room. Lillian had lost her looks. She had married, and her husband had divorced her. Joe was a trouble-shooter. He worked for the International Harvester Company, a swell mechanic. Herman was a drayman. He had five kids.

Three men in a room next to John's were playing poker. They laughed and talked, and their voices came clearly to John. "You think so, do you? Well, I'll prove you're wrong." A mild quarrel began. As it was summer, the windows of John's room were open, and he went to one to stand, looking out. A moon had come up, and he could see down into an alleyway. Two men came out of a street and stood in the alleyway, whispering. The game in the next room broke up. John could hear voices in the hallway.

"Now, forget it. I tell you, you're both wrong." John thought of his son at the camp up in Vermont. "I haven't written him a letter today." He felt guilty.

Opening his bag, he took out paper and sat down to write; but after two or three attempts gave it up and put the paper away. How fine the night had been as he sat on the bench beside the woman at Lylse's! Now the woman was in bed with her husband. They were not speaking to each other.

"Could I do it?" John asked himself, and then, for the first time that evening, a smile came to his lips.

"Why not?" he asked himself.

WITH his bag in his hand he went down the dark hallway and into the hotel office and began pounding on a desk. A fat old man with thin, red lips and sleep-heavy eyes appeared from somewhere. John explained:

"I can't sleep. I think I'll drive on. I want to get to Pittsburg, and as I can't sleep, I might as well be driving." He paid his bill.

Then he asked the clerk to go and arouse the man in the garage, and gave him an extra dollar. "If I need gas, is there any place open?" he asked, but evidently the man did not hear. Perhaps he thought the question absurd.

He stood in the moonlight on the sidewalk before the door of the hotel and heard the clerk pounding on a door. Presently voices were heard, and the headlights of his car shone. The car appeared, driven by a boy. He seemed very alive and alert.

"I saw you out to Lylse's," he said, and, without being asked, went to look at the tank. "You're all right; you got 'most eight gallons," he assured John, as he climbed into the driver's seat.

How friendly the car, how friendly the night! John was not one who enjoyed fast driving, but he went out of town at very high speed. "You go down two blocks, turn to your right and go three. There you hit the cement. Go straight to the east. You can't miss it!"

John was taking the turns at racing speed. At the edge of town someone shouted to him from the darkness, but he did not stop. He hungered to get into the road going east.

"I'll let her out," he thought. "Lord! it will be fun! I'll let her out."

Dr. Twitmyer is chairman of the department of psychology of the University of Pennsylvania. He has had remarkable success in curing cases of nervous shock and exhaustion. He has made a specialty of speech disorders.

"I took Tinney's case at the beginning of last winter," Dr. Twitmyer says. "His trouble is mainly to get confidence and avoid excitement. The latter factor is what I fear in his return to the stage. Under unusual stress he cannot be normal. At least not yet.

"When he first came to me, Tinney couldn't walk on a wide board. A ladder was impossible. I taught him to walk, stepping between the rungs. Now he can climb a ladder.

"EXERCISE for his vocal cords was necessary and I gave him a set of monosyllables to pronounce. There were other exercises for the muscles of his entire body. Dr. Harry Novak has also prescribed for him.

"I remember one day he came to my office and said, 'That elevator girl wants to know why I can't say your name, Doc.' I laughed, 'Why you can pronounce my name, Frank; that's easy.' On his way out he did it, too. Which illustrates what confidence will do in such cases."

Dr. Twitmyer had Tinney begin with the simplest of exercises, pronouncing vowel and consonant combinations, such as "Ba, be, bi, bo and bu." Tinney spent hours going through the alphabet in this way. As long as he took it slowly and carefully, he managed to speak understandably but with the least pressure of excitement or hurry he would again break into incoherence.

Meantime, he could not, apparently, forget his misfortunes. The former Mrs. Tinney, living in Los Angeles, received a number of typed postal cards signed Frank. One read:

"My dear Edna: I fully appreciate your offer to marry me all over again, but honestly I don't want to live in the same city with you. You wanted it (apparently the divorce), you got it. Now sew a button on it. Just like the others. Frank." Above this was typed, "Be sure and take good care of that little fellow."

Through her New York attorneys Mrs. Tinney warned her former husband that if she received any more missives of this sort, she would request Federal prosecution. She was not annoyed further. Tinney is able to write with considerable ease on the typewriter.

Dr. Twitmyer was strongly opposed to the venture at Atlantic City. It is, he believes, far too early for Tinney even to consider a return to the stage. He was afraid of the reaction to the excitement and his fears have been in part justified.

Most of Tinney's old speech difficulties have returned. When this correspondent talked to him recently it was only with the greatest effort that he made himself understood. He says that he quit the act in Atlantic City. When he comes back, he says he wants to come back in big time, without any half-way stops. "I—don't—like—cafes," Tinney says, bringing each word out with painstaking concentration.

CASSADY has still another version of the Atlantic City attempt. He says it was his act and that it was scheduled to run only for a week. It was he who secured the engagement, he says. He is somewhat disgruntled.

"You can't keep on doing things for a man always if he doesn't appreciate it," he says. "I've taken Tinney everywhere, tried to keep him in touch with the theater, tried to get him bookings, but you can't go on doing things for a man if he doesn't appreciate them."

This feeling arises in part, perhaps, because of the fact that while in Atlantic City Tinney got all of the publicity. The New York papers played up his effort to come back. Cassady was ignored.

Mary Nolan, meanwhile, is forging rapidly ahead toward stardom. She has left Tinney and the past far behind. Even her appearance seems to have changed with her change of name. She is more alert, more alive-looking. She appeared recently with John Gilbert in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture, "Thirst," with Clive Brook in "Charming Sinners" and other successful pictures.

But Tinney scarcely remembers her, or the episode that brought about his troubles. All he says is, "No—more—scandals." He sits waiting, rocking patiently back and forth, looking out onto the street.

"I find it is absolutely useless to call in any surgeons to give their opinion about the technic used," Public Prosecutor Flach exclaimed, "and I do not hesitate to say that Dr. Dujarrier did not have the right to do what he did. In spite of his experience, his skill, his reputation, his authority, there is no doubt but that he committed a regrettable mistake. Neither in the name of beauty nor esthetics should he have undertaken a grave operation simply to overcome a slight deformity condemned only by fashion!"

THE prosecutor declared that a surgeon is only permitted to use his knife to heal, to overcome suffering or to prevent death.

"I do not mean that esthetic surgery is wrong. It is permissible to attempt to free a person from terrible ugliness, when there is no danger involved. Who would blame the admirable operations performed on our heroic soldiers who had awful face wounds? But in this case esthetic surgery becomes constructive surgery."

In conclusion he demanded, in the name of the French State, the condemnation of Dr. Dujarrier, who had lowered the dignity of his noble profession.

After several days of reflection the Court handed down a decision condemning the surgeon and ordering him to pay $8000 damages. The judgment follows:

"Whereas, whatever be the skill, the professional standing and the disinterestedness of Dr. Dujarrier, the fact that he undertook an operation involving grave risks on a healthy member, with the sole purpose of correcting the line, without this intervention being required by any therapeutical necessity, or by the wellbeing of the patient, constitutes a serious responsibility on his part.

"Whereas, he undoubtedly committed a mistake according to the principles of common law, and there is no necessity of discussing medical considerations, or calling upon medical men for their views;

"Whereas, this responsibility being admitted, it is of little importance to inquire whether Dr. Dujarrier committed a professional fault or not, during the operation or in the treatment that followed;

"Whereas, if there was no professional fault committed, this only emphasizes the dangerous character of the operation in itself, since it has been shown that the operation ended in an amputation of the limb, and there was even the prospect of a fatal ending, in spite of all the precautions and rules of the medical art."

THE Judges also noted Dr. Dujarrier's plea that he was under a moral necessity to perform the operation because Madame Le Guen had threatened to commit suicide if her line was not trimmed down, and they judged this argument very severely:

"Even if these facts were established, the exaltation of Madame Le Guen must have been such that her free will was obscured; that she was in no condition to give her consent and that her state required a mental specialist rather than a surgeon; in any case, he had no necessity to operate immediately, for the case was not urgent."

The court thereupon awarded Madame Le Guen damages of $8000, which represents more in France than in America. The surgeon has appealed to a higher court, but in all likelihood he will be convicted again, and esthetic surgery will receive a solar plexus blow in France.

In spite of the public prosecutor's statement that the State was not opposed to cosmetic surgery, especially when it was constructive, the Court seemed to go even further and hold that a surgeon would be held responsible for any ill-effects in cases where there is no absolute therapeutical necessity for an operation. In the majority of cases when a person has his face changed about there is no therapeutical necessity, although the person is unable to marry or find employment, and so the beauty surgeons have taken grave alarm.

Dr. Dujarrier is unwilling to discuss the case, but a well-known surgeon who specializes in face cases told me that if the higher courts uphold this decision it will probably mean the end of esthetic surgery.

"HEREAFTER, if the simplest operation for face lifting, trimming the ears, straightening the nose or taking puffs from under the eyes turns out badly we shall be liable for heavy damages," he declared. "It makes no difference if there is a serious motive for such an operation—marriage, employment, happiness. Grim old Judges will find that these reasons are simply based on human vanity, and are not necessary for saving human life. Faced with this state of affairs no surgeon will dare undertake an esthetic operation. He will never know when the patient will turn on him and demand terrific damages."

Pending the higher court's decision the beauty surgeons have literally gone on vacation, and little girls with turned-up noses are quite out of luck.

Fled From a Murder Sentence

also confessed and took a sentence of 30 years in the Joliet Penitentiary. Mahan got 14 years.

With safety assured, it appears Olson gave himself over to brooding over the injustice he had suffered. His $8000 was gone and he was forced to find employment in a factory and move his little family—the Olsons now have a small daughter—into an humble rooming house. The result of this brooding was the suspicion that North must have known about the guilt of Bliss and Mahan long before he disclosed it. Hence the suit for $50,000. What specific evidence he has in support of his charge he refuses to say.

North characterizes the claim as ridiculous. "Information which finally led to the solution of the case came to me for the first time about a week or 10 days after Olson's flight," he says.

"A discussion arose in a family of one of our esteemed citizens, over the flight of Henry Olson, one claiming to be convinced of his guilt by reason of his flight and the other taking the contrary position. This discussion was heard by a girl employed in the home and, after hearing it for some time, the young lady remarked in substance: 'I know that Henry Olson is not guilty.' This citizen came to me first-hand with this information. With this slender clew I began an investigation which resulted in the confession of Bliss and Mahan."

FROM HAIG and HAIG to THE HAGUE

Sam Hellman.

"O," SHUDDERS Minnie Mellish. "I'm afraid."

"Afraid of what?" I demands. "More people are killed in Milwaukee every year by the collapse of warehouses in Finland than are bumped off in airplanes. You'd be safer flying from London to The Hague than a mother'd be in its baby's arms."

"And suppose it isn't safe," horns in Joe Davis. "Do you want to live forever?"

"We were discussing that matter just the other day," says I. "We took a consensus of all the folks who know you and the prevailing opinion was that you'd already lived eight years, no months, no weeks, and six days longer than you should have."

"Personally," remarks Minnie's husband, Ira, "I'm not so hot for flying, either."

"Another guy," sneers Joe, "who promised his mother that he'd die in bed."

"It's not the bed part that intrigues me so," returns Mellish, "but I would like to pass on in one piece. Just an old Spanish custom, you know, that's been in the family for years.

"Somehow or other," he goes on, "I find myself unable to get exhilarated over the idea of being sprayed over the Holland landscape and having the wooden-shoes complain that it's getting so you can't go anywhere around in the Netherlands any more without running into a piece of Mellish."

"Forget it," says I. "You have at least an even chance of being dumped into the North Sea. Anyhow, all these planes are equipped with parachutes, and all you have to do if things go blooey is pull a cord. The 'chute opens and you land as gently as a fall of young dew on a bed of cowslips."

"In the North Sea?" inquires Mellish.

"That's simple," says I. "Call up the guy that manufactured it and give him hob."

WE FINALLY decides to put the flying gag to a vote, and my frau, being with me and Davis on the proposition, we win three to two, with Senator Heflin absent and not voting. That same afternoon we departs for the flying field at Croydon, where a five-seater makes the jump to The Hague every day. When we gets there the pilot, a nervous, worried-looking palook, is fussing around the innards of the bus.

"Boat in good shape?" inquires Mellish, with a pretended sang-froid. As a matter of fact, you can't tell whether the lump in his throat is his Adam's apple or his heart.

"Not so good," returns the sky-scraper. "The engine's missing a little and the feed-pipe's sort of clogged. There's a hole in the gas tank, but I just plugged it up with a bit of waste."

"Here's my handkerchief," says I. "Maybe you've got a busted propeller or a broken cylinder block you'd like to tie up temporary. Or would you rather use some wet tissue paper?"

"Don't worry," says the bird-man. "The machine ought to last through this one trip anyhow. It'll be a feather in my cap if it does."

"Yeh," mutters Mellish, "and a spade in the face for all of us if it doesn't."

"What's that?" asks the misses, pointing to a piece of tubing extending from the front of the pilot's leather coat.

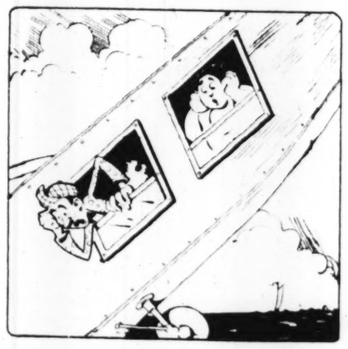
"I have a sort of air bag under it," he explains. "In case I fall into the water I just blow it up and I float."

"You float!" exclaims Ira. "What do we do?"

"That's a matter for you folks to determine," he shrugs. "I'm just the conductor of this bus. I have nothing to do with the passengers after they leave it . . . Let's go!"

Minnie and Ira are all set to back out at the last minute, but before they have a chance we're pushed into the plane by a couple of husky mechanics, and the door is slapped shut on us. The next thing I know we're taxiing across the field and up we go, missing a smoke-stack and a mess of power-cables by an eel's eyelash.

The plane zings upward to about twenty-five hundred, where it's put on an even keel and continued at that height. Below, rivers look like leaks, roads like the ribbons in Guinevere's golden hair, the cities like a huddle of huts in Toyland. I never go up in a plane without thinking of the gal who once flew from Buffalo to Cleveland. At about four thousand feet she turned to the driver and shouted:



It appears to me as the end of everything, including a date to go fishing.

"I just lost a pearl button off my coat. There it is down there!"

"Pearl button, nothing!" yelps the pilot. "That's Lake Erie."

For a couple of hours we have smooth sailing. Then, all of a sudden, the ship drops into space like the well-known and prominent plummet. It appears to me as the end of everything, including a date I'd made with Zeke Zilch to go fishing some day soon. The chauffeur of our tin bird, however, knows his legumes. With some quick shifts at the wheel he brings the falling craft to a halt and in another second is on his regular way again.

"What's the trouble?" quavers Mellish, holding up his frau, who's only fractionally alive.

"Everything oke now?" I asks.

"Yeh," says he, "but I think one of the motors is about played out. Shall I land?"

"Got a place where you can land?" I inquires.

"No," he comes back.

"Then don't," I advise. "Go ahead, feller, but please don't pick any more pockets. You might catch one with a hole in it."

A LITTLE further on we ran into a fog bank and nothing whatever's to be seen underneath. The pilot makes desperate efforts to climb above the screen of pea-green mist, but his luck's not so good. The baby, it seems, is a much better pick-pocket than he is porch-climber.

For hours we plod through the fog, the motorman enlivening the general gloom by taking steep banks that heave us together, making sudden leaps upward to get out into the clear, and otherwise cutting up didoes that make a trip on an Arkansas narrow-gauge accommodation train the last word in the ease and luxury of traveling.

"I think I'm running out of gas," shouts the bird-man.

"Stop at a filling station," suggests Davis, who's been taking the situation calmly.

"Land," orders Mellish.

"Can't," comes back the pilot. "I'm afraid the landing gear's gone."

No sooner is that out of his mouth than the fog clears and below us is a large city.

"That's it," says the bus-driver, and starts circling for a landing. It develops there's nothing wrong with the gear and soon we're safe in the airdrome with our feet on terra cotta.

"Thank goodness!" mumbles Ira. "I thought we'd never reach The Hague alive."

"The Hague!" gasps the aviator. "You folks must have taken the wrong bus. This is Glasgow."

"No wonder the air pockets were tight," says I.

(Don't you really feel that our description of the Netherlands with its dikes and wind-mills and paintings of overstuffed cupids by Rubens has made you love to learn the Lowlands? It's just little pieces like the above that make for a better understanding between Muskegon, Mich., and the wooden-shod folks of the Zuyder Zee, don't you think? Or don't you? Next we will show you Scotland, where you may witness the lavish extravagance of a tag-day in Edinburgh.)

SUN TAN makes Maybelline more necessary than ever!

THE Sun tan complexion due to its darkness, tends to lighten the lashes and to reduce the brilliance of the eyes. Overcome this by furnishing suitable contrast for your eyes, in the form of darker, more luxuriant lashes. Your eyes will then appear vividly brilliant, larger, and your Sun tan complexion will be far lovelier.

But—be sure you darken your lashes with Maybelline, because genuine Maybelline produces the exact, desired effect instantly, harmlessly, and is easy-to-use.

"ammonia diaper"—check it with MENNEN Borated Baby Talcum

Mennen Borated Talcum quenches the "fire" in your baby's skin . . . "Ammonia diaper" scalds the delicate skin of the child starting first with the buttocks and thighs, and creeping up the infant's back. It makes your baby cry, and results in unnecessary fretfulness and frequent night awakenings.

If you will use Mennen Borated Baby Talcum liberally you will check and restrain the ammonia formation and soothe the irritation in the child's skin.

Mennen Baby Talcum contains the correct percentage of boric acid and zinc oxide. And these are combined with other equally essential antiseptic ingredients.

By carefully following the directions on the new Mennen Baby Chart and by the regular use of Mennen Borated Baby Talcum your baby will not alone be free from the painful scald of "ammonia diaper," but will also be saved from the usual rawness and chafing that attacks baby's body—particularly in hot weather.

This unfailing test for BODY ODORS will be sent FREE

THERE is now available without cost a simple way to learn whether you may offend those who come close.

This test together with a liberal supply of SPIC will be sent you FREE. SPIC, you know, is the new scientific discovery which rubbed into armpits, on feet and dusted on the body instantly and unfailingly ends all danger of body odor.

Learn If You Are Safe

Perhaps you need SPIC. Perhaps not. The test we will send you will show whether you should use it. Try it in the privacy of your own home.

A famous chemist found the true cause of body odor to be the acids of perspiration.

SPIC gives protection for an average of 14 hours or more, with each application. It is just a simple, delightful powder, harmless, healing, pleasant to use. You may use it constantly with entire safety. Physicians use it and endorse it. It does not stop perspiration. That would be dangerous. But it absorbs moisture—and changes the acids of perspiration which cause odor to harmless moisture. That is its great secret.

SPIC is patented. There can be no other neutralizer of the sort because the patent is basic—exclusive. Spic alone can use this principle. And without it there is no lasting protection.

This Test is FREE

Perhaps you need SPIC. Perhaps not. There is an easy way to tell—to substitute scientific knowledge for guess work. SPIC is sold by all druggists for 50c. Or clip this special coupon now.

BLENDED "PUFF-BY-PUFF"

31 RARE TOBACCOS are blended into each puff of every Raleigh. This seems to amaze a lot of smokers. It is amazing—and it is so. Raleigh handpicks the finer grades of Turkish, Virginia, and Kentucky (Burley)—then blends the total of 31 excellent tobaccos as subtly . . as skillfully . . as thirty-one trained musicians playing a symphony. That's why we say, in a sort of pardonable slang, that Raleigh is blended "puff-by-puff." Every puff really is a modest but perfect symphony of the 31 distinct leaves.

Phoenix

GLORIFIES

Beautiful Legs

by knitting stockings to the measurements of this glorious

Ziegfeld Girl

Every woman—whether small or tall—will find greater satisfaction in the exquisite new hosiery of Phoenix. Patterned after the proportions of Barbara Newberry, whom Florenz Ziegfeld declares the possessor of America's most beautiful legs—and knitted by a newly invented process—Phoenix stockings distinguish themselves from all others by their exceptional beauty and fit . . . Nearly 300 girls in five of his Broadway productions—each a beauty chosen from thousands—submitted their measurements in Mr. Ziegfeld's recent search for a perfect model for Phoenix. After viewing all the entrants and averaging their proportions, this famous judge of feminine loveliness pronounced Miss Newberry's legs not only ideal but also most typical of the majority of attractive women . . . Following the symmetrical lines of these faultless legs, Phoenix full-fashioned hosiery is now woven by the Accurator process. Patented and used only by Phoenix, this new device, which gauges every thread with the greatest precision, creates stockings of lovely quality, more subtle coloring and better shape. Whether you choose them in sunburn, suntan, flesh, gray or all-occasion shades, you will be charmed with the becomingness of these stockings. Fashion-correct and flattering, they increase the smartness of wearer and costume alike. $1.50, $1.95, $2.95.

Florenz Ziegfeld's booklet, "How I Selected America's Most Beautiful Legs," will be sent free. Address, F. Ziegfeld, Room 501, Ziegfeld Theatre, Fifty-fourth Street and Sixth Avenue, New York City.

A coat of Tan?

Yes—but avoid Burning

Doctors say—
Sunburn—like any burn—is dangerous

Rub on a thin coating of Unguentine before you step out into the glare of the beach. You'll tan smoothly without painful burning.

GLORIOUS SUNSHINE and bright water! Play in the sun during vacation days. A fine coat of tan will make you look and feel better than you ever did before.

But remember—doctors warn you to be always on your guard. Sunshine is vitally necessary for everyone, especially growing children, but too much sun—enough to burn you—is dangerous.

Unguentine permits the beneficial ultra-violet rays to tone up your system while surely preventing them from penetrating too quickly.

Like all burns, sunburn kills the living cells on the skin's surface, and from the destroyed skin area spread poisonous waste products through your system.

Severe cases show all the distressful symptoms of a deep burn—a high fever, a feeling of weakness, extreme nervousness.

Just a few hours in the hot sun may lead to long, wretched days in bed. Even the short while you sit on the beach after your swim may end in sore, blistered shoulders and arms. Your clothes hurt with every movement, and nights become one long torture.

All this is needless. At the first sight of redness use plenty of Unguentine, the famous antiseptic surgical dressing, standard in 8 out of 10 hospitals for all burns.

Get a tube of Unguentine today, and have it ready. Take it to the beach and on your vacation. Always keep a tube in your auto kit. At your druggist's, 50¢. The Norwich Pharmacal Company, Norwich, N. Y.

Don't rely on ineffective lotions—or other cosmetics with no healing power. The antiseptic oils in Unguentine soothe the burned tissues.

UNGUENTINE SOAP, bland and pure, is the perfect soap for tender, sunburned skin. And because of its Unguentine content it rapidly clears up blemishes.

YOU HOLD BEAUTY IN YOUR HANDS

Many enemies beset your skin
–but your own hands can conquer them

This new Du Barry Hand Principle brings the Beauty Salon to your home

That naturally lovely fresh skin of yours! Winds roughen it . . . suns burn it . . . fretting and fatigue etch their hateful lines upon it.

But you yourself . . . right in your own home . . . with your own two capable hands . . . can revive its freshness . . . can smooth away the frown ridges between the eyes . . . can bring back the rosy glow to cheeks grown sallow . . . can close up those unattractive, enlarged pores!

For now there comes to you the new Du Barry Beauty preparations of Richard Hudnut—creams, lotions, oils and astringents employing rare, never-before-used ingredients—preparations such as are used in the finest beauty salons . . . but especially planned for the woman who has little or no cosmetic knowledge and massage skill.

And how quickly your grateful skin responds with new loveliness!

The many ills the skin is heir to . . . and the specific application of each Du Barry preparation . . . are completely explained in our handbook. It is yours for the asking . . . at the shop where you purchase Du Barry preparations, or by filling in the coupon.

Do you know why H&K Coffee is Vacuum Packed? Because in no other way is it possible for you to obtain the full flavor and strength of any coffee. Packed in any other manner 50% of the essential qualities have escaped within ten hours after roasting and gradually continue to drift away until, as is often the case, all you have bought is merely "grounds" for complaint. Hundreds of thousands have come to realize these facts. That is why the sales of V acked H&K Coffee antly to grow.

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—A spectacular advance of nearly 12 points in United States Steel common, which touched a new high record at 229¾, featured the upward rice movement in today's stock rket. More than a dozen of cks were pushed up to new gh records for the year. The pidity of the advance inspired fit-taking by cautious traders, hich accounted for several soft nts scattered throughout the list, prices generally closed higher th Adams Express showing a net in of 32 points and a long list others up 2 to 12 points.

Time Money Eases.
